PREDICTS A TWO YEARS' WAR

United States Colonel Gives Impressions of the Aisne Battle.

Washington October 17.—Dead men and horses heaped up by the thousand, lie putrifying on the battle fields of the Aisne, Colonel Webb C. Haynes, U. S. A., son of former President Hayes, declared to-day. Hayes is just back from observing the world war, and expects soon to give President Wilson a personal message from the active burgomaster of Louvain, he declared after visiting the White House.

"When I left Havre on September 27," he said to-day, "the allies were fearful that they would not be able to penetrate to the German lines through the mass of putrifying men and horses on the battlefields, which the combatants seem not to heed about burying. I don't see how they could pass through those fields. The stench is horrible, and the idea of climbing over the bodies must be revolting even to brave soldiers."

Hayes has been on the firing line; he has visited the sacked city of Louvain as the guest of the Germans in an armoured car; he has been in Aix-La-Chapelle to see the havoc of war there ;and has seen some of the fighting in the historic Aisne struggle.

"It is a sausage grinder," he declared." "On one side are the French and the allies apparently willing to sacrifice their last man in the defence of France; on the other are the Germans seemingly prodigal of their millions of men and money, and throwing man after man into the war."

Hayes predicted a two years' war.

"There can be but one outcome but it will be a long time ending," he said. "England won't begin to really fight until the spring."

"What about the alleged atrocities in Belgium?" he was asked.

"Well, war is hell, that's about the only proper answer I can give you. The real tragic part of the whole war is Belgium. Its people are wonderful people—clean, decent, respectable. What this nation should do is to concentrate its efforts to aiding the women and children of Belgium. This help for the hospitals is not so much needed, but the fate of these poor Belgians is really patheic."

The colonel declared peace talk at this time is useless.

"We must keep hands off this point—we can do no good," he declared. "We will merely stir up trouble for ourselves."

Asked for a brief description of what he saw along the battle line, Hayes declared: "The battle front these days is far different from what it used to be. There are very few men to be seen, especially no guns. All are concealed. Shrapnel flies through the air and bursts. That is the scene most of the time. In the hand to hand fighting bayonets are used much by the French while the Turcos use knives."

"Shall you go back?" Hayes was asked.

"Does anybody wish to visit a slaughter house a second time?" he said in conclusion.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 17.—The French government has ordered in this country for the earliest possible shipment 500,000 reels of barbed wire, according to information given out here. This order it was said would be filled by the Pittsburgh Steel Co., of this city, and the Sharon Hoop Co., at Sharon. Twenty-five thousand tons of steel will be used in the manufacture of the wire which the French will use for defensive purposes upon their battlefields.

STRICT MEASURES AGAINST DISEASE

Half a dozen children were sent home from the Central School this morning, as their condition indicated that they might develop diphtheria before many days. They are not actually suffering from or showing any symptoms of diphtheria, but in connection with this disease it is recognized that while not actually in the crip of the disease children may yet be carrying diphtheria germs that are infectious and might spread to other children.

To guard against this every public and separate school in the city is being very closely watched, and every pupil is examined for signs of diphtheria. The fact that six from the Central school have already been sent home shows that the precautionary measures are strict, in that none of those sent home are actually suffering from the disease. It is pointed out, however, that it is an unwise course for parents to withdraw their children from school, for under the strict supervision they are safeguarded from infection in a way that they cannot be any other place, even in the home, without actual continuous medical attendance. As they are guarded against infection, and as the outbreak of diphtheria will be noticed and treated at once if they are attending school, the authorities say that the safest place for the children just now is in the strictly supervised school room. The children that have been sent home will be quarantined until the authorities are satisfied they are not developing diphtheria, and are not still likely to infect other pupils.

Medical Health Officer McPherson said to The Examiner to-day, there have been only eight cases of diphtheria in the city.

WEDDING BELLS

COSTELLO—O'CONNOR.

A quiet but fashionable wedding was solemnized on Tuesday, October 13th, at St. Martin's Church, Enniamore, by Rev. M. F. Fitzpatrick, when Miss Nellie O'Connor, daughter of Mr. Owen O'Connor became the bride of Mr. Daniel Costello.

The bride looked charming in a gown of Duchess satin with lace trimmings and work, and a white hat with willow mount.. Miss Lillian O'Connor, who attended her sister, was attired in cream silk and wore a white hat with plumes. The groom was supported by his brother, Mr. John Costello.

During the mass, Mr. Joseph O'Reilly, cousin of the groom, sang "Ave Maria," and during the signing of the register, Miss D. Crough rendered that beautiful solo, "O Boad of Love."

After the ceremony the bridal party drove to the home of the bride, where a sumptuous repast was served. A number of toasts were proposed and responded to. During the afternoon music was provided by Messrs. John and Joseph O'Connor, assisted by Mrs. Joseph O'Reilly.

Mr. and Mrs. Costello left on the evening train for Toronto and Rochester, and on their return will reside in Peterborough.

Mrs. Costello travelled in a neat tailor-made suit of brown and wore a hat to match.

Deceased was 28 years of age, and resided all his life in Peterborough. He was identified for a considerable period with the Cordage Company here, and was considered a valuable employee by those in authority. HIS SISTER'S HUSBAND WAS ON THE "HAWKE"

A Letter From One of the Royal Engineers to his Brother in Peterborough

Mr. C. H. Burrell, of 562 Homewood Avenue, in this City, has received a letter from his brother, who is serving with the Royal Engineers, in the Old Country. The husband of Mr. Burrill's sister was on the ill-fated "Hawke," and so far it is not known whether he is among those saved or whether he has been lost.

Dear Brother,—I have been waiting to know the ships' names. The naval people will not let us know where they are. That is what the Germans want to know They are very uneasy about our torpedo flotilla. Sarah's husband is on the "Hawke."

Bill left the service the week before the war broke out, after twenty-six years, and is now employed in the War Office.

We are very busy here with the troops. We are guarding all the bridges nd tunnels in England, and we are doing sentry duty in the gas works at night, from 6 p.m. to 6 a.m. They are arresting at the rate of one hundred Germans a day in England. The—!

We are recruiting very fast since the war broke out; nearly 400,000 have joined. There is an enormous number of troops all over England, alongside the railway lines and near stations. Through Sittingbourne 250,000 Russians passed from Scotland for France. I got this from a man employed in the War Office, and 500,000 Russians came by water. For two weeks the London and North Western Railway, which runs from Scotland was closed to the public. Hundreds of trains run through the nights with blinds pulled down and lights out.

Things looked very queer here at one time, but are bright now. The Canadians are coming, as well as 70,000 Indians, with money and Generals. There are five Indian princes among them an dthe Moroccans want to fight.

The Germans have caught a fox! The Britons and the French can't praise the Belgians enough for the plucky way they held up the Germans, and it was our turn next; and the French do not know how to praise us too much. Lord Kitchener, as well as our lot, got there in time to save France from being well cut about. The Germans tried hard a lot of times to cut through our lines. But the case is altered now. We are driving them back; flying in front of the British. The Kaiser is telling a lot of lies about the British and Belgians, as to the way the former have served the Belgians, who had no chance to do any wrong to them. It is the other way round. The Germans have been doing the most horrible things to the Belgians and to the British. He (the Kaiser) has been sending his lies to the United States. The Yanks will have to be careful what they are doing. There are a lot of Germans in the States, and they tell the Statsers that if Britain goes under they will be the next to go. . . . We have driven the enemy back twenty-five miles. We fought like lions. . . . . .

From your loving brother,
C. H. Burrell.

SWIMMING COLLARS FOR MEN.

Admiralty Provides Device To Save Lives In Naval Disasters

LONDON, Oct. 20.—That the Admiralty is fully alive to the necessity of providing a means for the crews of warships that strike mines or are torpedoed by submarines to escape drowning, since other warships are prohibited from going to their assistance, is shown by the announcement yesterday that the Admiralty is arranging for a general supply of swimming collars to be distributed to the officers and men of the fleet. The men are instructed that the collar shall be carried on their person when they are awake and kept inflated and near each individual when he is asleep.

HELD AT RIVER SAN

PRZEMYSL NO USE

LONDON, Oct. 20.—The Times has the following from Mr. Stanley Washburn, its correspondent at Lmow (formerly Lemberg, Galicia): Fighting goes on in West Galicia without cessation. The cannonade on the River San continues. All attempts of the enemy to cross the river have failed lamentably. The Austrians have made attempts at various points. At first their artillery fiercely shelled the right bank, after which the infantry approached the river, but the Russian shrapnel fire inflicted heavy losses, as the corpses floating downstream to the Vistula and beyond to Sandomir and Ivangorod testify.

The German General Staff directed the operations, and also the defence of Przemysl, before which the fighting goes on day and night, without ceasing even for a minute.

The Germans are conducting the defence with extreme energy, and the fortress is apparently well supplied with ammunition. The Russians are exerting a persistent pressure, punctuated by sudden night attacks, by which several strong forts already have been captured. These tactics palpably disturb the defenders, whose searchlights throughout the night subject the surrounding space to a ceaseless scrutiny. Meanwhile the retention of Przemysl confers no advantage of the enemy or of the bridges over the San and stands before the iron wall which is now offered by the Russian investing army.

The Austro-Germans struggle stubbornly and despairingly. Hostile collisions are spreading, and the huge strategical front grows steadily larger, like the extended front of French operations. From Sandomir to the Carpathians savagely roar the thousands of guns. Corpses are borne on the waters of the San, and cast up on its verdant banks at points up the Vistula.

Advising is easier than helping.—Rochefoucauld.

ADVANCE BROKEN

AT WALL OF METZ

LONDON, Oct. 20. — With Lille again in the hands of the allies, the situation on the French fighting line has assumed a distinctly favorable aspect. At Chaulnes a counter-attack by the German right wing was thrown back decisively, and the Kaiser's forces fled in a state bordering on panic. The Belgians have also held the Germans at a point east of Dixmude. West of Roulers the Germans were compelled to evacuate long lines of trenches, and the town is now occupied by Franco-British troops.

Unless all indications prove futile the German advance along the coast to Dunkirk is effectively checked. Reports from Dunkirk early yesterday morning stated that the sound of heavy fighting from the sea was plainly audible. It is believed certain that British naval forces are co-operating in the movement to stay the Kaiser's forward movement in this zone. Later in the day a despatch from northern France said that British torpedo-boat destroyers had penetrated the canals commanding the district in which the most westerly engagement was being fought, and the British cruisers were also firing on the invaders from the open sea.

The official communique of the French War Office yesterday afternoon said: "In Belgium the heavy artillery of the enemy has cannonaded, but without result, the front from Nieuport to Vladsloe, to the east of Dixmude.

"The forces of the allies, and notably the Belgian army, have not only repulsed further attacks on the part of the Germans, but have advanced as far as Roulers.

"On our left wing, between the River Lys and the canal of La Bassee, we have advanced in the direction of Lille. There has been very stubborn fighting on the front from La Bassee to Albain and St. Nazaire. We are advancing from house to house in these localities.

"To the north and to the south of Arras our troops have been fighting without respite for more than ten days, and with a perseverance and a spirit which never for a moment has been relaxed.

"In the region of Chaulnes we have repulsed a strong counter-attack delivered by the enemy and have won some ground.

"On the centre there is nothing to report.

"On our right wing, in Alsace, to the west of Colmar, our advance posts are on the line between Bonhomme, Paris and Sulzern. To the south we still occupy Thann."

German reinforcements have been brought up at all points along the right wing of the invaders' army, which now stretches from the Belgian coast to the elbow at Roye, where the line turns directly eastward and runs in the general direction of Metz. These reinforcements are variously estimated at 300,000 to 400,000 men. Some reports even place the number of fresh troops at 1,000,000 men of all arms, but the latter figures are believed exorbitant. It is known that they are drawn from the Landstrum exclusively.

Advices from Belgium declare that Ostend, Bruges and Blankenberghe are held by the smallest of garrisons, and that throughout the conquered kingdom every man that can be spared has been rushed southward. Admiral Von Tirpitz is said to be in Antwerp, which coincides with previous reports that he expected to personally direct naval operations against Britain which are "to be launched the last of this month."

With the capture of Armentieres Sunday and the fall of Lille yesterday to the allied armies there can be no question that operations in northern France have received a new impetus and are inclining steadily to the side of the French and British. It is significant that at every point counter-attacks by the Germans have uniformly failed to accomplish their purpose. That the Kaiser is stubbornly sacrificing many lives to maintain an untenable position a little longer seems apparent.

From La Bassee and Albain to St. Nazaire the allies are waging a terrible hand-to-hand conflict with the Germans, the fighting having resolved into an individual contest for supremacy. Every hedge, house and overturned wagon is a new fortress, and as the Germans fall back they take a heavy toll of their pursuers.

At Chaulnes the allied artillery almost decimated the German columns participating in a frontal counter attack, the advantage being followed up by an infantry charge of French and British troops which completely upset the advance of the foe.

The situation along the centre remains quiet, with both sides content to hold their own, and neither able to gain important advantage over the other. Defensive works in this zone are very complete, and it is improbable that a major operation will be attempted by either French or Germans until the fighting on the east and west becomes better defined.

The French officials are extremely reticent concerning operations against the German crown prince and the new movement which seems to threaten the safety of Metz. It is also apparent that fighting is under way around Belfort, but no information comes through as to the extent of the engagement or the probable outcome. It is said on very good authority that a French army is even now assailing the outer line of Me[illegible] and that artillery will soon be playing on the walls of that renowned stronghold.

St. Mihiel continues in the hands of the German crown prince, but the French have driven his line still further back on both the east and west of that town, and his retreat toward Luxemburg is imminent.

Summing up the entire situation, and taking into account the position of the allies from the Belgian-French coast to the Swiss border, it may be said that the outlook is more favorable than at any time since the Germans crossed into French territory. It is apparent that their first onslaught has come a cropper, that the new drive at Dunkirk and Calais is temporarily checkmated and will most probably be completely frustrated, and that the continued success of the allies at widely-separated points, with the new advance toward Metz and the dangerous quandary of the German crown prince has seriously imperilled the whole German scheme of conquest.

Getting Out of the Rut.

The merchant who conducts his business according to the method of the last century is not giving his customers the service they are entitled to. The spirit of the new century is to do more than to merely turn goods over at a profit. It is to really earn that profit by giving real service, accommodation and reliable advice. The modern merchant must know his goods thoroughly and what is best adapted to every household requirement.

That class of merchant invariably advertises. That is the one sure test of his being abreast of the times.

BY-LAWS CARRIED

Hydro Radials Sweep Municipalities in York County With Only Two Opposed to Them

START AT ONCE

TORONTO, Oct. 20.—With the exception of the town of Newmarket and the Township of Uxbridge all the municipalities along the route of the proposed Toronto and northeastern district Hydro-radial gave substantial majorities for the bylaw submitted yesterday, which empowers their municipal councils to enter into an agreement with the provincial commission for the construction and operation of the road. According to the terms of the bylaw each municipality will issue debentures covering the proportion of cost for which it will be responsible, and these debentures will be deposited with the commission as security in financing the undertaking.

Sir Adam Beck does not anticipate that it will be necessary for the municipalities to make any actual payments, as interest and sinking fund charges will be amply covered by revenue received from the railway and the sale of power along the route of the radial.

Now that the electors have endorsed the bylaw it only remains for the municipal councils to give it the third reading and the commission will then be free to start the construction of the line.

Some subdivisions had not been heard from at a late hour last night, but these are not likely to make any serious alteration in the result.

BRITAIN FEELS SAFE.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—General satisfaction and a feeling of security in the eventual outcome are expressed by yesterday morning's London papers in their meagre comments on the long report of Sir John French, the British commander-in-chief in France, on the battles of the Marne and the Aisne. The desire of the censor, expressed a month ago, that the papers refrain from extended comment or analysis of the situation in the French campaign, has prevented criticism, constructive, or otherwise, on the report. That their report added little to the knowledge already possessed by the British people, of the progress of the battles, is reflected in the journals. Comment on the street and in the clubs are apparently to the effect that the people are satisfied with the strategy of Sir John and that they have no feeling of nervousness as to the final result.

Turkey Retains German Crews.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 20.—(Via London.)—The Porte has declined to discharge the German crews of the cruisers Goeben and Breslau, which have been in Turkish waters since early in the hostilities, and which are said to have been sold by Germany to the Turkish Government.

This reply was given in answer to the British representations regarding the continued presence of Germans on board these two vessels.

FOOD SHORTAGE SERIOUS.

LONDON, Oct. 20. — Baron Lambert, representing the Belgian Government, arrived in London from Brussels, and yesterday conferred with the Belgian Minister here concerning the movement to send food from London to the Belgian capital.

The shortage of food in Brussels is very serious. The supply of flour has become exhausted, and there is great need that it be replenished immediately. Extensive plans are under way for wholesale shipments of food through the co-operation of the Belgian Minister and the British Foreign Office.

Much food, already in cases, is on the London docks ready for shipment to Belgium when the international tangle concerning its movement is straightened out.

Skin Trouble On The Scald

Skin Dried and Cracked and Hair Fell Out—Cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Eczema is annoying and distressing at any time, but doubly so when it gets into the scalp and causes the hair to fall out. Here is a grateful letter from a lady who was cured by using Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mrs. Hector Currie, Tobermory, Ont., writes:—"I was cured of a disagreeable skin disease of the scalp by using Dr. Chase's Ointment. The trouble started with itching and pain in the scalp, the skin would get dry and crack, and at times would bleed, and the hair would fall out. I tried three doctors without benefit, and suffered for three years. Reading in the almanac about Dr. Chase's Ointment, I began its use, and am now completely cured. The hair has grown again, and I am as well as I ever was. You are at liberty to use this letter, for I am glad to recommend so excellent a treatment.

Dr. Chase's Ointment has no rival as a cure for itching skin disease.

"DARKNESS AND DAWN"

By Geo. Allan England

"Dearly beloved, we are gathered here to join together this man and this woman in holy matrimony—reverently, discreetly, advisedly, soberly. In this holy estate these two persons present now come to be joined."

His hand tightened upon her hand, for he felt her trembling. But bravely she smiled up at him and upon her hair the golden sunlight made an aureole.

The voice rose in its soul-shaking question—slow and powerful:

"Wilt thou have this woman to be thy wedded wife, to live together in the holy estate of matrimony? Wilt thou love her, comfort her, honour, and keep her in sickness and in health, and keep thee only unto her, so long as ye both shall live?"

Allan's "I will!" was as a hymn of joy upon the morning air.

"Wilt thou have this man to be thy wedded husband, to live together in the holy estate of matrimony? Wilt thou serve him, love, honour, and keep him in sickness and in health, and keep thee only unto him, so long as ye both shall live?"

She answered proudly, bravely:

"I will!"

Then the man chorused the voice and said:

"I, Allan, take thee, Beatrice, to be my wedded wife, to have ve and to hold from this day forward for better, for worse, for richer, for poorer, in sickness and in health to love and to cherish, till death us do part, and thereto I plight thee my troth."

Her answer came, still led by the commanding voice, like an antiphony of love:

"I, Beatrice, take thee, Allan, to be my wedded husband, to have and to hold from this day forward for better, for worse, for richer, for poorer, in sickness and in health to love and to cherish, till death us do part, and thereto I give thee my troth!"

Already Allan had drawn from his little finger the plain gold ring he had worn there so many centuries. Upon her finger he placed the ring and kissed it, and, following the voice, he said:

"With this ring I thee wed, and with all my worldly goods I thee endow. In the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Amen."

Forest, river, sky and golden sunlight greeted them as they stood on the broad porch of the cathedral, and the clear song of many birds, unafraid in the virgin wilderness, made music to their ears such as most have greeted the primal day.

"My wife!" he whispered.

The satin of her skin from breast to brow surged into sudden flame. Her eyes closed and between her eager lips the breath came fast.

"Oh, Allan—husband! I feel—I hear—"

CHAPTER IX.

AT SETTLEMENT CLIFFS.

Ten days later the two lovers—now man and wife—were back again at the eastern lip of the Abyss. With them on the biplane they had brought the phonograph and records, all securely wraped in oiled canvas, the same which had enveloped the precious objects in the leaden chest.

They made a camp, which was to serve them for a while as headquarters in their tremendous undertaking of bringing the Merucaans to the surface, and here carefully stored their treasure in a deep cleft of rock secure from rain and weather.

They had not revisited the bungalow on the return trip. The sight of their little home and garden, now totally devastated, they knew would only sadden them unnecessarily.

"Let it pass, dearest, as a happy memory that was and is no more," Stern cheered the girl as heheld her in his arms the first night of their stay in the new camp, and as together they watched the purple haze of sunset beyond the chasm. "Some day, perhaps, we may go back and once more restroe Hope Villa and live there again, but for the present many other and far more weighty matters press. It will be wisest for a while to leave the East alone. Too many of the Horde are still left there. Here, west of the Ohio River Valley, they don't seem to have penetrated—and what's more, they never shall! Just now we must ignore them—though the day of reckoning will surely come! We've got our hands full for a while with the gigantic task ahead of us. It's the biggest and the hardest that one man and one woman ever tackled since the beginning of time!"

She drew his head down and kissed him, and for a little while they kept the silence of perfect comradeship. But at last she questioned:

"You've got it all worked out at last, Allan. You know just the steps to take? One false move—"

"There shall be no false moves. Reason, deliberation, care will solve this problem like all the others. Given some fifteen hundred people, at a depth of five hundred miles, and given an aeroplane and plenty of time—"

"Yes, of course, they can be brought to the surface. But after that, what? The dangers are tremendous! The patriarch died at the first touch of sunlight. We can't afford to take chances with the rest!"

"I've planned on all that. Our first move must be to locate a rocky ledge, a cave, or something of the sort, where the transplanting process can be carried out. There mustn't be any exposure to the actual daylight for a long time after they're on the surface. The details of food and water have all got to be arranged, too. It means work, work, work! God, what work! But—it's our task, Beta, all our own. And I glory in it. I thank Heaven for it—a man's-size labor! And if we're strong and brave enough, patient and wise enough, we're bound to win."

"Win? Of course we'll win!" she answered, her faith in him touching the sublime. "We must! The life of the whole world's at stake!"

Night came, and redder glowed the firelight in the gloom. They spoke of life, of love, of destiny; and over them seemed to brood the mystery of all that was to be.

The very purpose of the universe enwrapped itself about their passion, and the untroubled stars kept vigils till the dawn.

Daylight called them to begin the epic campaign they had mapped out—the rescue of a race.

After a visit to the patriarch's grave, which they decked anew with blossoms and fresh leaves, they prepared for the journey in search of a suitable temporary home for the Folk.

Nine o'clock found them once more on the wing. Stern laid a southerly course along the edge of the Abyss. He and Beatrice had definitely decided that the new home of humanity was not to be the distant regions of the East, involving so long and perilous a journey, but rather some location in the vast, warm, central plain of what had once been the United States.

They judged they were now somewhere in the one-time State of Indiana, not far from Indianapolis. So much warmer had the climate grown that for some months to come at least the Folk could without doubt accustom themselves to the change from the hot and muggy atmosphere of the Abyss to the semitropic heat.

The main object now was to discover suitable caves near a good water supply, where by night the Folk could prosecute their accustomed fisheries. Agriculture and the care of domestic animals by daylight would have to be postponed for some time, possibly for a year or more. Above all, the health of the prospective colonists must be safeguarded.

It was not until nearly nightfall of the next day, and after stops had been made at the ruins of two considerable but unidentified towns—for fuel, as well as to fit up an electric searchlight and hooded lamps to illuminate the instruments in the Abyss—that the explorers found what they were seeking.

About half-past five that afternoon they sighted a very considerable river, flowing westward down a rugged and irregular valley, in the direction of the chasm.

"This can't be the Ohio," judged Stern. "We must have long since passed its bed, now probably dried up. I don't remember any such hilly region as this in the old days along the Mississippi Valley. All these formations must be the result of the cataclysm. Well, no matter, just so we find what we're after."

"Where are we now?" she asked, peering downward anxiously. "Over what State—can you tell?"

"Probably Tennessee or northern Alabama. See the change in vegetation. No conifers here, but many palms and fern trees, and new and strange growths. Fertile isn't the name for it! Once we clear some land here, crops will grow themselves! I don't think we'll do better than this, Beta. Shall we land and see?"

A quarter hour later in the Pauillac had safely deposited them on a high, rocky plateau about half a mile back from the edge of the riven canon. Stern, in his eagerness, was all for cave-hunting that very evening, but the girl restrained him.

"Not so impatient, dear!" she cautioned. "'Too fast arrives as tardy as too slow!' To-morrow's time enough."

"Ruling me with quotations from Shakespeare, eh?" he laughed, with a kiss. "All right, have your way—Mrs. Stern!"

She laughed, too, at this, the first time she had heard her new name.

So they made camp and postponed further labours till daylight again.

Morning found them early astir and at work. Together they traversed the tropic-seeming woods, aflame with brilliant flowers, dank with ferns and laced with twining lianas.

In the treetops—strange trees, fruit laden—parrakeets and flashing green and crimson birds of paradise disturbed the little monkeyfolk that chattered at the intruders. Once a coral-red snake whipped away, hissing, but not quick enough to dodge a ball from Stern's revolver.

Stern viewed the ugly, triangular head with apprehension. Well he knew that venom dwelt there, but he said nothing. The one and only chance of successfully transplanting the Folk must be to regions warm as these. All dangers must be braved a time till they could grow acclimatized to the upper air. After that—but the vastness of the future deterred even speculation. Perils were inevitable. The more there were to overcome the greater the victory.

"On to the cliffs!" said he, clasping the girl's hand in his own and making a path for her.

Thus presently they reached the edge of the canon.

"Magnificent!" cried Beatrice as they came out on the overhang of the rock wall. "With these fruitful woods behind, that river in front, and these natural fortifications for our home, what more could we want?"

"Nothing except caves," Stern answered. "Let's call this New Hope River, eh? And the cliffs?"

"Settlement Cliffs!" she exclaimed.

"Done! Well, now let's see."

For the better part of the morning they explored the face of the palisade. Its height, they estimated, ranged from two or three hundred feet, shelving down in rough terraces to the rocky debris through and beyond which foamed the strong current of New Hope River, a stream averaging about two hundred yards in width.

Up-current a broader pool gave promise of excellent fishing. It overflowed into violent rapids, with swift, white waters noisily cascading.

"There, incidentally," Stern remarked, with the practical perception of the engineer, "there's power enough, when properly harnessed, to light a city and to turn machinery ad libitum. I don't see how we could better this site, do you?"

"Not if you think there are good chances for cave-dwellings," she made answer.

"From what we've seen already, it looks promising. Of course, there'll be a deal of work to do; but there are excellent possibilities here. First-rate."

Fortune seemed bent on favouring them. The limestone cliff, fantastically eroded, offered a score of shelters, some shallow and needing to be walled up in front, others deep and tortuous. All was in utter confusion.

Stern saw that the terraces would have to be blasted and levelled, roads and stairs built along the face of the rock and down to the river, stalacites and stalagmites cut away, chambers fashioned, and a vast deal of labour done; but the rough framework of a cliff colony undeniably existed here. He doubted whether it would be possible to find a more favourable site without long and tedious travels.

Don't Merely "Stop" a Cough

Stop the Thing that Causes It and the Cough will Stop Itself

A cough is really one of our best friends. It warns us that there is inflammation or obstruction in a dangerous place. Therefore, when you get a bad cough don't proceed to dose yourself with a lot of drugs that merely "stop" the cough temporarily by deadening the throat nerves. Treat the cause—heal the inflamed membranes. Here is a home-made remedy that gets right at the cause and will make an obstinate cough vanish more quickly than you ever thought possible.

Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) in a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. This gives you 16 ounces of the most pleasant and effective remedy you ever used, at a cost of only 54 cents. No bother to prepare. Full directions with Pinex.

It heals the inflamed membranes so gently and promptly that you wonder how it does it. Also loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough and stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol, and is famous the world over for its healing effect on the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

MRS. LYON'S ACHES AND PAINS

Have All Gone Since Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Terre Hill, Pa.—"Kindly permit me to give you my testimonial in favor of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. When I first began taking it I was suffering from female troubles for some time and had almost all kinds of aches—pains in lower part of back and in sides, and pressing down pains. I could not sleep and had no appetite. Since I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound the aches and pains are all gone and I feel like a new woman. I cannot praise your medicine too highly."—Mrs. AUGUSTUS LYON, Terre Hill, Pa.

It is true that nature and a woman's work has produced the grandest remedy for woman's ills that the world has ever known. From the roots and herbs of the field, Lydia E. Pinkham, forty years ago, gave to womankind a remedy for their peculiar ills which has proved more efficacious than any other combination of drugs ever compounded, and today Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is recognised from coast to coast as the standard remedy for woman's ills.

In the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., are files containing hundreds of thousands of letters from women seeking health—many of them openly state over their own signatures that they have regained their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; and in some cases that it has saved them from surgical operations.

WHAT THIN FOLKS SHOULD DO TO GAIN WEIGHT

Physician's Advice for Thin, Undeveloped Men and Women

Thousands of people suffer from excessive thinness, weak nerves and feeble stomachs who, having tried advertised flesh-makers, food-fads, physical culture stunts and rub-on creams, resign themselves to life-long shinniness and think nothing will make them fat. Yet their case is not hopeless. A recently discovered regenerative force makes fat grow after years of thinness, and is also unequalled for repairing the waste of sickness or faulty digestion and for strengthening the nerves. This remarkable discovery is called Sargol. Six strength-giving, fat-producing elements of acknowledged merit have been combined in this peerless preparation, which is endorsed by eminent physicians and used by prominent people everywhere. It is absolutely harmless, inexpensive and efficient.

A month's systematic use of Sargol should produce flesh and strength by correcting faults of digestion and by supplying highly concentrated fats to the blood. Increased nourishment is obtained from the food eaten, and the additional fats that thin people need are provided. Leading druggists supply Sargol and say there is a large demand for it.

While this new preparation has given splendid results as a nerve-tonic and vitalizer, it should not be used by nervous people unless they wish to gain at least ten pounds of flesh.

PICTURE a Western mining town in its lawless days. It boasts four storekeepers—three oldtimers and one newcomer. Imagine that Merchant No. 4—the new man—has somehow managed to take away a lot of trade from the others. He is afraid they may try to even matters by attempting to run him out of town, so he buys a revolver and naturally becomes overbearing. The only thing for the others to do is to carry "irons." The newcomer now faces a much greater danger than before he "heeled" himself. It is a question if his competitors would have used force to put him out of business if he had not disclosed his own readiness for trouble.

By his own act the fourth merchant created bad feeling, likely to break out at any minute. Armed, he finds his enemies also ready. Worse, he is faced by a combine of three against one. So he sends away and hires a couple of gunmen. Four concerns, supporting eight gunmen besides their usual selling force. At best, they are no honor to the community; they do not increase its productive powers. Gunmen are gunmen the world over. When they cannot fight each other they resort to beating up innocent citizens.

Now, under such conditions, what would the community demand? First, eliminating the gunmen. Then, establishing a state of trade that does not have to be protected by revolvers at the cost of the welfare of the entire community. And it would not be surprising if, deep down in their hearts, those who work for the man who first introduced the gunmen were willing to work without jumping for cover everytime a box accidentally crashed to the floor. Nervousness in business is a very poor asset.

On a large scale this is exactly the present situation in the European war. The fight started ostensibly because Austria sent an unacceptable note to Servia and Russia refused to stand by and see its Slavonic ally crushed. But the profound reason for war was the vital necessity for deciding if militarism is to continue and grow or whether European nations can arrive at an arrangement of reasonable expenditure for national defence.

The pace in European armaments was set by the Germans in the middle eighties, when that nation showed it intended to make a second raid on France. The attempt was frustrated by Russia, but it proved that the peace of Europe could be maintained only by opposing the Triple Alliance with a force equally as strong. The preparations that began in 1885 have proved in 1914 to be useful to the Allies.

Europe has paid a terrible price for peace, and none has paid more heavily than Germany. This price has not been so much expressed in dollars and cents as in social conditions which have seared the very soul of the German empire, a nation whose genius has entitled it to a better fate than that by which it is apparently confronted. Germany is a poor country. Except by the most extraordinary methods it could not have created in less than two generations an army powerful enough to wage war against the whole of Europe.

Germany held an honorable place in the councils of civilized nations, a position of which her sons may well have been proud.

No territorial expansion was needed to give Germany rights equal to other nations.

National honor did not demand arming to the teeth.

Her trade expansion was hampered rather than promoted by the eternal talk of German aggression, German system of armed peace, "mailed fists" and "shining armor."

Germany's best foreign markets outside of the United States were in Russia, England, France and Belgium. Trade in none of them was promoted by any conviction that every trading German was a potential enemy of the country in which he was trying to make a living.

German interests were not enhanced by any necessity for maintaining, on a permanent war footing among only 65,000,000 people, a standing army equal to that of Russia, a nation of 160,000,000 population.

Germany has paid for all this—as every nation must pay where militarism is carried to excess—by the decreasing birth rate [illegible]

What, then, is Germany fighting for? To maintain a feudal aristocracy that it despises, yet which exists on the hunger of the people? Or to maintain an aristocracy of officers who are insulted if invited to sit at a table with a merchant or a Jew, unless provided with marriageable daughters? Is Germany fighting for the right to eat horseflesh because burdensome taxes force the cost of life much higher than wages? Or is it to see other nations, supposing France and Belgium conquered, submitting to the same treatment?

The best a German can tell you is that he is fighting to protect his Fatherland from other nations. To a certain extent he is right. Germany must be protected now, because it is vital to the interests of every other European nation to crush German militarism—which Prussia has made synonymous with Germany—lest it spread to all the rest of the world.

For what is France fighting? The idea of revanche for the loss of Alsace and Lorraine has been practically as dead in France for fifteen years as the issue that brought about the American civil war. But this French loss has been universally recognized as a punishment for the misrule of an administrative system, that had no chance to come back—the price paid for getting rid of the Napoleonic régime.

That price was not too high!

France in twenty years has built an empire in Africa, the wealth and extent of which will surprise any one who visits the wide stretches from the Mediterranean to Timbuctoo.

But France has been solving great problems at home—eliminating the dangerous influences of many religious orders; strengthening the foundations of a republican system of government that is the basis of her prosperity.

France has been fighting—without sacrificing the people's real rights—tendencies of unbridled license and anarchy among certain laboring classes that became familiar during recent strikes. And all through this struggle to do her part in the world's work there has passed like a red thread the fear of Germany pouring its mighty legions across the border and destroying the very structure of French national existence.

FRANCE HAD THE RIGHT TO FEAR GERMANY!

Twenty years later France had to dismiss Delcasse, her best Minister of Foreign Affairs, because Berlin threatened war unless she did.

Because certain powerful German interests could maintain in Germany a permanent menace to peace, the French peasant, who hates the military service, which interrupts his business when he is beginning to enjoy the fruits of his work, was forced to stay an extra year in the army and pay higher and still higher taxes to maintain the line of fortresses in constant readiness along the German border.

The Frenchman is essentially economical. He boasts the largest per capita savings. And by making a garden of his wonderful country he saves up enough to lend several billions to Russia, while he is picking up a stray couple of billion dollars of American and British securities. He wants the certainty that his savings will be safe and that his land will not be attacked without cause. He has already the most democratic system of government in Europe. He has practically done away with feudalism, and desires only assured peace to develop the nation's wealth to heights that will astonish the world.

THE FRENCHMAN, MORE THAN ANY ONE ELSE, FIGHTS FOR PEACE, AND FOR PEACE ALONE. Given that, he will pass to those other great changes which he cannot attempt until peace is assured.

And England? Does England fight Germany because of fear of German expansion, or because Britain aims to seize German colonial possessions?

GERMANY'S ENTIRE COLONIAL HOLDINGS ARE NOT WORTH TO ENGLAND THE COST OF ONE MONTH OF THE WAR. And at the beginning it was clear that the war would last more than one month. Besides, England has seldom expanded her colonial possessions at the expense of the leading European nations. She is not likely to expand in that way; at least, not while so many weak non-European nations, Persia, China, Central Africa, &c., may still be amicably divided. Britain's rule of territorial expansion has been always based on the principle: Help yourself, but do not interfere with our doing the same. It is not worth while changing this policy.

This war was not entered into by Great Britain solely to crush German commercial expansion. The British colonies, for the last ten years, have been among the best markets for German industry. Indeed, the British Isles have probably been the best. Unless Great Britain was strong enough to close her markets to Germany by imposing tariffs and laws, this could scarcely be accomplished by war. Colonies willing to disobey the mother country by peaceably excluding German goods would not be likely to rally round her flag to gain that end by an expensive war. England never threatened to send battle ships to bombard New York and Baltimore because line after line of British specialties have passed into the hands of Americans.

The same toleration might have been expected by Germany if that nation, with almost brutal openness, had not deliberately engaged on a plan to eliminate British trade by crushing England in a war.

Great Britain has faced a situation that obliged her to spend enormous sums for maintaining a supreme navy to protect herself against the enemy across the Channel. While she has been doing this look at her dilemma:—

Her agriculture has been made unprofitable by importations from the richer countries of the New World.

Her manufactures have been forced to compete with the more modern methods of younger nations that produce their output at lower cost.

She has had to face the problem of a labor population that has crowded in a country where profits are shaded almost to the vanishing point, to live as workmen live across the sea in the midst of booming industry.

Her railways can expect no rapid increase in traffic because of local conditions, yet must raise wages to avoid strikes and improve equipment to satisfy a public educated by the accomplishments of other countries that can afford to invest capital because of these countries' greater expansion.

With all this, naval expenses were not the only burden that militarism laid on England. The nation, to meet her emergency—to fight "for all we have and are"—had to raise more than a billion dollars in the first week of war by taxing chiefly the poor man. Any tax on the rich may fail at a pinch. Large fortunes are elusive. But the poor man is always there, with no lawyers to advise how to conceal safely his income from collectors; no bankers to arrange for him to escape the taxes by the transfer of funds to foreign banks.

Here Lloyd George's mighty effort to shift at least part of the burden to the shoulders of the rich was doomed to partial failure. The army, and even more the navy, expenses became so heavy that the total taxation could not be borne by the classes that could afford to pay them.

England in fighting to reduce her crushing militaristic expenses to reasonable limits, so that the poor man can be relieved of paying taxes beyond his resources and still live a decent life.

England as a nation grew to its eminence and maintained its liberties through ten centuries of historical development because her three fundamental forces have remained in a happy balance. The upper classes, helped by the people, prevented the Crown from dangerously encroaching on the nation's liberties. But the upper classes were not strong enough to put the people under the yoke of an economic dependence, worse than living under an absolute hereditary monarchy. The British people—those lower classes which form the backbone of every nation—had sufficient share in the government's administration and in the good things of life to make them stand for a peaceful evolution of the existing order rather than look for deliverance to an overthrow of the entire economic and political structure. Thus, British trade unionism, by its conservatism, has always disgusted the hotheads of the Continental labor movement. And, so socialism for a long time could not get a hold north of the Channel.

But as the financial burdens of the common people become more than they can bear, there ensues a state of deranged equilibrium: the poor become poorer, and the rich richer, all at the cost of those too poor to sell their labor and their product at a fair price. This economic law works everywhere. The rise of the few modern English millionnaires among a population driven to adopt the same destructive doctrines it abhorred only a few years ago is due to the same causes that allowed men like Li-Hung-Chang to amass a fortune of Morgan-like proportions in a land where children are thrown into rivers because there are no means of raising them. And when one man grows richer day by day, where hundreds grow poorer, that one man acquires a political and moral ascendancy. The rights of the community begin to depend on his good will. The class distinction throughout British history has freely recognized the hereditary rights of a group of men. And, as a whole, the country may well be proud of that group. But of late these distinctions have more and more assumed the nature of that feudal distinction between baron and villein. The twentieth century is a bad time for attempting a recrudescence of feudal conditions.

BUT ENGLAND IS FIGHTING ABOVE ALL FOR A READJUSTMENT OF POLITICAL CONDITIONS IN EUROPE THAT WILL PERMIT ENGLAND TO PUT ASIDE THE TERRIBLE BURDEN OF MILITARISM, WHICH EVEN IN SO RICH A NATION IS STEADILY EVOKING ALL THE MONSTERS OF A FEUDAL SYSTEM OF SOCIAL STRUCTURE AT A TIME WHEN NO PEOPLE WILL SUBMIT TO A REVERSION TO FEUDALISM.

Abolish the excesses of militarism and the British workman hopes to see the method of taxation change so that he will not have to bear the heaviest burden. He hopes to see the cost of living come into closer accord with the motion of wages, since the nation's untold millions will not be spent on battle ships and fortresses. He hopes to see an enlarged market for his products, and that means higher wages; for all European nations will become better purchasers of British products, and be better able to buy clothing, rather than see their money go for ammunition. And machinery will hold preference over rifles.

Always it is the same old story of turning the swords into ploughshares. But for the Britisher it has a special and terrible significance! He, himself, and all who once bought the product of his industry, have been forced—in twenty years—to spend so much on swords that nothing remains for ploughshares. ALL OVER EUROPE, LITERALLY AND FIGURATIVELY, LAND LIES FALLOW THAT FORTRESSES MAY RISE—and that Krupp may sell his guns.

The Englishman's home is but a small island. But his interests, industrial, political and commercial, are scattered over the world. And he, more than any one, wishes to see the world leave a life which prevents so many from engaging in useful production. Unless this is done, the Englishman, with his world's trade, his ships that sail the seven seas, his investments in every corner of the wide earth, will perish. So, he is stubbornly fighting for lasting peace.

The scenes are the repetition of the Napoleonic wars. Then, as now, Great Britain did not wish to acquire any territory from France, or to crush its national existence. It did not insist on the payment of tribute. But, with Napoleon in France, peace was impossible. The British Lion for fifteen years fought a stubborn battle for the peace of Europe. And there can be no doubt that life in Europe has been better for that fight, or that Waterloo did more for the liberty of Germany itself than did the Sedan.

Later, when Russia became a danger in the East, Britain fought it out in the Crimea.

Now it is Germany which has become the storm centre of Europe. British regiments are aligned with the French. England always pays its historical bills, and is willing again to purchase peace with war.

But what is Russia fighting for? This reason is probably understood least of all in the United States. America is only slightly familiar with Russian conditions and the Russian emigrant belongs largely to a class not able to express its views lucidly in English.

Let this be understood:—

Neither the Russian government nor its people are anxious to expand westward, either toward Germany or Austria! Excepting the few millions of Galician Ruthenians, the peoples who will pass under Russian domination by reason of Russia acquiring any new provinces will be Poles or Germans or Jews—exactly the three nationalities least likely to amalgamate with the pure Russian stock. This applies especially to Poles and Jews.

While Polish autonomy may be considered as certain, the Russian people are not interested in having Polish provinces too large. At least, not until the Poles prove good neighbors. Yet, at the best, even if Poland becomes a buffer State, Russia does not consider an increase of the Polish element in her border provinces worth fighting for. As to the Jews, their presence in any new province is to be decidedly regretted, because right now, when there is an apparent possibility of Russia settling the Jewish question humanely and liberally, an influx of something like a million to a million and a half of new Jews is likely to complicate matters, especially if the foreign Jews show a tendency to regard themselves as conquered Germans or Austrians.

Then, the Russians will find their new provinces thickly populated by two alien races and another race of common blood, but of alien tongue and religion. That any considerable number of Russians will settle in the new provinces can scarcely be expected. Russia has owned Poland for more than a century, yet Russian families who have settled in the nine provinces of the Polish kingdom, outside of those of officers and Russian officials, total a few thousands.

Russia is therefore not fighting for territorial expansion. Neither is Russia fighting for markets. Russia occupies about the same position as the United States did before the Spanish-American war—exporting chiefly raw materials and agricultural products and importing the higher classes of manufactures, such as machinery, chemicals, &c. Russia has a very extensive trade with Germany, which is of great advantage to both countries; and many years and many events will pass before Russia and Germany begin seriously to compete with each other in any of the world's markets.

CONTRARY TO THE POPULAR VIEW, BASED PRINCIPALLY ON HEARSAY, RUSSIA DOES NOT SEEK AN OUTLET TO THE GREAT SEAS.

Time was when she had other ambitious projects on the same line. That time is past.

What would Russia do with a harbor, say on the Mediterranean? Twenty years ago, when the world's fleets were small, cheap and easy to build, and when European politics centred around the Eastern Mediterranean and the smaller seas, Russia, with Constantinople in her hands, might have dictated to Turkey, Austria and Italy and have treated with England as an equal.

To-day, besides holding Constantinople, Russia would have to spend something like $500,000,000 on a navy, with the pleasant alternative of either not wanting a navy at all—if England is her ally—or uselessly retaining this navy under the protection of shore forts, as Germany is doing to-day.

The invention of the dreadnought and the heavily armored fast cruiser has created a situation where nothing short of the best and largest navy is of any use. Russia cannot possess a navy equal to that of Great Britain or Germany. Thus, a military harbor is of no use.

A harbor is useful commercially only when it decreases the cost of delivering goods to a market. It is cheaper to ship grain to France through Odessa, which is a Russian harbor, than to deliver it by rail to Constantinople and there load it on steamships.

So that persons who ascribe to Russia ardent desires for a warm water harbor are about twenty years behind their time!

What, then, is Russia fighting for? To understand it, keep in mind the peculiar position of Russia, in that, while Germany is the chief enemy of France and England, the enemy of Russia is Austria. Germany is only Russia's adversary.

Even in fighting Austria, Russia fights not her own battle. She is battling for the cause of the little Slavonic nations of the Balkans, whose existence for years has been threatened by the Austrian "Drang nach Osten"—the push eastward. These little nations, whose economic and political progress has been deliberately impeded by Vienna's intrigues, are the solicitude of Russia.

In 1877-1878, Russia fought the "last of the crusades," as bloody as and perhaps bloodier than when Christendom fought in the Holy Land to liberate the Christian "Slavs" from the Turkish yoke. During the last quarter of a century the Balkan Slavs have suffered more indirectly from Austrian intrigues than they ever did from Turkish misrule, and Austria's recent deliberate attempt to crush Servia proved that as long as Austria, supported by the German War Machine, maintains its armies intact there can be no lasting peace in the Balkans. Russia must see its sister nations crushed under the weight of the Teutonic juggernaut or always be prepared to resist attacks as unprovoked as unexpected.

One of the purposes of the war for Russia therefore is to increase on one hand the holdings of Servia and Bulgaria, and on the other to reduce those of Austria, so that their relative dimensions will serve as a guarantee of peace in the Balkans.

To bring about a reconciliation between the Russian government and its people a profound event was needed—an event that would make exceptional measures justifiable. The European war, WHICH, AS THE RUSSIAN PEOPLE FIRMLY BELIEVE, WAS NOT BROUGHT ABOUT BY ITS OWN GOVERNMENT, gave such an opportunity to extend the olive branch to the Poles, to abolish the most irksome restrictions of Jewish rights, to conciliate the Finns, to open prison doors to many revolutionaries, to close the wine shops all over the empire and to start generally a reconstruction of the nation on a new basis of national and racial justice.

In the battles in East Prussia is being decided a home question:—Whether in Eastern Europe shall prevail the principles of stern militarism, accompanied by ruthless political and economic oppression of the common people, or whether national government shall rest on democratic principles, now considered even in Russia as an essential spirit of its peculiar Slav population, and of which Americans showed a knowledge in their own Declaration of Independence.

It is vitally important to remember that here again, through a curious irony of history, Russia fights not only its own battles but the battle of another nation—in this instance the battle of its own enemies. Because, if Germany is beaten, Russia's reconstruction will be inevitably followed by a similar reconstruction of Germany.

Militarism can only exist if it is successful. If Napoleon III. had beaten his way to Berlin, we might now see an Emperor in Paris. We might witness France playing the rôle of Germany—storm centre of Europe. Sedan made France a republic and the world's banker.

It is not likely that the German system of militarism will survive the capture of Koenigsburg and Posen, the payment of a contribution to Belgium and to France, and the opening of a real Parliament at Petrograd. Nations want results and militarism has not endeared itself enough to stay after a failure—even in Germany.

Austria had not been mentioned, because as a nation the Austrians do not know what they are fighting for, and we do not wish to pretend to know, either. Led like cattle to a useless slaughter by an agreement between the Pan-Germanic party at Vienna and the Kaiser at Berlin, they have everything to lose and very little to gain. Their bodies fill the deep valleys of Western Poland, Galicia and Bukowina, useless hecatombs to the Graven Image of Prussian militarism.

Military aristocracy in Germany and Austria brought about this war, and its issue will decide whether the rule of the Sabre Lieutenant is to continue, or whether it is to be replaced by democracy.

The question of taxation is also to be settled. There can be no peace that does not bring a limitation of expense on armaments. This, with the financing of the war burden, must be followed by a readjustment of taxation to shift at least part of the burden on the wealthier classes, especially owners of large estates.

The fall of militarism, more than anything, will help bring down the structure of caste differences. The lower classes will gain socially. Limiting armaments will turn vast wealth into channels of profitable industry. For several years vast labor will be required to repair the damage done by war. All these changes may not immediately follow the signing of peace. They will come gradually and when they do come labor will meet capital on equal social ground, man to man, not under the bayonets of an army.

Labor in Europe confidently hopes that the result will ultimately bring a readjustment of relations between capital and labor, to the benefit of labor and the small investor. This is why the masses of Italy are so anxious to step in and help the Allies, even though fully realizing the great sacrifices that such a step would entail.

GERMANY IS FIGHTING FOR AN EXPANSION OF ITS COUNTRY FAR BEYOND ITS PRESENT FRONTIERS. HER SUCCESS WOULD MEAN MAINTAINING THE PRESENT MILITARIST SYSTEM, WITH ALL ITS UGLY INFLUENCES ON THE LIFE OF THE GERMAN PEOPLE; AND MOST LIKELY A STILL GREATER DEEPENING OF THE GULF BETWEEN THE GOVERNING MILITARY ARISTOCRACY AND THE COMMON PEOPLE.

THE ALLIES ARE CHIEFLY FIGHTING FOR THE CRUSHING OF THE SPIRIT OF MILITARISM AS THE GOVERNING CONCEPTION OF THE LIFE OF THE GREAT STATES OF EUROPE.

PEACE WILL NOT BRING EITHER THE PERMANENT END OF WARFARE IN EUROPE OR THE MILLENIUM IN FRANCE AND GERMANY.

BUT PEACE WILL MAKE LIFE IN EUROPE LIVABLE, WHICH IT IS NOT TO-DAY.

THAT ALONE IS WORTH FIGHTING FOR.

FEEDING THE TROOPS

ALMOST INCREDIBLE SUPPLIES NEEDED FOR THE ARMIES.

British Soldiers Are the Best Fed at the Front and Have a Wide Variety of Viands—French and Germans Trust to Foragers to Get Much of the Supply—Five Hundred Cars a Day.

The soldiers who are fighting in the many armies of Europe eat 11,250 tons of food each day. These figures are based on the allowances made by each country for each man in war time and averaged by an authority on commissariat.

It is figured that the average for each man is 2 1-4 pounds of food a day. It has been stated that there are from 8,000,000 to 16,000,000 men now on the battle lines. Just what the real figures are it is impossible to determine, but 10,000,000 is probably nearly correct.

A box car on a Canadian railroad will carry about twenty tons. This means that to transport the food of one day for 10,000,000 men 560 of these cars would be needed. If these 560 cars were divided into trains of forty cars each it would means fourteen trains drawn by the largest engines in the country.

Each nation has its own system of feeding its men, and now it is realized everywhere that to enable the men to fight at their best they must be fed properly. Great Britain sends food trains to follow each division, and these trains, equipped with the different foods, deal out to each regiment provisions, which are served to the men or are cooked and served from the kitchens. The French also furnish their men with food, especially when they are fighting on the defensive, as they have been so far in the present war, but when they are in an enemy's country they follow largely the system of the Germans, that the country should support the army as far as possible. The Germans in the present war have been able to follow this plan, so that it is probable that they have not had to draw very largely on their reserve stores.

Catering for the army has become a science. Each country has its experts who have figured out just what is needed for the men at home and when in the field carrying arms. Each has figured just what is necessary for all climates, and men who are sent to fight in cool climates have different food from those sent to war in the tropics. They have learned, too, what foods will be best to nourish and sustain men in their tremendous work and have selected foods easy of transportation and which have as little waste as possible in preparation.

It is absolutely necessary that the men should have good wholesome food, and it is also an important item that this food should be put into as little space as possible in order to facilitate transportation.

Each army has its own rations. One ration is for the army when on a peace footing at home and the other for the men when the are in the field fighting. Germany and France, too, have another ration for the men when they are taking part in the manoeuvres, and with these two countries these rations are very similar to the war ration.

In all countries bread forms the most important part of the ration. The British allow their men 24 ounces, the French 32 ounces, and the German 26 1-2 ounces to each man. This bread is baked in the army ovens. The German ovens are drawn by motors and they arrive with the troops as soon as the battle is over. For each division there are twelve ovens and these can turn out 30,000 loaves of bread a day. The dough is mixed in the usual way. Sometimes this bread is turned out in biscuit form. Each man receives two rations, which he carries in his haversack. Each one of these ovens can turn out 2,500 bread rations a day.

The British also have these field ovens, but they also have portable kitchens which are drawn by horses or by motors and follow the army. About four men are necessary to manage one of these kitchens and these men cook the meals for the soldiers, which is served out to them night and morning as long as it is possible for them to do so.

These kitchens make stews for the men, cook bacon, make tea or coffee, and with the British army jams and sweets form a large part of their food. It has been said that the British soldier in the field lives well and often has what might be termed luxuries. He gets his meat, 12 ounces being allowed each man. Then he has 16 ounces of potatoes, 8 ounces of fresh vegetables when they can be procured, 3 1-2 ounces of milk, an ounce and a half of sugar, and a quarter of an ounce each of tea, coffee and salt.

The French ration is somewhat different. It consists of 32 ounces of bread, 3 3-4 ounces of meat, 3 1-2 ounces of fresh vegetables and 1 ounce of sugar. The French soldier also gets, whenever possible, about half a pint of red wine and coffee.

The daily field ration of the German army is 26 ounces of fresh bread or 17 ounces of biscuit, 13 ounces of raw meat, fresh or salted, or 7 ounces of smoked beef, pork, mutton, bacon or meat sausage, 4 ounces of rice or 8 ounces of pulse or flour or 52 ounces of potatoes, coffee or tea, sugar and salt.

These various ingredients are not doled out to the men to cook for themselves, but the food train uses them to make stews and to be cooked in different ways, and then when they are cooked the men are served. Each soldier has what is known as a haversack ration and an emergency ration.

A Wonderful Parrot.

The world's record parrot is owned by Baron Alfred de Rothschild, and he paid for it a record sum. She sings with effect quite a number of songs in a voice like a banjo's twang. She speaks 200 words of German, can answer reasonable question, smartly rebukes those who ask silly ones and is careful to remind her interlocutors that her full title is "Laura from Africa, please."

Health and Beauty Answers

Clara: I made my faded "stringy" hair take on its natural colour again and become soft, fluffy and brilliant by shampooing with canthrox, a teaspoonful of which I dissolved in a cup hot water. It gently, yet thoroughly, dissolved dust, dirt and excess oil and when I rinsed it out left the scalp healthy and clean. Since my first trial I have used nothing but this.

Iphigenia: Yes, you can be sure of hair beauty if you give it proper care. Rid your head of itching dandruff by use of this economical home-made tonic, which will make your scalp so healthy that the hair naturally grows long and heavy. Get an ounce of quinozon at your druggists, dissolve it in one pint of alcohol, add one half pint cold water and rub into hair roots daily.

Antoinette: Instead of making over your gowns because you have outgrown them, why not try this harmless flesh-reducer? Get four ounces of parmotin from your druggist. Dissolve it in one and one-half pints hot water. Take a teaspoonful before each meal and you will see a gradual decrease in weight without loss of strength or sagging skin. It is simple, harmless and effective. Requires no dieting or exercise.

Miss O: The "face cream without grease" which you will ask about is easily prepared at home by this recipe. Get from your druggist one ounce of almosin; dissolve it in one pint cold water. Add two teaspoonfuls glycerine, stir well and let stand over night. Apply it frequently, and prevents wrinkles and all skin-flabbiness. It is cleansing, soothing and healing and there is nothing better to relieve enlarged pores, sunburn, tan and all roughness or redness of skin.

Christine: For your sallow, oily skin, which indicates a liver upset, you should make up and use the old-time hardhead blood, kidney and liver tonic. This prepared by pouring one ounce hardhead into one half pint alcohol (do not use whisky) and then adding one-half cupful sugar and hot water to make a quart. Take a teaspoonful before meals and your skin will soon be clear and beautiful. The hardhead tonic is good for most bodily pains and aches, because it eliminates from the system the poisons causing them, and its timely use frequently prevents serious sickness.

Celia: You say "I am a slave to my powder rag." Why not try this fine liquid beautifier? It is lasting in effect and economical, besides using this to whiten and tone the skin and rid it of sallowness or blemishes. Get 4 ounces of sparmax, add two teaspoonfuls glycerine and one-half pint hot water or witch hazel. This makes a big quantity and is far better than the ordinary face powders. It will be very becoming and will soon like a part of your skin.

Millicent: Don't be frightened into buying eye glasses before you really need them. It is better to strengthen the eyes than to aid their weakness. For many years I have used this simple home-made tonic which has both beautified and strengthened mine. Dissolve an ounce of orvoise in one pint of water. Two drops daily, or several times daily, will give relief to tired or aching eyes and soon make them clear and sparkling.

THE TRAGEDY OF RHEIMS.

Cardinal Lucon Brokenhearted at Ruin of Cathedral.

The magnificent cathedral of Rheims, which had successfully withstood the storms of centuries and which was a national monument of universal fame, is now merely an empty shell of charred and blackened walls, while its transcendant beauty may henceforth remain only as a memory. It is not known to what extent its stone walls have been weakened or whether it can be later restored in any degree, but it can never be made what it was before, that is certain. Its destruction resulted from a bombardment by the German army, which its commanding officers declared was unavoidable, since the place was directly in the line of fire. The French, on the other hand, insist that it was an act of wanton vandalism and wholly without reasonable excuse. The question may never be satisfactorily settled, but the fact that the bombardment was resumed deliberately on Thursday and Friday, Sept. 24th and 25th, indicates that the French are right.

The fire started Sunday afternoon, when shell after shell of the 500 hurled into the city by German batteries crashed into the old masonry that had safely passed through countless storms in the past. Some scaffolding erected to facilitate repairs to the east end of the ancient cathedral was first to catch fire and from this the flames spread to the old oak timbers of the roof and the beautifully carved woodwork of the vast interior.

The man of all living persons who will regret the vandalism most is Cardinal Lucon, Archbishop of Rheims, who was hurrying home from Rome when the outrage occurred. His grief was extreme and he called down the vengeance of Heaven upon the vandals.

Britain's Standing Army.

The British standing army is a much more modern institution than most people imagine. It dates from 1646, when the famous "new model" was established by act of the long parliament and maintained in existence until the restoration. This army, which was organized by Cromwell, consisted of some 30,000 men and was probably the most effective army that England has ever possessed. But the cost was so great that on his restoration Charles II. agreed to its abandonment, except a bodyguard or household brigade of 5,000 sanctioned by parliament, which included Monk's Coldstream regiment and two troops of cavalry raised by Charles himself, which formed the originals of the present Life guards.—London Standard.

How To Stop Stomach Torment

Sound Advice From a Well-Known Physician.

Men and women who suffer from what they call Dyspepsia, Indigestion or just plain "stomach-trouble" usually seek regular relief in the form of some pepsin pill or tablet, or other artificial digestant. This, experience teaches me, is a serious error. In nine cases out of ten, the distress is caused by the development of acids in the stomach, formed by the fermenting of the food. Instead of a digestant being required, something should be taken to dissolve or neutralize this acidity, when normal digestion will follow as a matter of course. This acid matter is distinctly poisonous and unless it is dissolved, digestion merely carries the mass of fermenting food from the stomach to the intestines, where its poison is absorbed by the blood and carried all over the body.

If all the great army of people who suffer after nearly every meal would make it a point to take a teaspoonful of Bisurated Magnesia in a quarter glass of water after each meal, there would be no formation of acidity and consequently no distress or discomfort, flatulence, acid, gassy stomach, heartburn, belching, bloating, etc., would then be a thing of the past. Bisurated Magnesia is a physician's prescription. It is inexpensive and can be obtained at any drug store. It is prepared for just such trouble and the best proof of its efficiency is that it will stop the sharpest, biting stomach distress in five minutes from the time it enters the stomach, simply by dissolving the acids that have been formed there. Its action is absolutely harmless.

Gen. Smith-Dorrien Is Now Engaged in His Eighth Campaign

GENERAL Sir Horace L. Smith-Dorrien, is the first great hero of the war. General Sir John French in his official report to the War Office, gave the whole credit of saving the entire left wing of the British army in France from annihilation at the hands of the Germans, to Smith-Dorrien, who by the way, was in command of the Canadians in the South African War. General French declares him to be a "commander of rare and unusual coolness, intrepidity, and determination."

Sir Horace has covered pretty well the whole ground open—until the other day—to an English soldier. That means Egypt (many times), South Africa (twice), India, and a host of "penny fights at Aldershott." His first fighting was in the South African war that ended with disaster at Majuba. He was at the battle of Islandula—itself a tragedy, but by no means an inglorious one, though still something of a mystery.

At Islandula, as at Ginnis, he had seen the most serious fighting that could possibly have come his way. Ginnis was the most thorough piece of business put through by our Egyptian army before Kitchener took it in hand, and Sir Horace put the finishing touches to the engagement when he and his mounted troops pursued the retiring enemy. A few years later, and he joined the Chitral Relief Force: and in 1898 Khartoum came to complete, on a larger scale, his military education in that part of the world. Fourteen years ago he was given the command of the 19th Brigade in South Africa. He kept the lines of communication south of Pretoria, and his brigade harried the Boers continuously. He came through with promotion, and with Lord Kitchener for a backer. Even Botha, most sharp in his admirations for British generals, found an opportunity of complimenting the most pressing of his adversaries.

Sir Horace was half-inclined to think of South Africa as the last of his battle-grounds. At the close of the war he went to India, in place of Lord Kitchener, for three years; after India came Aldershot, and with Aldershot his A.D.C.-ship to the King in 1910. His marriage twelve years ago marked the close of his seventh campaign, and though he had not set his mind on an eighth, he was not unprepared. At Aldershot, as it happened, he had brought manoeuvres into line with continental realism. Dispensing with tents, he bivouacked his men in the open as in war time. Lord Kitchener had planned that the Scottish and Light Divisions of his new army should go through the same course. Sir Horace and his chief had arranged things together at the War Office when the news of General Sir J. M. Grierson's death came over the wires. It took Lord Kitchener exactly three minutes to appoint a successor.

The son of a soldier (a late captain in the 3rd Light Dragoons and 16th Lancers), Sir Horace was born forty-six years ago; two elder brothers entered the navy, and one the church. He is a man who loves his work. But above all he loves the men who wear the British uniform. That is the great secret of his success. He knows his men. He has studied their welfare and requirements, and above all he trusts them. That is why he is called "Tommy Atkins' pal." When he undertook the Aldershot command in 1907 he decided to trust the soldier's sense of honor rather than the system of picketing to keep order in the streets.

Watchful Waiting.

Refugees arriving from Ostend by way of Folkestone told of one of their number, a corpulent Frenchman, who, as soon as the boat left the wharf at Ostend, took off his coat, vest and boots and, putting on a life preserver, sat on the edge of the deck, continuing the whole trip in this costume. Asked what he meant by such behavior, he replied in just one eloquent word, "Mines!"

Hannah More's Strictness.

For real Sabbatarianism we must go back a little. There was Hannah More, for instance, who refused to dine out on the Sabbath and retired to her own room on the very hint of music on that day. And more. Expressions like "christening" a ship, the "salvation" of a country or the "ascension" of a balloon were quite against her idea of the fitness of the use of words which had been exalted by their religious associations.—London Chronicle.

Not In His Line.

"I've a bone to pick with you."

"Pardon me, sir, that's impossible I'm a strict vegetarian.

Renewed Vigor In Old Age

This Letter Brings a Message of Cheer to the Aged—Results of Using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

New, rich blood is what is most needed in the declining years to keep up energy and vitality. That Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is a wonderful help in maintaining good health and prolonging life is attested by the writer of this letter.

Mr. Stephen J. Leard, North Tryon, P.E.I., writes:—"At seventy-five years of age my heart gave out and became very irregular and weak in action and would palpitate. My nerves also became weak, and I could do nothing but lie in bed in a languishing condition, losing strength and weight. In that condition I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and am cured. Had I not obtained this treatment I would now be in the box with the roof over my nose. At eighty-one I have an energy which means go, and I am writing this letter so that old people like myself may restore their health and strength by using this great medicine." 50c a box, 6 for $2.50. OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A GREAT DELIVERANCE

By Minnie Leona Upton

ANNE MORGAN stood in her kitchen doorway, and looked down over her old apple orchard, with its wornout trees. Then her fine gray eyes wandered beyond the thin branches to the fields with their scanty harvests; then farther still to the woodland, dotted thickly with dying trees that had not the vitality to rally from two successive years of caterpillar scourge.

Not often were those brave eyes dimmed with tears, but now they filled and overflowed. With an impatient gesture she brushed away the stinging drops, and, turning, busied herself in preparing supper. The children would soon be home from school.

Married at thirty-five to the love of her girlhood, John Morgan, whose fidelity to younger brothers and sisters had kept him from marriage until then, she had found herself at forty-five a widow with four children, the eldest a boy of eight. Stunned by the awful blow, Anne Morgan had yet pulled herself together, for the sake of their children, and struggled bravely on to keep the home. It had been a losing battle. For five years before his death John Morgan had been an invalid, able to do little more than raise what produce the family needed. The farm had run down steadily and rapidly. John, the oldest boy, was not strong and would never make a farmer. Anne Morgan could hire little help. Her own slender hands had grown calloused from handling hoe and shovel and haying implements. But those same hands were skilled in the use of the needle. If she could only sell the place and move to the outskirts of the large manufacturing town, fifty miles away, she knew that she could make a good living for herself and the children, and give them advantages that they could never have on an out-of-the-way farm. A fair price would clear the mortgage, and leave a nest-egg in the bank.

It had cost a sharp struggle to decide to sell the home where, in spite of hard times, she had been so happy; but the decision once made as the best and the right thing, she went about her work with a lighter heart than she had carried for many a long month.

Then came the meetings with prospective buyers—all with the same result: "Too far from the main road," "Orchard too old," "Fields too run down." Anne Morgan got so discouraged that she dreaded to see a stranger coming across the yard.

Jared Sparks, a wealthy farmer whose land joined hers, had offered her nearly as much for the tillage alone as any one else had offered for the whole farm and the house. He had long had his eye on the place. It would square out his own acres. He was the holder of the mortgage, and had lately shown impatience at her slowness in meeting the interest. But the sum offered was so inadequate that she felt that she must wait, and, if such a thing were possible, obtain a fair price, for her children's sake.

As she came to the door to see if the children were coming from school, Jared Sparks himself came slouching around the corner of the house. He accepted her invitation to come in, and seated himself by the kitchen door. He talked of one thing after another—the caterpillar scourge, the incompetence of the district school teachers, the long distance her children had to walk to school, the drought, and, finally, a subject suggested by the drought.

"What do you mean?"

"Why, hedn't you heard? His whole stand of buildings—house, barn, sheds, tool-house, corn-house—went up last night. The neighbors turned out well, and most of the furniture was saved, but the buildings was a clean sweep. They've moved into the old Ames house to work the farm from there. Folks are hintin' at Anse's knowin' how the fire started—good insurance he carried, you know. But they can't prove anything. An' for my part, I call it an all-fired mean trick to throw out suspicions about a man like that. It's only mean folks that'll do it, I say! prob'ly 'twas tramps. They've been mighty thick round here this season. I hold that Anse is all right. Not his fault if he can buy the old Ames house for half his insurance money, and have a tidy roll left to put in the bank or buy improved tools and pay for advantages for his children. Well, I must be movin' on. Keep your eye on the lookout for tramps. Good evenin', Mrs. Morgan."

He slouched away. Anne Morgan went on getting supper. But her head was in a whirl. So easy, so easy! And the buildings, all connected, would go like prairie grass, and she would get the insurance—no one would think of doubting Anne Morgan—and then she could clear the mortgage, and sell the farm to Sparks, and move into a pretty house in the edge of the town, where the children would have not only fresh air, but good schools. So easy, so easy!

She did not sleep that night! The next day, and the next, and the next, she went about her work with a feverish light in her eyes. The night of that third day, the school gave an "exhibition." Anne Morgan went, taking the children in the old carryall, drawn by their one old horse. But a blinding headache drove her home early in the evening. She chose to walk. John could drive old Ned, and bring the girls home safely. She longed to be alone, and looked forward eagerly to the two-mile walk in the soft dusk of a starry moonless night.

As she walked on, the pain subsided, and she began to think clearly—for the first time, it seemed to her, since Jared Sparks had sat there in her kitchen droning on, like some evil enchanter, about Anson Barlow's burned buildings and insurance money. When nearly home she came out into a place where no trees obstructed her view. She looked across the thin old orchard to her house. What was that—smoke rising? Yes! A thin column, from the kitchen end of the ell! And she had left no fires! For a moment she stood like a statue. If tramps had set it—why, then, let it go! She could easily save clothing and bedding, and silver and keepsakes—the rest might go, and no fault of hers!

"No fault—no fault. God help me! I wanted it to be so! If I can save it, and don't, it's my fire, whoever set it!"

She dashed madly through the orchard to the farmyard, dipped two milk-pails of water from the cattle trough, and sped across the yard to the house. It was of no use to blow the horn for neighbors. All were at the schoolhouse, except Jared Sparks, and he had gone away on business to a neighboring town that afternoon, not to return until the next day. Through the window she could see the woodbox blazing, and all the wood work around. And clothing hanging above the stove had caught. She unlocked the door and staggered in. The two pails of water deadened the blaze for an instant—then it sprang up fiercely. Back and forth she sped—back and forth! But the fire was gaining on her. Suddenly a gray figure lurched out of the darkness, from the direction of the barn.

"Jared Sparks!" she gasped.

He made no response, but caught up two swill-pails, and pumped them full with short, strong strokes. Together they fought the fire—and conquered it!

Then Anne Morgan sank down upon the cindery doorstep, her face in her hands, and cried. The great tears trickled through her sooty, blistered fingers. Jared Sparks stood and gazed at her helplessly. She had seemed so strong, so self-sufficient! His tongue attempted clumsy comfort, to which it was all unattuned.

"There, there, Mrs. Morgan—everything's saved, an'—"

"Yes, Jared Sparks, I am saved—saved from being a criminal! And I am crying for joy because of it. Ever since you told of Anson Barlow's fire I've wanted to burn these buildings. Somehow I couldn't think of any other way out, after you told of that. There hasn't been a waking moment when it hasn't been in my mind—and most of my moments have been waking ones! And to-night, when I walked home, driven by the headache that my awful thoughts had given me, and saw that smoke — Jared Sparks, at first I meant to let it go on! I thought, 'Isn't it my opportunity?' And then God spoke to me—and then I knew that if I could save the place, and didn't, it would be the same as if I burned it—even if a tramp did set the fire; and I guess one did, for the back kitchen window is open. "I—" The man broke in with a strange, choked voice:

"Anne Morgan, I am the criminal! I set the fire. That fire o' Barlow's possessed me, too. I rolled the thing over and over in my mind, till it seemed to me 'twas the best thing for both of us. 'Insurance companies are rich,' says I to myself. 'What's a few thousands to them?'"

"Yes, I thought that, too!"

"And, Anne Morgan, I told you about Anson Barlow's buildings, hoppin' that the idea would grip you, as it had me, an' that you'd set the fire. Then, as the days went by, an' I saw there was a big rain comin', I got scared for fear you wouldn't. An' when I heard that you was all goin' to the exhibition to-night, I thought 'twas my last chance, an' my best chance. An' I had jest set it, an' was hidin' in the barn, when you came up over the orchard hill, lookin' like an—an archangel, Anne Morgan. An' then it come over me, what I'd done—I guess the heathen ain't the only ones that sit in darkness, an' see a great light. You've saved me, too, Anne Morgan. See this?" He held up a paper. It was the mortgage. And under her still bewildered eyes, he struck a match, and before she could snatch the paper, it was gone.

The man looked at her, his face, pinched and lined by long years of sharp dealing, lighted by an inner light that made it almost noble.

"Anne Morgan, if you'll marry me, I'll see that all the children have a good education. Mary left me no children, you know. I'd like to feel that good, trustworthy blood was to get the good of my money. And to have a woman like you by my side — a woman who can act as nobly as you've acted to-night — 'twould make life worth livin'!"

He stopped, pitifully embarrassed after his long speech, which Anne Morgan, with uplifted hand, had vainly tried to check.

She spoke gently: "Mr. Sparks, I waited fifteen years for John, I had him only ten years — ten blessed, blessed years! Now he is waiting for me. No other man shall ever come between. But I thank you—thank you from the depths of my heart. Now, let us thank God for His deliverance." And there, on the wet and cinder-strewn doorstep they knelt together.

As they rose, Anne Morgan held out her hand. He took it in both of his. "Let us be friends, always," she said.

"I thank you," said Jared Sparks solemnly, and kissed her hands reverently, as if she were performing a sacrament.

Though Anne Morgan never could clearly trace the source of the money which, after she had moved to the town, came to her from time to time, usually at times of special need, she knew full well that it was in remembrance of "a great deliverance." — American Messenger

Playgrounds For Growing Nations.

The young nations of the world are providing these things for themselves; they are growing up, and are looking ahead to the future.

Only the other day, for instance, Canada passed an Order in Council setting aside as a national park an area of approximately 100 square miles in British Columbia, near Mount Revelstoke, on the Canadian Pacific Railway.

It will be known as the Revelstoke National Park, and within its borders are specimens of nearly all kinds of scenic beauty, including glaciers, snow-clad mountain peaks, waterfalls, lakes, and rivers.

Australia's new national playground, situated in New South Wales, also has a mountain—Mount Kosciuske—as its central feature, and is practically identical in point of size with Canada's.

OTTAWA, Oct. 20.—Further orders were received yesterday from the British and French Governments for saddles and bridles, and the orders which are now being divided among all the saddlery and harness firms of the Dominion, call for a total of 50,000 saddles. Of these 15,000 are for the French Government, 10,000 for the British, 20,000 for the Russian and 5,000 or 6,000 for the Canadian troops. The contracts were awarded by the sub-committee of the Cabinet, the only requirement from any firm being that it could fill the order.

Fred Stobart, purchasing agent for the British Government, who is here to see what can be supplied most economically in Canada, is interested in such articles as sweaters, shirts, socks, gloves, etc., but he says that no boots will be required as England and France can supply their own boots, the standard of quality and price being much higher here than over there.

SHAFER CASE THURSDAY.

Montreal Man Charged With Treason is Refused Bail.

MONTREAL, Oct. 20. — Israel Shafer, ticket agent, charged with high treason against the King in connection with the sale of steamship transportation to Austrian reservists, who tried to pass themselves off as Roumanians, was yesterday morning ordered to be held without bail by Judge St. Cyr. He will come up for examination on Thursday.

The charge was laid by Maj. Date on behalf of the military authorities. Should Shafer be found guilty of this offence, there will be no alternative for the court but to condemn him to death, just as in a murder conviction according to legal experts here. It will then remain for the crown to exercise its clemency in such manner as may be thought fit if clemency is considered at all.

Japan's Entry Into War Opens Several Important Problems

JAPAN'S invasion of the protectorate of Kiao-chau and the disarmament or withdrawal of German war vessels from Chinese and Japanese waters, expands the great European struggle and brings another important factor into the situation.

Japan has never forgiven Germany for her intervention following Japan's war with China, in 1894, when the Mikado was forced to surrender Port Arthur, which was captured from the Chinese after a memorable contest. A few years later Germany seized Kiao-chau bay, nominally to guarantee reparation for the murder by the Chinese of two German missionaries in a neighboring province. She then leased the bay and a stretch of territory consisting of 117 square miles, in which by the terms of her agreement with China she exercised territorial sovereignty.

Germany at once began the work of fortifying the harbor for use as a naval base in the far east. In this work she expended many millions of dollars and Kiao-chau has become the centre of Germany's far eastern trade.

Meantime Japan fought war with Russia and came into the possession of Port Arthur. Germany's position at Kiao-chau in a commanding position at the entrance to the China seas was never condoned by Japan, and now she avails herself of the opportunity of ousting the Germans and of reserving to herself the right to restore the territory to China if she so pleases. There can only be one result now that Germany has refused compliance with the Japanese ultimatum—Germany will be forced out by the Japanese.

If this brush between Japan and Germany does not proceed farther, the United States may well congratulate itself. But it is just possible that Japan may follow up the seizure or surrender to her, whichever it may be, of Kiao-chau colony, and gobble up Germany's other possessions in the Pacific. Germany has three groups of islands in the Pacific. She shares the Samoas with the United States and has considerable holdings in the Caroline and Pelew islands, the latter two groups being on a line between Hawaii and the Philippines. There is not the slightest doubt that Japan can take all these islands from Germany if she chooses. The only question is whether she cares. All these islands are of considerable commercial value and would be rich prize in the hands of Japan, which is seeking an outlet for her surplus population.

Servia's Army.

If Servia drew on all her reserves the utmost force she could put into the field would be 360,000 men, about one-seventh of Austria's war strength and her first line numbers only 175,000 men.

New Russian Flag.

A Petrograd despatch says that the Czar of Russia has authorized the adoption of a new flag which symbolises the union of His Majesty and the Russian people.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Rest Your Eyes.

The moment you are instinctively inclined to rub the eyes that moment cease to use them. Also it is time to give your eyes a rest when you become sensible of an effort to distinguish. Cold water is about the safest application for inflamed eyes. Never sleep so that on awakening the eyes shall open on the light of the window. Never read or sew directly in front of the light of a window, the better light being that that comes from above or obliquely or over the left shoulder. Too much light is an evil, just as is scant light. It creates a glare that pains and confuses the sight.

LUXURY IN EGYPT.

Lavish Display of Wealth During the Tour of the Khedive.

The khedive's tour through the Delta, which his highness recently completed, has shown in a remarkable manner the wealth of the landowners in the provinces of the Nile.

In many places private individuals decorated the roads over which the khedive motored for distances of several miles.

Coffee was served in cups worth £600; the chair in which the khedive sat during brief visits to country houses had in many cases cost from £100 to £200.

One pasha who entertained the khedive for half an hour is alleged to have spent £10,000 on the preparations, while another borrowed cannon from the Egyptian army and fired a salute as his highness arrived.

In many places the crowds were so great that the khedival motorcar was unable to proceed. Frequently the fellaheen (peasants) kissed the car to demonstrate their loyalty.

Altogether the Delta has not witnessed such celebrations for a generation, since the time of Ismail.—London Standard.

Three Great Batters.

There are a number of batters who can hit almost any style of pitching. Christy Mathewson says that Hans Wagner's only weakness is a base on balls; that giving him his base usually prevents him from hitting a double, triple or a home run. And in that connection, Eddie Plank, the Athletics' great left hander, recently made a most novel comparison in discussing the relative merits of those two great batters, Larry Lajoie and Ty Cobb. "Ty makes you put them over, and then hits them safe," said Eddie, "while Lajoie hits them a mile whether they are over or not."—Billy Evans in St. Nicholas.

Washing With Ozone.

Ozone water, for washing machinery used in making foods and drinks, is a new idea for sterilising, so as to avoid any traces of poisonous or objectionable disinfectants. The ozone will kill all the bacteria, but will completely disappear on airing, and the knowledge that it is used adds to the attraction of the food product.

One of its good points is that it will not injure rubber; therefore it may be used to sterilise hose. Ozone, in the form of gas, is also coming into use abroad to keep cold storage plants sweet.—Saturday Evening Post.

Orchid Vandals.

Much value in little space is found in rare orchids. One sold in London the other day for $7,500. A dispatch, describing the orchid show at which this sale took place says: "Most of the valuable orchids were exhibited behind a grille the doors of which were securely padlocked. In former years it has been found that the zeal of collectors often dulls their sense of absolute honesty and valuable orchids have frequently been returned to their owners robbed of their gallen."

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, Oct. 19.—Stress of export demand brought about an almost constant tightening of values today in wheat. There was a nervous feeling at the close, which ranged 2c to 2 1-4c above Saturday night's level. Corn gained 1-2c net and oats 3-4c to 7-8c. The outcome in provisions varied from 5c decline to on advance of 10c.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Oct. 19.—Cables on Manitoba spring wheat were strong again today, at a further advance of 6d to 9d per quarter, with a fair demand from overseas buyers for supplies, but owing to the raise of 2c per bushel in the Winnipeg market the bids were all out of line and no further sales were made. The local market for oats was stronger at an advance of ⅛c to ¼c per bushel, but the demand is still limited for carlots. The trade in corn and barley is quiet. The tone of the flour market is stronger, owing to the steady upward tendency of prices for wheat, but no actual change has taken place yet. The demand is still and quiet from both local and country buyers. The trade is more active in rolled oats. Millfeed is quiet and the condition of the market is unsettled. Cheese is quiet but firm. Exports for the week were 4927 boxes, as compared with 63,506 for the same week a year ago.

An easier feeling has developed in the market for butter and prices at the auction sales today were ½c to 5-8c per pound lower, finest creamery selling at 27¼c.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Oct. 19.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, west end market, there was no change in the market for butchers' cattle today, the supply being smaller than a week ago and especially in good, useful grades, as there was a better feeling in the market and prices were maintained, but the market for canning stock was stronger owing to lighter offerings, prices advancing 10c to 15c per cwt., with a good demand from packers. Bulls were in good demand at $4.75 to $5, and cows at $5.75 to $6 per cwt. The trade in butchers' stock was only fair, because the demand from packers was smaller than usual, as they bought pretty freely last week at the decline in prices and carried over a fair stock of dressed beef. Choice steers by the carload changed hands at $8 to $8.25 and good at $7.50 to $7.75 per cwt.

The weaker feeling which developed in the market a week ago for sheep was the principal feature of this department of the trade again today and prices scored a further decline of 25c per cwt.

Ewes sold at $5 to $5.25 and bucks and culls at $4.50 to $4.75 per cwt.

Lambs were steady and in good demand. Ontario stock brought $7.25 to $7.50 and Quebec $6.50 to $7 per cwt.

Milk-fed calves were sold at 4c to 7c per pound live weight.

The market for hogs continues weak, with a decline of 25c to 50c per cwt. shown. Sales of selected lots were made at $8.50 to $8.65, sows at $6.50 to $6.65, and stags at $4.25 to $4.35 per cwt. weighed off cars.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $8 to $8.35; do., medium, $7 to $7.75; do., common, $6.50 to $6.50; canners, $3.75 to $5; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $7.25 to $7.50; do., medium, $6.25 to $6.75; do., bulls, $6.50 to $7; milkers, choice, each, $75 to $80; do., common and medium, each, $65 to $70; springers, $58 to $60.

Hogs—F.o.b., $8.50 to $8.65.

Calves—$5 to $20.

A Regiment of Giants.

Frederick the Great originated the Prussian guards. His ambition was to form a royal bodyguard of giants. Every country was ransacked by his agents to supply recruits, and no head that towered above the crowd, even in the bazaars of Aleppo or Cairo, could escape the crimps of the Prussian king. The most extravagant sums were offered to men of exceptional inches, and an Irishman more than seven feet high, who was picked up by the Prussian ambassador in London, received a bounty of $6,500.—London Mail.

PETERBOROUGH TUESDAY, OCTOBER 20, 1914

Recruiting For Second Contingent At Armouries To-night

PROGRESS MADE BY THE ALLIES

SITUATION IS EMINENTLY SATISFACTORY

WILL BE NO ELECTION

Talk of Early Appeal to Electorate Has Ceased and Government Has Decided to Proceed With Administration

NOT UNTIL 1916

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 20—There will be no Federal election this year and probably not until 1916.

The talk of an early appeal to the electorate has ceased and the Government has decided to proceed with its administration until more favourable opportunity. This decision, not to hold an election, came at a time when it had been almost decided to do so, and it is believed here that strong pressure was brought to bear by prominent railroad magnates, and that business men and the financial interest constituted the casting vote against that course.

THE RECEIPTS WERE LARGE

But Quality of Toronto Market Was Far From Choice

UNION STOCK YARDS, Oct. 19.—Receipts were very large, especially cattle, since Saturday morning, 251 cars, 4,508 cattle, 1355 hogs, 1,906 sheep and lambs, 365 calves and 512 horses.

Cattle.—The quality of cattle as a rule was far from choice or even good, the bulk being common and medium unfinished with prices lower as the market was dull and draggy. Choice butcher's steers, $8.00; good butcher's steers, $7.75 to $7.50; medium butcher's steers, $7.00 to $7.50; common butcher's steers, $6.00 to $6.75; choice butcher's heifers, $6.00 to $6.10; common butcher's heifers, $7.50 to $7.75; choice cows, $6.50 to $6.75; good cows, $6.00 to $6.25; canners, $3.00 to $4.00; bulls, $5.50 to $6.50.

Feeders and Stockers.—Market slow and easier. Choice steers, $6.75 to $7.00; medium steers, $6.25 to $6.50.

Milkers and Springers.— Few on sale at $55 to $90 each; bulk sold at $70 to $80 each.

Calves.— Market easy for rough grass fed, but firm for good to choice. Choice veals, $10 to $11; common rough, $4.50 to $6.50; good, $9.00 to $9.50.

Sheep and Lambs.—Market steady for sheep but lambs were easier. Sheep $5.00 to $6.00; culls and rams $2.50 to $4.50; lambs, $7.00 to $7.75; culls, $6.00 to $6.50.

Hogs.—Market lower. Selected, fed and watered, $8.00 to $7.65 f.o.b. cars, and $8.25 weighed off cars.

CHANCES FOR SEED GROWERS AT GUELPH FAIR

The Provincial Winter Fair, which is held at Guelph early in December each year, has many excellent educational features, one of the most valuable being the seed exhibit. During the past few years this department has grown rapidly and the interest taken in it has constantly increased. Its value has been recognized by the management and this year increased space has been allotted, more classes have been provided and the prise list has been increased by about three hundred dollars ($300).

This offers an excellent opportunity for all farmers who have good seed for sale to advertise it and compete for prizes. Those who send creditable entries representing larger lots held for sale will have a good chance to dispose of their seed to advantage.

DISLOCATED HIS ELBOW

A young lad named Robert Allen living on Morrow Street, had the misfortune to dislocate his elbow while returning from school yesterday. Dr. Young was called and reduced the injury.

The Allies Continue To Make Progress

Official French Bulletin Says Advances Have Been Made Especially Along the Meuse and That the Entire Situation is Eminently Satisfactory.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, October 20.—That material progress is being made by the allies at various points in the long battle line was officially announced to-day. The three o'clock official communique telegraphed from Bordeaux summed up the result with that statement.

The Belgian forces who are heading the line from the vicinity of Nieuport to Dixmude and along the front the River Yser, are declared to be maintaining their positions in the face of the German opposition. The Germans still hold their strongly entrenched advanced positions in the vicinity of Lille, but, generally speaking, there is but little change reported from that section. The Germans have vainly endeavoured to check the strong French offensive from the west bank of the Meuse, especially from the positions in the neighborhood of Camp de Romains. As a whole the entire situation is described as entirely satisfactory.

LONDON, October 20.—Although several of the morning newspapers have reports that Ostend had been re-occupied by the Belgians, at the Belgian legation and at the British press bureau it was stated that they were without any information on the subject.

LONDON, Eng., October 20.—According to a Berlin despatch, the British submarine E2, with 16 men aboard, was sunk by German warships in the North Sea on Sunday. The British Admiralty has made no statement yet respecting the matter, but it is considered here quite possible that this courageous little vessel has been lost in an attempt to avenge the loss of the Hague, the Hawk, the Cressy, and other British cruisers.

HOLLAND-AMERICAN SHIP HIT MINE

AMSTERDAM, October 20.—The Holland-American liner, "Potsdam," to-day struck a German mine in the North Sea and was sunk. It is not known as yet whether any of the passengers or crew escaped.

JAPS SINK A GERMAN "SUB."

TOKIO, October 20.—The Admiralty announces that the German torpedo boat S90 was found aground sixty miles to the south of Kiao-Chau bay, and was sunk by a Japanese cruiser.

New Ministers Are Sworn In

Hon. T. Chase Casgrain and Hon. H. E. Blondin Become Members of Cabinet

Special to The Examiner:

OTAWA, Ont., Oct. 19.—This afternoon Hon. T. Chase Casgrain and Hon. P. E. Blondin, member for Champlain county and the deputy speaker of the House of Commons, were sowrn in as members of the Borden government. Mr. Casgrain will be Postmaster-General to succeed Hon. L. P. Pelletier, and Mr. Blondin as Minister of Inland Revenue, takes the place of Hon. W. B. Nantel, who goes to the Railway Board as successor to Hon. M. E. Bernier, whose term has expired.

SECOND CROP OF RASPBERRIES

Mr. Walter Squires and Mr. W. J. Skuce, Albert street residents, have recently displayed big red raspberries, a second crop on their bushes. The fruit is large and red, with others to ripen.

THE BAILEY MURDER CASE

Special to The Examiner.

MINEOLA, Li., Oct. 20.—The fact that Mrs. Louise Bailey was a prospective mother when she was shot and killed in Dr. Carman's office was revealed to-day when Dr. Howard M. Pipps testified regarding the autopsy on Mrs. Bailey's body. There was evidence an attempt had been made to prevent its development. The doctor's wife is charged with the murder of Mrs. Bailey.

HORTICULTURAL EXHIBITION

The Toronto Live Stock Show has been discontinued for this year and in its place the old Ontario Horticultural Exhibition will be held on the Exhibition Grounds, Toronto, on November 10th, 11th, 12th, 13th and 14th. The Exhibition comprises fruit, flowers, honey and vegetables; the entire receipts will go to the Red Cross Society. Special railway rates. The Ontario Horticultural Exhibition has been a success for a number of years, and those who attend this year will no doubt see an exhibition worthy of notice.

75 MEN FROM HERE

Major Walker Receives Orders to Commence Recruiting That Number at the Armouries To-night

MANY ARE ANXIOUS

Major Walker, commanding the 57th Regiment, received orders from the Kingston headquarters of this district, at noon today to immediately commence recruiting for the second overseas contingent. At the same time Major Walker was notified that the quota to be enlisted from the 57th Regiment would be 75 men. Recruiting will commence at the Armouries to-night, and all anxious to enlist should be on hand. No trouble is expected in raising the number asked for.

An Ottawa despatch says:

Ottawa, Oct. 19. — Details of the apportional quotas of infantry to form part of the second contingent, listed by divisions and districts and provinces, were issued by the Militia Department to-day. This is in accordance with Sir Robert Borden's statement issued last evening. Quotas will be furnished as follows:

1. Southern Ontario (Toronto), one battalion.
2. Western Ontario, (London), two battalions.
3. Eastern Ontario (Kingston), one Battalion.
4. Southern Quebec (Montreal) two battalions.
5. Northern Quebec (Quebec), one battalion.
6. Maritime Provinces (Halifax), two battalions.
7. Manitoba-Saskatchewan (Winnipeg), two battalions.
8. British Columbia (Victoria), two battalions.
9. Albert (Calgary), one battalion.

This is a total of 14 battalions or 16,000 infantrymen. The Quebec quota includes the Royal Canadien, the French-Canadian battalion already organized.

These figures relate only to the infantry of the second contingent, and the cavalry and artillery, when the details as to these forces have been furnished by the War Office, will be added to these. Orders for enlistment were issued this morning.

Confirmation of Atrocities

Letter From Miss Appleby, Newcastle-on-Tyne to Her Mother in This City

Corroboration of the reports of the ferocity of German captors is being received from many sources, but one of local interest is contained in a letter received by Mr. T. W. Appleby, of the White Rose Garage, from his sister, Miss Appleby, in Newcastle-on-Tyne.

The letter reads in part as follows: On Thursday night another batch of wounded (180) came into Newcastle. They are from the battle of the Aisne. It's awful to see the people lined up and they cheer and cheer. Some were too weak to answer, and others were so ill the people were asked for sidence. Many had a leg off, and some were blind. Farrows know a traveller who went and he had both legs blown off, and then the Germans cut off his arms and put his eyes out. He is back in Manchester now and is begging for poison to do away with himself. Isn't it too terrible for anything. I suppose the brutes are cutting off the hands of the prisoners so that they can't fight any more. Sixteen Belgian refugees were brought here and some of them are without hands. Of course, we never go out here but we see huge bodies of armed soldiers marching about. There's always something to see. They are digging trenches all over the Moor and the Seazer. The Freemen will have something to grumble about now eh?

MOUSTACHES.

LONDON, Oct. 19—A special branch man from Scotland Yard was sent to Victoria Station on the occasion of the departure of a member of the Royal family. As his moustache was turned up at the ends, (a la kaiser) railway officials arrested him, declaring his papers forged.

French To Advance Towards The Rhine

Operations in That Quarter Are Progressing Favourably and it is Reported That General Pau the One-armed Hero Has Been Sent to Take Command of the Forces

Special to The Examiner.

PARIS, October 20.—The proposed invasion of Alsace-Lorraine with Metz as the objective, is gaining actual form. It is known that the German attempts to bring up their heavy guns to batter down the Verdun-Toul line of forts, has utterly failed. They have also been forced to weaken their left to cope with the situation in Northern France, and this has given the French a decided advantage.

While confirmation is lacking, it is reported that General Pau has again been sent to the east to assume the command, and if this is so it is certain that actual operations towards the Rhine are about to begin, as the one armed veteran has been promised that the task of clearing Alsace-Lorraine of the enemy will be entrustel to him.

JAPS SEIZE GERMAN ISLANDS

TOKIO, October 20.—It is officially announced that for "strategic reasons" the Japanese naval detachment have seized the principal islands in the German group south of Marshall, Ladrone, East and West Caroline Archipelagoes. These islands have been used by the Germans as bases for their warships operating in the Pacific.

GREEKS ARE ITCHING FOR A FIGHT

LONDON, October 20.—Advices from Naples declare that passengers arriving there from Greece say that the entire Greek army and navy are ready for war. Greece has 450,000 soldiers in the first line ready for immediate action and could mobilize 300,000 additional within a fortnight. The fleet is in a perfect condition of efficiency and there is constant agitation for Greece to join the allies without delay.

GERMANS ON THE OFFENSIVE AT LILLE

LONDON, October 20.—Repulsed in their attempt to break the allied lines from the north and overwhelm Dunkirk, Germans are to-day trying to break through from the direction of Lille and Menin. Very strong forces of German infantry, supported by Austrian and German artillery mounted on heavy motor trucks, are pressing forward along the main highways from these points. They are encountering spirited resistance, however, and so far have failed to make any substantial headway.

He Gets the Iron Cross.—This German is described in Berlin as the first German to cross the Meuse. When the fighting was hottest in this section of the country, the Iron Cross was offered the first man to cross the Meuse river. This German succeeded in crossing the river on a partly completed bridge.

ITALY MAY TAKE PART

May Soon Throw Her Large Forces into the Field on the Side of the Allies

BITTER FEELING

Examiner Special:

LONDON, Eng., Oct. 20.— Advices from Rome indicate that the friction between Italy and Austria is constantly increasing. The bitter feeling has been greatly added to by the declaration of Prince of Hohenlohe, Governor of Trieste, that he is convinced the fire in Montalcone dockyard more than a week ago was the result of an Italian conspiracy. Frequent conferences are being held by the Italian Government, and there is a growing belief that Italy will soon throw her forces into the field on the side of the Allies.

It is believed certain here that if Italy takes this action Turkey will attack Russia.

W. J. BYERS HAS 179 SUBSCRIBERS TO DAILY EXAMINER

One hundred and seventy-nine "Examiners" are sent out daily by Wm. J. Byers, from his big store at Byersville. He has steadily increased the number of suscribers in that district and recently put on thirty new ones. Although route boys have many customers in the same district, Mr. Byers had no difficulty in reaching the 179 mark. From his store alone, the Examiner is sent throughout Byersville, all the way to the River, and has more than kept pace with the growth of this suburb.

ROUND THE STORES

Men, don't go another day without a fall or winter overcoat. The cool nights and frosty mornings remind one of the near approach of winter. The special offerings at "Oak Hall" are most opportune, and should be seen early as their "profit-sacrificed" coats are limited. All "Oak Hall" overcoats are made in Canada, and well-tailored. All are great value, and are proofs of the genuineness of the policy adopted by this firm of granting concessions to their patrons during these strenuous times. For example: A line of light fall overcoats, regular prices ranging from $10 to $13.50, are now offered at $7.95. Another lot of twenty-five light-weight overcoats, regular prices ranging from $12 to $15, are now offered at $9.95. This is worth investigating.

The lessons from some of the experiences furnished by Peterborough and citizens of other places, who have been influenced by misleading business announcements in some of the larger city newspapers to shop out of town, is worth remembering just now. Some of the methods employed by a certain class of fur dealers, for instance, is referred to in to-day's message from our local furriers, Barries Limited. It's worth while for any woman or man contemplating the purchase of furs this season to read the warning notes given by the firm. When it is remembered that Peterborough citizens can buy their furs direct from the maker and from our own factory, does it not seem safe to spend our money in our own town. Besides, Barries Limited, are employing a large staff of fur workers composed of our own people, thus helping to keep our own people at work. Barires Limited, are always willing to submit figures at any time and compare grades with any outside house. Not only that, but you have the additional guarantee that if the furs are not up to quality they may be returned and the price will be refunded.

They make it clear that their furs are not marked at last season's prices and then reduced to this year's low values.

THE ORPHEUS SOCIETY

Has Selected Works For First Programme and is Making Progress

At the first meeting of the Orpheus Society, the cantata, the "Feast of Adam" by Jensen, was studied in part, and satisfactory progress was made in the work of preparing this pretty cantata.

Already the following works have been selected for the first programme of the Society and no time will be lost in attacking the various compositions: Dramatic Poem "Charge of the Light Brigade," Somerville; ladies' chorus, "Forget Me Not," and "Shoosy-Shoo"; chorus, "Alla Capella," "Calm as the Lake," Abt.

Mr. J. Edward Fisher, the conductor of the new organization, was well pleased with the splendid efforts of the singers and is satisfied that he is working with good material. He himself is an energetic and effective conductor, and it is expected that the Orpheus Society will give a good account of itself when the time comes to make a musical offering to the public.

CONGRATULATIONS.

With the issue of Monday, October 19th, the Montreal Herald, attained its one hundred and fourth year of continuous publication. It entered into existence in the beginning of the nineteenth century, October 19th, 1808. The Herald has reached a lusty old age, and is perpetually renewing its youth, its circulation being much larger now, by many thousands, than in any year of its existence. The Herald is congratulated; it is not only old but as good as it is old; sane, moderate, enterprising and reliable. The Examiner wishes the Herald many years—why not centuries—of continuous and increasing prosperity.

THE CRIME OF AN ELECTION.

Whoever conceived the idea of a general election ta this time, is doing the work of Germany in the way of fomenting discord and promoting disunion—when there should be harmony and unity of action. At the outbreak of war Parliament — both parties unanimously being parties to the pact—declared a truce to party politics; a truce that has in general been pretty fairly observed. Without the rending effects of a general election the very discussion of the proposal or idea, tends to inflame the party spirit and destroy the harmony of sentiment and unity of action that are absolutely essential to Canada doing her duty in the way of raising additional contingents. We have no need of an election now. The present Parliament is entitled to be till September, 1916. The Governor-General has issued a proclamation virtually declaring that there shall be no election, and unless the word of the Governor-General and the Government of Canada are to be regarded as of no more value than that ascribed by German ideals to a "scrap of paper," there will be no election. We are fighting for the maintenance of British ideals. Shall we assist the triumph of German ideals by holding an election just now, a something Germany would rejoice to see.

REMEMBER JUDAS MACCABAEUS.

To-night will be presented the story, in matchless oratorio, of the work of a great liberator, who strove for the essence of what we ar striving for to-day. The relief of the oppressed and the unappraisable boon of liberty — the story of the fight and triumph of a great Judean liberator, Judas Maccabaeus. Nothing in the way of music could be more appealing, more in tune with the spirit of the time; and no object is more worthy of support than that of supplementing the too meagre proportions of the Patriotic Fund. Don't forget the Judas Maccabaeus Oratorio tonight in the Grand Opera House. Your presence will be rewarded with good music—the full worth of your money—and your share of the popular price of admission will go to relieve suffering, cold and hunger of the dependents of those now fighting our battles. Don't let any other engagement keep you away. It is unfortunate that we have the counter attractions of a church mission and a lecture an good citizenship, to possibly interfere with the discharge of the highest duty of citizenship the practice of patriotism. Think it over and see if you do not conclude that this is right.

WHY WE FIGHT.

If any Canadian child puts Southey's poetical suggestion to his father—"tell us all about the war and what they kill each other for,"—he can well be told that Canada is in the war for one reason, that involves many others—for self-preservation in its widest and most inclusive sense. In a word we are fighting to decide the question, whether or not we shall remain under the British flag or come under the domination of the Kaiser. This question is an issue of this conflict; for, if Germany triumphs in her mad scheme of world-wide domination, no country can be sure of its liberties. We, in Canada, in common with the British and her allies, are fighting for national life, and for all the conditions that make life under the British flag worth living. We are glad to see Canadians realize this, and we shall have proof of this realization, when an opportunity for recruiting gives us a chance to implement the plan of contribution of new forces to the imperial army, announced by Sir Robert Borden in the name of the Canadian people. We believe he gives voice to the sentiments of the Canadian people. We are fighting for self-preservation as a part of the Empire, and we shall be in the fight till the triumph comes. We may have to pay a heavy price in men, money and disturbance of the routine of peaceful citizenship, but it will be as nothing compared with the price we should pay if our enemy, the enemy of the Empire, the enemy of humanity, should win the upper hand.

AUTONOMOUS CANADA.

The Toronto News in its virulent campaign to provoke a general election, sees yellow as well as writes yellow. Here is one characteristic sentence; it says, "The autonomy bogey, the war has destroyed." This is not true; the war has developed or rather demonstrated the "autonomy bogey." Canada has shown herself a daughter in the mother's house, and mistress in her own. When Britain in the pursuance of a duty to herself, the Empire and the world, declared war upon a ruthless and fiendishly organized tyranny, Canada of her own motive, off her own bat, without any suggestion from Great Britain, organized an army of thirty-three thousand soldiers for service in the war. She did this with the consent of her people unanimously expressed by Parliament. This army was raised, and equipped cap-a-pie by Canada alone, and so thoroughly that in England it is dubbed "the complete army." In doing this Canada exercised as perfect and integral an autonomatic action as Great Britain exercised in organising her forces. Canada voted fifty million dollars as a war fund, and played the game nobly on her own account. While we have virtual autonomy we are gloriously entangled with the Mother Country and the Empire. The relations of the self-governing dominions with the Mother Country and the Empire is a splendid puzzle to wondering nations; bound yet free; independent yet splendidly and inextricably dependent—daughter in her mother's house— mistress in her own.

A HINT TO THE KAISER.

The Irish Nationalists in London last night, struck a deep note in the knell of the Kaiser's ambitions and hopes. Amid tumultious cheering, with right hands upraised, the Irish Nationalists, who crowded Central Hall, London, fiercely adopted the following oath administered by T. P. O'Connor:

"We will never sheathe the sword until Belgium has got back her freedom; until every inch of her soil is clear; until a treaty is made, not on a scrap of paper, but on a foundation behind which stand the millions of the British race."

How will this sound to the Kaiser? Will it encourage him? will it brighten his hopes of overcoming a people, with a spirit like the British people, and an empire like the British Empire. This declaration is not air; it has stern deeds and grim determination behind it. The Kaiser counted on Ireland and Irishmen being a thorn in the side of Britain, a seditious distracting element. He not only finds Ireland but India ranging herself behind the empire, not only in sentiment and speech but—with stout Irish hearts, with—to use an Hibernianism — guns in their hands they know how to use. Germany can never conquer the British spirit, that rises from the British policy and practice of fair play and respect for human freedom and human rights. No other empire that ever existed constitutes so magnificent a mystery as the British Empire, and in no other country could a typical scene like that of the Irishmen in London, as Even the wonderful dreamer of dreams could never imagine a mass meeting of Finlanders or Polanders or people of Alsace and Lorraine, so forgetting his tyranny and crushing of liberties, as to take a pledge, like that of the Irishmen in London, as an expression of loyalty to the principles of a nation that guarantees and gives the rights of freedom to all its subjects. Sentiment like that, especially when it is willing to shoot, has a longer range than the biggest Krupp guns.

BRITISH LIBERAL'S TRIUMPH.

The British Empire truly has reason to-day to bless the fact that opportunity came to the Liberal party in Britain to work out a policy of generous pacification in South Africa. How very different too affairs might be to-day in Ireland, had that island's cause not been faithfully battled for by Mr. Asquith and his colleagues. If we win through, posterity will grant these men places in the long roll of of the Empire's leaders not inferior even to the illustrious worthies who wrought the deliverance of Elizabeth and her people. —Simcoe Reformer.

INVASION IMPOSSIBLE WHILE BRITISH FLEET IS SUPREME

Ever since the outbreak of hostilities between Germany and Great Britain the question has been persistently asked: Can Germany, victorious on the battlefields of Europe, invade Britain? Can German troops be landed on British soil? The question has assumed different shapes with the swinging of success now on the side of the Allies and then on the side of the Germans. But the question has always been there, and we were told only lately that the German attack on Paris having failed, the next blow must be delivered at England. In fact, recent developments go to a certain extent to prove this. The occupation of Antwerp, the rush toward Ostend and Calais show in a clear and unmistakable manner that the Germans are in great earnest to take possession of the coast towns of Northern France. But their object in so doing is still a matter of speculation. Several theories have been advanced. Some assert that the object of the Germans is to move in a southerly direction towards Paris, while others maintain that the intention of the Germans is to use those ports as bases of operation against Great Britain.

The Question Considered.

Let us suppose that the latter is the case—that the invasion of Britain is included in the German plan of campaign—and let us also suppose that both Ostend and Calais are in German possession and huge numbers of men are massed at each of these places and at Antwerp ready to be transported to England. The question naturally arises: Can such a transmission be effected and, if effected, what chance will this army have in fighting its way to London? In a speech delivered in the House of Commons, May 11, 1905, on going into committee of supply on the civil service estimates, Class II., Mr. Balfour dealt with the question of the possibility or otherwise of an invasion of Great Britain by a foreign Power. He said, in that memorable speech, that the "Committee of Defence" had laid down a specific and concrete problem for discussion by their expert advisers, a problem which did not belong either to the hypothesis advocated by the extreme military school, which believed that invasion was possible, or by the extreme naval school, which maintained that invasion was impossible. Given that the army was abroad upon some oversea expedition and that our organized fleets were absent from the home waters, how could the enemy get across the Channel and land on English soil?

How Large an Army.

The first of the premises of the hypothesis is to a certain extent realized. The greater part of the British army is at present in France. As far as the fleet is concerned, though in home waters, it is tied up to the German coast, which is practically equivalent to being absent from home waters. Under these conditions, is it possible for the Germans to cross over to England in sufficiently large numbers to make an attempt at invasion at all advisable? As Mr. Balfour tells us, the German general has to consider not "How many men would I like to have in England in order to conquer it?" but "With how few men can I attempt the conquest?" Mr. Balfour proceeds: "The answer which was given by Lord Roberts and accepted by all the military critics which it was the duty of the Committee of Defence to consult, was that he did not think that it would be possible to make the attempt with less than 70,000 men; those men to be lightly equipped as regards artillery and as regards cavalry, because, of course, horses and guns are things which most embarrass the officers responsible for transport, embarkation and disembarkation. Now I make no pronouncement upon that figure of 70,000 men. I am not in a position to do so, but Lord Roberts was distinctly of opinion that even with 70,000 men to attempt to take London—which is, after all, what will have to be done if there were to be any serious impression or crushing effect produced—he was of opinion that that was in the nature of a forlorn hope."

Many Steamers Needed.

But then the difficulty arises as to how to transport those 70,000 men across the sea. It is estimated that a fleet of steamers of between 250,000 to 210,000 tons will be required to transport that force. But we fail to see how is Germany going to get those transports. All steamers flying the German flag are either in German harbours, which are being blockaded by the British fleet, or are tied up in neutral ports. But even assuming that the Germans succeeded in procuring the necessary number of transports, it surpasses our intelligence to comprehend how this mass of helpless transports could escape the attacks of torpedo boats and submarines. It takes at least twa days to disembark 70,000 men. The operation can only be made in calm weather when torpedo boats and submarines have the best chance to carry out their work of destruction.

"The thing is impossible," declared Mr. Balfour. "Conceive the position of the invading soldiers—the pick no doubt of the invader's army. It is not as if they were fighting for glory on a stricken field. Packed in these transports, commanded not by men of their navy, but by ordinary merchant captains, not knowing when or where the attack would take effect, knowing only that if it did take effect it would mean the sudden hurling into infinity of a whole helpless regiment of soldiers—Does anybody think that is an enterprise which would be undertaken by any sane person?"

WORLD'S GREATEST DANGER.

The destruction of the beautiful city of Louvain, the injury done to Rheims, shock the world. The worst danger is that a greater ruin may be wrought in the realms of ideas; that the whole thinking of the conquered people may be poisoned by Prussic acid.—Toronto Star.

OR CALL OUT THE FIRE

The disgust in which we have stepped reaches to our collar, but we will put up with the vile machinations of the double headed brood of the American press vipers for a little longer; then we will bring the German heel down upon their venomous heads!—Cologne Gazette.

So-o!

And all because the newspapers of this country persist in publishing the news of this war as it comes from all sides, and without fear or favour.

Evidently the Herr Herausgeber of the Cologne Gazette, like some of his compatriots on this side of the Atlantic, would have American newspapers confine themselves to the inventions upon which the German newspapers are being fed by the "Merry Wolff," as, to cite a few:—"Ireland seething with revolt," "Canada seething with revolt," "Sir John French a prisoner with entire staff," "England sues for peace," "Englishmen so ashamed they are becoming naturalized Germans," "America forming regiments for Germany." If they do not, for them the German heel. So-o-o-o!

The Herr Heransgeber should have been warned against wearing celluloid collars in times like these. His has exploded under the heat. Won't some kind friends relieve his misery by taking him by the heels and dumping him head foremost into a vat of beer? —New York Herald.

BELGIAN NEUTRALITY.

The announcements of Count Von Bernstorff which attempt to show that Belgian neutrality was only apparent and not real and that France and England were in that land before Germany, will not have much effect on public opinion in this country. In the first place these allegations on the side of German officials are balanced by similar statements denying them. The burden of proof is on the accuser, and in this connection we may recall that the Frankfurter Zeitung, or some other journal recently suggested that it might be advisable for the government to offer some proofs of the charges of the British violation of Belgian neutrality. But the mere proof that there were French or British soldiers in the land will not establish the claim of the violation of neutrality. If the soldiers were there with the consent of Belgium and with the determination to help Belgium protect its own neutrality, that is an entirely different matter. The question as put by Von Bethmann Holweg himself is simple. He admitted the infringement, and that it was also a violation of international law. He argued that military necessity came first and that indemnity could salve the injury. That is what made so poor an impression upon the people of this country.

Further, the claims of self-defence in this instance are also not very convincing, though there is no doubting the sincerity of those unofficially making them. For self-defence Germany would not have to invade Belgium. If she suspected a raid on her territory from that quarter, her soldiers could have been posted on her strong border and have defended the border in case of need. Then Germany would not have lost half the men she has already sacrificed, for the offensive is always more costly in men than the defensive. Besides, Italy would not have had any excuse for not coming to the assistance of her ally in the Dreibund. But when a declaration of war on Russia is followed by an invasion of Belgium, it is as hard to convince the average impartial outsider of the self-defence theory as it seems to be to convince Italy. These things are said without the least intention of violating the request of the president for the preservation of neutrality. Whatever provocation Germany may have had, which has not yet been made public, must have been sufficient in the opinion of its leaders. Judging by the unanimity of German opinion and of the wonderful enthusiasm for the war in all parties of the Fatherland, it must also seem sufficient to the people. The brutal candour of the chancellor before the invasion of Belgium is preferable, however, to the apologetics that have followed it. —Erie Dispatch.

EMPLOYERS AND THE COMPENSATION ACT

In answer to a correspondent asking the obligations of employers of labour under the Compensation Act, the following explanation may be given:

The employers pay roll statement is issued in accordance with the provisions of the Ontario Workmen's Compensation Act, which prescribes that every employer shall on or before (a certain date) prepare and transmit to the Board a statement in detail of the names and ages of all his employees and the amount of wages earned by each of them during the year then last past, verified by the statutory declaration of the employer or of the manager of the business, or where the employer is a corporation, by an officer of the corporation having a personal knowledge of the matters to which the declaration relates." This information is required by the Commission so that it may know the rate of wages an employee is receiving. In case of death by accident in the employ of a firm, it becomes liable for certain sums of money through the accidental fund of the commission to the man's dependents. Where permanent disability results from accident the amount of compensation to be paid shall be a weekly payment during the life of the workman equal to (a certain) per cent. of the average weekly earnings during the previous twelve months, if he has been so long employed, but if not, then for any less period during which he has been in the employ of his employer. Where an employee is only disabled for a certain time compensation will be given temporarily.

Employers are divided into two classes by the Act. The second class embraces public utilities, railways, telephone and telegraph companies, municipal corporations, etc. They are held individually liable to their employees. The first class, which embraces most of the trades of the Province, must contribute to the Government accident fund and shall not be held individually liable. For instance, an employee meets with an accident or fatality in a printing office. The employer is not held individually liable. He is practically insured in this accident fund and from it the employee receives compensation.

An employer is bound to obey the provisions of this Act just the same as he is bound to obey the other laws of the province. His obligation is, conjointly with other employers, to pay an employee compensation when he meets with accident or his dependents, when he is fatally injured.

This compensation is paid out of the accident fund of the Commission, to which the employer must contribute to meet the sums required for compensation. It is his insurance and that is why the Government asks for a pay roll statement.

U.S. Navy Is 42,000 Undermanned Says Mr. Gardner In Washington

Renews Warning to the Nation to Strengthen Its Defences—Past Wars and Peace Treaties Not Sufficient—Says U. S. Is a Very Bad Third Rate Naval Power.

MILITIA IS INEFFICIENT

WASHINGTON, D.C., Oct. 17. — Representative Augustus P. Gardner, of Massachusetts, in a speech on the floor of the House to-day made a stirring appeal for better military defences for the United States. He produced figures to prove an assertion that both the army and navy are so small that they could only put up a pitiful fight against foreign foes that might attack this country from the East or West. He declared that the present navy, "a very bad third," was 42,000 undermanned.

Mr. Gardner spoke in an effort to obtain the adoption of a resolution for a Congressional commission to investigate the nation's preparedness for war. This resolution he introduced yesterday.

He made a special appeal for a greater navy, asserting that in this branch of the military service the country can alone place its dependence. He said the people were in no mood to organize and maintain an immense standing army.

"For a dozen years I have sat here like a coward in silence and listened while men have told us how the United States can safely depend in time of war on the State militia and on the naval reserve," he said. "All the time I knew that it was not so.

"I am a former militiaman and I am a Spanish war veteran; yet I tell you now that any such doctrine is the supremest folly.

"Under that delusion in ten short years he have let our navy slough off until to-day it is a very bad third and sinking rapidly to fourth or fifth place among the navies of the world.

"Can't Improvise a Battle Ship."

"The belief held by the country that we can create an army and navy when the need arises is wrong from beginning to end. You can't improvise a battle ship, or a submarine or a torpedo or a sailor, after war breaks out. You can't make a fighting regiment out of a militia organization until you have eliminated a lot of men from its ranks.

"'Oh, yes,' you say, 'it is the same old story that we heard so often about the United States being unprepared for war.' Yes, my friend, it is a true old story. We were not prepared in 1898 when the Spanish-American War broke out, and we were not even prepared by the time it ended. The Spanish war was declared toward the end of April. There was a call for 125,000 volunteers at once and another call for 75,000 volunteers in May. Did these volunteers mobilize, equipped, with the rapidity of the wind? They certainly did not. A good many of them have not mobilized yet. Did you know that several of the States in this Union had not succeeded in furnishing their full quotas of troops when the Spanish war ended?

"If the gentleman from Pennsylvania, General Hulings, were present, he would tell you that he led his men into action at Coamo Railroad as late as August 9 with rifles in their hands which they had received but three days before. In July two regiments in Cuba actually went into action with antiquated short range rifles loaded with black powder cartridges. I believe that things are nearly as bad to-day.

Quotes Major General Wood.

"The Naval Board year after year dins in our ears the story of the unpreparedness of our navy. In report after report General Leonard Wood tells the like story of the army and he pleads with us to awaken from ur awful lethargy and grapple with this question, on which our nation's safety depends. Yet we go shambling and shuffling along, scattering away millions where the votes grow thickest, and in that respect I am just as bad as any one else.

"What possesses us? Are we blind or crazy? By no means; but every voter in this land has been taught to believe that at any minute we can create an army and a navy fit to face the world, and we do not like to tell them otherwise.

"We do not really believe in our hearts that the United States can 'lick al creation' without going into training. In our inmost souls we know very well that she can't; but we prefer to have some one else tell our constituents so.

"We have been salving our conscience by trying to persuade ourselves that no nation would be so mad as to attack the United States. Are we so sure of that fact any longer, my friends? Suppose some powerful nation finds itself inconvenienced by our Monric Doctrine. Will it hesitate to attack us because an idealistic statesman has devised a scheme for arbitration?

"The United States by the Monroe Doctrine has closed Mexico and South America to Colonization. The United States has indicated to the greatest military people which Asia has ever seen that she will have none of them within her borders. Perhaps these are selfish doctrines.

"So be it. In both doctrines I concur. For both doctrines I am ready to battle and ready to pay. I am willing to be called a dog in the manger, if you choose. However, I do not purpose, if I can help it, to be a toothless old dog with a noisy bark but no bite to correspond.

Where Efficiency Fails.

"I believe that our naval school at Annapolis leads the world. My race prejudice may incline me to the belief that English speaking races make a little the best sailors. Here our advantages end. An efficient officer and a competent seaman cannot make a 6-inch gun the equal of a 12-inch gun.

"Do you know how many men we need to man our present modest fleet and auxiliaries? About 100,000. Do you know how many we have? About 56,000 in the navy and 8,000 in the naval militia. In other words, we have 42,000 raw men to make sailors of before we can mobilize our fleet.

"You heard of the submarine which the German admiralty tells us destroyed three British cruisers with three successive torpedoes. Perhaps you think that we might do something of the sort. We might, perhaps, if we had torpedoes, but we have not got them. We only have about one thousand torpedoes where we ought to have ten times that number. As a matter of fact, we have just about one torpedo for each tube with which our ships are armed. It is almost as absurd as if we had only one projectile to each gun, except that torpedoes take a year to build and cost $1,000 each. In war time the approach of the enemy is ascertained by fast sea scouts. We own just three fast scouts, while Germany has five times as many and Great Britain has ten times as many.

"Great Britain has 42 dreadnoughts and dreadnought cruisers built and building. Germany has 28. We have 12.

"But some of you gentlemen tell us that dreadnoughts are out of date and that submarines are what we want. Great Britain has 64 submarines and we are fourth on the list with 28.

"So it goes. We are short of nearly every kind of vessel and of nearly every kind of armament, and the longer it takes to build them the shorter we seem to be.

"If our fleet cannot stop the enemy's fleet the enemy can land his troops wherever he wishes on our coast and we have no army with which to oppose him.

Cites Militia Inefficiency.

"Germany's war strength is 4,000,000 trained men. We have some 85,000 regulars and 120,000 militia, and no one else. Sixty per cent. of our militia last year failed to qualify, even as third class riflemen. Of this sixty per cent. fully one-half failed to participate in a rifle practice course at all.

"I have been unable to find the figures which show the small arms available for our army in time of war. I believe that we are fairly equipped with rifles, but General Wood, the chief of staff, in his report last year tells us of the 'alarming condition of shortage' in field artillery guns and ammunition.

"Of course it is evident that our main defence must be our navy. Our people are in no mood to listen to a suggestion of a huge standing army.

"Yet we can greatly increase our land forces without serious detriment to the taxpayers, and we can surely keep abreast with a plentiful supply of the most efficient artillery and the most modern engines of air warfare.

"The blame for our insecurity rests on republicans and democrats alike; but the root of the whole matter is deeper. The country has never yet been awakened to the understanding that 42-centimetre guns and superdreadnoughts present stronger arguments than past victories and present treaties. The time has come for us to rub our eyes and look about us."

What Happened to the Cats?

Not long ago the U. S. Gov't, made some experiments to determine the poisoning qualities of caffeine (the drug in tea and coffee).

Twenty-seven healthy cats were given an average dose of 5½ grains of caffeine—about as much of the drug as is contained in 2 or 3 cups of tea or coffee.

What do you suppose happened?

The Cats all Died

See Gov't. Bulletin No. 148, Bureau of Chemistry.

Of course they were only cats.

But there are plenty of people who dose themselves with enough caffeine every day to kill a cat and Cripple a Man, not at one blow, but by little blows repeated daily.

Of course some systems are strong enough to stand all kinds of abuse, but most systems are not. And when a man or women observes a growing nervousness or sleepness, heart trouble, stomach, bowel or eye disturbance, it is time to quit both tea and coffee and turn to a real food-drink, free from the drug, "caffeine."

It is easy to shift from tea or coffee to

GIRLS! DRAW A MOIST CLOTH THROUGH HAIR

Try This! Hair Gets Thick, Glossy, Wavy and Beautiful at Once

Immediate?—Yes? Certain?—that's the joy of it. Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a Danderine hair clease. Just try this.—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or excessive oil, and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair. A delightful surprise awaits those whose hair has been neglected or is scraggy, faded, dry, brittle or thin. Besides beautifying the hair, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair, but what will please you most will be after a few week's use when you see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair, and lots of it, surely get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and just try it.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

In view of the situation resulting from the war King Victor Emmanuel has signed a decree reducing Italy's import duties on cereals during the period from Oct. 20 to March 31, 1915.

Cecil Burtch, aged seven, son of Burton Burtch, Healey's Bay, near Kingston, was killed by the accidental discharge of a shotgun. He received the entire charge in his face and chest.

The number of prisoners of war at Fort Henry has now reached 260. One German started a small sized riot when he tried to line for dinner a second time, but the cook was able to handle him.

Brockville's new theatre was partially swept by fire which broke out in the basement and enveloped the dressing-rooms and stage, with a loss of $10,000. An asbestos curtain saved the auditorium.

The negotiations between the Canadian and British Governments in reference to the prohibition of the exportation of raw wool from the United Kingdom have resulted in a satisfactory arrangement.

A privileged character at the provincial asylum, Elijah Hamilton, was found dead on the property of W. J. Lord on the top of Hamilton's mountain Sunday. The unfortunate man had hanged himself to a tree.

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

Flush Your Kidneys Occasionally if You Eat Meat Regularly

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clog the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage, or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a teaspoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

TO CRUSH MILITARISM.

Irishmen Take Solemn Vow To Stand By Britain In War.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—Amid tumultuous cheering, with right hands upraised, the Irish Nationalists, who crowded Central Hall last night, adopted a pledge administered by T. P. O'Connor:

"We will never sheath the sword until Belgium has got back her freedom; until every inch of her soil is clear; until a treaty is made, not on a scrap of paper, but on a foundation behind which stands the millions of the British race."

The meeting was called for the purpose of expressing confidence in the leadership of John Redmond and to endorse the action of the Irish party in supporting "the war of the allies against Prussian militarism."

Mr. O'Connor said that for this fundamental and supreme principle, the British had fought on hundreds of battlefields. What they had claimed and won for themselves they also claimed for other countries and would help other countries win.

PROPHESYING A SPLIT.

German Faction In Russia Impotent Says M. Sazonoff.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 20. — (Via London.)—M. Sazonoff, the Russian Minister of Foreign Affairs, yesterday in a statement to the Associated Press clearly defined Russia's attitude toward the allies, and her stand against German. The statement, M. Sazonoff said, was made because of attempts by the reactionary party in Russia to bring discord and awaken anti-British sentiment.

Recent avowals by this small element, as reflected in a few reactionary journals, M. Sazonoff declared, went so far as to compliment Emperor William and laud the Hohenzollern family. They alluded exultingly, he said, to the fall of Antwerp as the approaching end of the war, adversely criticized England by stating that she was setting other countries to fight her battles, and also plainly forecast an Anglo-Russian rupture.

"This small German element," said M. Sazonoff, "is wholly unrepresentative of Russia, and negligible, as far as Russian policy is concerned."

LONDON, Ont., Oct. 20. — In accordance with instructions received from Ottawa yesterday, the organization of a full regiment of infantry, 1,015 men, with reinforcements of 17 per cent., will be proceeded with immediately in the first military division. This city will be headquarters and training ground for Western Ontario, pending departure over seas.

Many Austrians Arrested.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Oct. 20.—Two hundred and eighty-six Austrians, who have not signed naturalization papers, were rounded up here by the local militia.

Most of these have come to the Soo within the past few weeks. Of this number twelve men emphatically expressed their intentions of going back to Austria to fight for their country. They are now being held prisoners at the canal camp.

They would rather take the chance of a couple of days' work a week in the city.

THREE THINGS TO BE AVOIDED

There are three things Canadians should studiously avoid: First, letting their fears run away with their fancies and foster panic among their fellows; second, abusing one another during the the conflict for the Empire's failure to be ready for a world-wide struggle; and third, comparing the relative merits of the soldiery of the allies to the discredit of either British or French troops. Anyone whose conduct violates these three rules is helping the enemy. National pride should not override a generous appreciation of what our allies are doing. The British soldiers have added to the glories of our military traditions, but they are acing under the orders of a French commander-in-chief, whose strategy, if anybody's, will gain the victory. And that victory would be impossible if the soldiers of France were not fighting in numbers ten times greater than the British forces at present in France, with a dash and determination worthy of the veterans of Napoleon.—Toronto Star.

Mr. Jos. Wearing Receives Word of The Death of a Friend Killed In France

Mr. Jos. Wearing has received a letter lined with pathos from a friend in Liverpool telling of the death in action of T. Kirby Jones, M.R.V.S. He was a veterinary surgeon attached to one of the cavalry regiments fighting in France. The letter was written by the sister of the young hero, and illustrates the spirit in which the people of the Old Land are giving up their burdens for their King and country. The letter follows with the story of the burial as forwarded by the chaplain of the forces. The body was interred with military honours in a cemetery at Versailles.

Gwalia,
Cardigan,
South Wales.

Dear Mr. Wearing,—I have very sad news to write. This terrible war has cost us a heavy toll, for it has taken our dear Kirby. It is a great blow to us, but we cannot but feel proud that he gave his best, his life, for his country. We know nothing of the wounds he received. At the time a wire came stating that he had been wounded, and a few days later another came stating that he had died. I am enclosing with this letter a copy of a letter which the chaplain wrote to mother. Naturally she is feeling the great trial keenly, but is bearing up bravely. One day we hope to see the little wooden cross which marks so sacred a spot to us.

Very sincerely yours,
RINA JAMES.

No. 4 General Hospital, British Army, Versailles, France, Sept. 21, 1914.

Dear Madam,—You will have heard already from here of the death of your brave son, who has given his life for his country, but I think you will like me to write and tell you of his funeral, which took place this morning. It was carried out with full military honours and a large guard was present of French Dragoons and Infantry; a great number of French officers were also there and also the Colonel commanding and the Major of this hospital. At the close of the service a French Colonel spoke a few touching words of the services rendered by your son to his own country and to ours. I know, too, that you will be touched to hear that several wreaths of flowers were sent by French people here.

The grave is in a beautiful cemetery on the outskirts of the town, the Cimitiere des Gouards, which lies on the slope of a hill and is surrounded by trees; it is in a portion of the cemetery which has been reserved for the British soldiers and will soon be marked by a plain wooden cross bearing your son's name.

I am enclosing a small piece of heather which I picked this morning within a few yards of the grave.

May I be allowed to express my deep sympathy with you in your great sorrow; it is my earnest prayer that the God of all comfort will Himself comfort you.

Believe me, yours sincerely,
(Signed) H. W. FOX,
Acting Chaplain to the Forces,
No. 4 General Hospital.

Fate Picked Him Out Of a Group Of Soldiers.

LONDON, Oct. 19. — A letter received in London to-day from an officer friend of Major-General Hubert Hamilton, whose body has been brought to England, tells how the British general met his end on the French battlefield.

"He was standing with a group in a covered place," the officer writes, "when a shrapnel shell burst 100 yards away. A bullet pierced General Hamilton's temple and he was killed on the spot. No other member of the group was scratched.

"It was a fine death, but I know how the general would have felt to be taken before his work was done."

The funeral service, the officer adds, was held while shells were bursting all around. The din was so great that the chaplain's voice was drowned.

Wounded Austrians Under Knife Without Chlorform

Vienna Hospitals So Crowded Hundreds of Sufferers Go Unattended--Dysentry and Cholera Spreading

ROME, Oct. 19—It is learned here that the Vienna hospital surgeons and assistants and even the reserves of the Ambulance Corps, are exhausted by continued efforts in tending the innumerable wounded that have been brought to the Austrian Capital. So serious is the situation that operations are now being performed daily without the administration of chloroform, as the time cannot be spared for the anesthetic, the wounded being too numerous.

Wounded Wander Streets.

Hundreds of wounded men wander through the streets day and night, begging for food and drink and clothing. They cannot be attended to in the dispesaries, and their wounds go undressed for days.

Cholera is rife, but dysentry has made even worse invasions upon the populace, civil and military. In fear of the further spread of disease the city has been closed against all refugees from whatever quarter.

The city's population, doubting the truth of the carefully warded official announcements, or the bombastic claims of the press despatches, are besieging the War Office for news, for the truth. They know that things are far worse than the official announcements declare.

Wounded Refuse Decorations.

Many of the wounded have refused to accept decorations, even at the hands of the aged Emperor himself, and he has been told by some, the story goes, that he should be one of the wounded, and not parading through the streets and the hospitals. The aristocracy of Austria seem to be indifferent to the country's fate, and in common with the rest of the peops they have come to look upon Germany as the nation's only hope of salvation in this crisis. The anti-German section of the population is being more strongly repressed than ever.

Lower Rent For Merchants

One of the interests that has felt the money stringency very severely is that of the landlord. Owners of houses in hundreds of cases have been compelled to reduce their rentals in order to keep their houses occupied. With it all, the merchant, the man with the big rent to pay, has as yet found no relief. His receipts have fallen in some cases to a very appreciable extent, but his exenses have remained the same. The consequence is, he is unable to reduce the prices of his goods as a means of helping trade over the war stringency and it is a serious problem for both merchant and people to face. It is said there is an organized effort being made by the merchants to endeavour to induce the large interests to lighten the rent burden in view of present conditions.

Economy of fuel consumption in steamships often requires the mixing of two or more kinds of coal, and an Englishman has invented a coaling barge that mixes coal as it delivers it into the bunker.

CANADIAN SADDLES ARE BEST

OTTAWA, Oct. 19.—Mr. Fred Stobart, purchasing agent for the British Government, arrived in Ottawa today and had a long conference with Hon. Robert Rogers, chairman of the purchasing committee, and other members of the Cabinet. A number of manufacturers and contractors who are in the capital also met Mr. Stobart.

Canadian Oats and Hay.

When the war broke out the British authorities asked the Canadian Government to act as its purchasing agent. A sub-committee of the Cabinet consisting of Hon. Robert Rogers, chairman, Sir George Foster, Hon. Frank Cochrane, Hon. A. E. Kemp and Hon. J. D. Reid was appointed to look after this work and acting under instructions purchased enormous quantities of oats and hay for the army which was shipped direct to France.

Buy Saddlery and Shoes.

Mr. Stobart has arrived in Canada to make arrangements for the letting of large contracts for saddlery, heavy clothing, shoes and other supplies. These contracts, along with those to be let by Canada and contracts from the French and Russian Governments, will give a tremendous filip to many Canadian industries and will keep many factories working full time all winter.

Canadian Goods the Best.

Mr. Stobart, although living in London now, is a former well-known Winnipegger. The French purchasing agent has let heavy contracts for saddlery for both the French and Russian Governments. He decided after consultation with the militia officials to use the Canadian style of saddle which is cheaper and less elaborate than the French army saddle.

CANADIAN KITCHENER LEAGUE MEETS

The president of the Canadian Kitchener League requests all members to be present at the regular meeting this evening at the Y. M. C. A. at eight o'clock. The League will be addressed by the secretary of the Y. M. C. A. and Mrs. McIlhenny.

"ADVERTISE IN THE NEWSPAPERS"

"For too long has the retailer been ignored by the manufacturer, except as the natural means of disposing of his goods," he said. "This should not be so, but the producer should do all in his power to sell the goods for the retailer by creating a demand, before trying to unload his commodities on him.

"The only way to stir up this demand is to advertise," he continued He then related how, in one city, where a canvass of 1,040 women was made to ascertain why a special line of cereal was asked for more than other varities, it was found that the great influences governing this demand for one line was due partly to the salesman, but more especially to newspaper advertising. He emphasized this latter means of bringing goods before the attention of possible buyers.

"Too many store-keepers rely on their location or on their goods to draw business. This is not adequate. Do not wait for people to come to your store, gentlemen," he said, "but advertise in the newspapers, and by so doing create such a demand for your particular line to the exclusion of your competitors that business will naturally double and treble.

"There is still a great deal of educating necessary in Hamilton to make its merchants realize to the full extent the true value and power of advertising. I do not think it is due to a lack of will or capital, but an utter lack of vision or foresight,' he concluded. (Extract from J. M. Kirkwood's address before the Hamilton Ad. Club.)

THE LIFE OF A WATCH

It should be cleaned and oiled once a year. Many good watches are allowed to go without cleaning and oiling, and the result is the oil is entirely dried up, the pivots become cut and rusted so badly that it costs nearly as much as a new movement to put it in proper condition again. The old saying "A stitch in time saves nine" holds good.

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH WAS CROWDED TO HEAR FIRST OF DR. GORDON'S ADDRESSES

Subject Was the "Greatest Mistake in the Life of a Young Woman"

SPLENDID MUSIC

The meeting in St. Paul's Church last night, which was addressed by the Rev. Dr. Gordon, formerly of Winnipeg, was scheduled to start at 7:45 o'clock. But some minutes before that time the church was crowded to capacity and numerous chairs and other emergency accommodations were taxed to the limit. This will suffice to give an idea of the crowd that listened to Dr. Gordon and testify to the judgment of the advertising, and the reputation which Dr. Gordon has won for himself, formerly as pastor of the Central Congregational Church, Winnipeg, and later as a touring lecturer. But the rapt attention with his discourse was heard, and anifest interest taken in his re- by the hundreds of people in dience spoke eloquently of the s address last night was regard- local people. Dr. Gordon has advertised as the noted orator fr Winnipeg, and last night, to rever to the vernacular he more than "produced the goods."

Mr. Greenlaw, the bass soloist, who has in the brief space of two days already found favour with the majority of the city's music lovers, and Mr. Edouard Hesselberg, the well-known pianist, assisted with instrumental and vocal contributions to the music of the evening. It is superfluous to say that they were well received for they are artists of such admitted standing in the realm of music, and of such evident merit that had it been otherwise the reflection would have been on the musical judgment of the congregation rather than on the artists themselves.

Before Dr. Gordon spoke, Mr. G. N. Gordon, City Solicitor, explained to those present the purpose of the free will offering that would be taken up. He explained that Dr. Gordon had given up his charge in Winnipeg at a great personal inconvenience and had come to Peterborough without any guarantee of funds. Mr. Greenlaw and Mr. Hesselberg were both in the same position. Very high-priced musicians they had come to associate with Dr. Gordon without any definite guarantee at of course personal inconvenience and financial loss. Mayor Buller welcomed Dr. Gordon and introduced him.

In opening Dr. Gordon explained that Christian citizenship was not a matter that had to do with the voting element alone. It was not for young men or old men, but for everybody. Therefore it was for the women as well as for the men, and for the men as well as for the women.

In emphasizing the place of the fair sex in his platform of Christian citizenship, Dr. Gordon said that the highest ideal and the highest metaphor was women at the moment of her supreme joy. Civilizations could be graded by the position of women in the national life. The Christian womanhood of the Anglo-Saxon civilization was the highest type of womanhood in all history.

When Ann Bolleyn approached the execution block she brushed aside the arms of the executioner who was about to blindfold her. She wanted to see the block and the platform and the instruments of death. She wanted to go to her death with her eyes open. Would to God she had faced the circumstances of her life with the same frankness and courage that she faced the circumstances of her death. If she had she might not have come to that untimely and tragic end.

The intelligent young woman will never sneer at Christianity. Christianity has done more for woman than any other religion in the world. If Christianity had but one friend in the world that friend should be a woman. "I am absolutely amazed," said the speaker. "When I find woman indifferent to the Church, and things immortal."

Reverting to the question of the companionship of young men and young women, Dr. Gordon said that he had no doubt the young men of this community were just as good and high and noble as they needed to be. There was not a young man seeking to travel the higher road who could not find a pure and sweet young woman to travel it with him—but there was not a young man on the downward path that could not find some feminine fool to lead him on.

Young women should beware of the vindictive spirit. If they did not and nourished a spiteful disposition all the beauty would go out of their lives and features, and they would find themselves, like Queen Elizabeth, angry with her mirror, herself, and the world. O for a womanhood that was beautiful, but there was no real beauty that was not founded in love.

Any girl who takes wine outside of her own home is on dangerous ground—according to Dr. Gordon. In developing this thought he told a number of heart-rending anecdotes in which young girls had allowed themselves to be persuaded to partake of liquors outside of their home and in public restaurants. He told of how Kipling was so impressed when he saw two young men leading two bright young girls intoxicated out of a restaurant that he said to himself "From this moment I am prohibitionist. Girls should be careful how their wills were surrenedered to another. When a girl was under the influence of liquor her will was surrendered, her character was in danger and her person was not safe.

It was a mistake for a girl to be careless in her correspondence with young men. He told of a case where a young woman had trusted a certain young man and poured out her heart to him in a letter. He had been seen showing the letters to others of his friends and laughing over its contents with them.

The fifth admonition was that young women ought never to accept gifts from young men, which were beyond their financial ability. One could pick up the paper and read, night after night, of some poor fellow being sentenced to Kingston penitentiary for five years or for a longer or shorter term, for forgery. Think of the mother, and father, the grief of the family. Think of the blighted young life. One of the saddest moments of the speaker's life was one day, when he was present, when the news was broken to a mother that her son had been sentenced to ten years in prison. He was the son of a cultured mother and a handsome father, and what suffering his wrong doing had caused them. "My girl," said Dr. Gordon, "you have something to do with that." He entreated them to refuse such gifts, reminding them that every time a girl said "no" she may have done much to save a mother's heart from torture, and turn a young life to the path of eternal life. A "heartless flirt" was the cheapest creature who ever asked consideration of the world. The girl who, knowing that a man really and truly loves her, leads him on and then makes his love a subject of laughter and mockery behind his back, is truly despicable. She belongs to the worst class of flirts. She may lead the man on to the point of proposing to her, mefely for the gratification of boasting how she had rejected him. She may easily be the cause of the wreck of that man's life.

The greatest mistake in the life of a young woman was to allow her conscience to be sacrificed to her affections. He illustrated this with several touching stories and urged upon the young ladies to have no relationship which she could not acknowledge.

In concluding, Dr. Gordon submitted that a young woman should have appreciation of the sacrifices of her parents. Some girls were kind to everybody else but their mother. And, lastly, a young woman should never renounce public Christian sentiment. "Don't say I don't care what people say, for if you don't care now the time will come when you will."

It was announced that Dr. Gordon will speak to-night on "The Meanest Man in Peterborough."

WILLS HIS "DEAD" BODY FOR "VIVISECTION" (SIC).

That Is, Provided Medical College Wants It and Will Pay Freight From Chicago.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 17. — Mingling the uncanny with the paradoxical, Martin McGerkin, of Chicago, has willed his "dead" body to the Los Angeles Medical College for "vivisection."

McGerkin's relatives in Los Angeles, as well as Dr. George F. Bovard, President of the University of Southern California, of which the College of Medicine to which McGerkin evidently referred in the letter telling of his weird but impossible bequest is a part, expressed considerable surprise when they learned of his plan.

They were informed of the man's intention after the Examiner received from him the following, which was dated at Chicago.

"Gents—I have willed my dead body to Los Angeles Medical College for vivisection, providing they want it and desire to pay the freight. My body will be ready for them (college) in about one week from date.

M. M'GERKIN."

POLES MAY CRIPPLE GERMAN OFFENSIVE

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—In to-day's review of the war situation in Europe The Herald's military critic says:

Reports from the eastern theatre of operations disclose one fact which, in view of the rapid approach of winter, might be regarded as having considerable significance. It is that while not presenting an open resistance to the German troops in Poland, the Poles have adopted tactics which will interfere seriously with the military strength of the Germans. According to the reports German lines of communication have been harassed, and in the many concealed ways in which a hostile people can annoy an invader the Poles have played havoc with detached parties of German soldiery.

May Cripple German Offensive.

Reprisals by the Germans in such a territory can avail them little, and while such resistance on the part of the inhabitants cannot endanger seriously the invading force as a whole, the adoption by the Poles of guerilla tactics will weaken considerably, if not cripple, the German offensive. The news from Poland at once recalls vividly the elements which were factors in the ignominious crumbling of the Turkish offensive in Macedonia and Thrace, during the late Balkan campaign.

While the Bulgarian army was hammering away at the Turks before Kirkkalisseh and Lule Burgas the guerilla warriors did not prove themselves to be of remarkable assistance to the trained troops. It was later, when the Turks attempted an orderly retreat, that their columns were shattered utterly by the Komitadjis, the hillmen, whose knowledge of the topography of the country proved fatal to thousands of the Sultan's soldiers.

Remember Napoleon's "Promise."

The reports from Poland are important also in that while they never took kindly to Russian rule, the Poles regard administration of their affairs from Petrograd as preferable to the rule of Berlin. More than a hundred years ago an invader passed through their country and promised to free them from Russian domination. Poland then acquired nothing save the desolation of property and the loss of many of her sons who fell in the disastrous retreat of Napoleon's grand army.

Meanwhile, although there has been considerable activity at various points along the entire three hundred mile battle front, extending from the Carpathian range through Galicia north into Poland and to east Prussia, the torrential rains and sleet storms of early winter, which sweep the district at this period of the year, undoubtedly have interfered seriously with military operations.

Must Wait for Frost.

It will be necessary, therefore, before either side will be able to deliver an attack in force, to wait for the advent of the frost to harden the surface of the vast stretches of swamp land and morass. The proper disposition of troops, especially artillery, where the roads are few, and at this time of the year practically impassable, is an impossibility.

In the meantime there will ensue between the two opposing armies a contest of endurance. It is certain that a large portion of the men in the field, especially the younger and inexperienced soldiers, will perish as a result of the hardships.

The measure of this loss will be restricted by the status of efficiency attained by the service troops of both sides and what provisions have been made to ensure the health of the men in the field.

Even the most perfect corps of army service troops, however, could not prevent a considerable loss in an army of such size where an active defensive must be maintained along such an extended front.

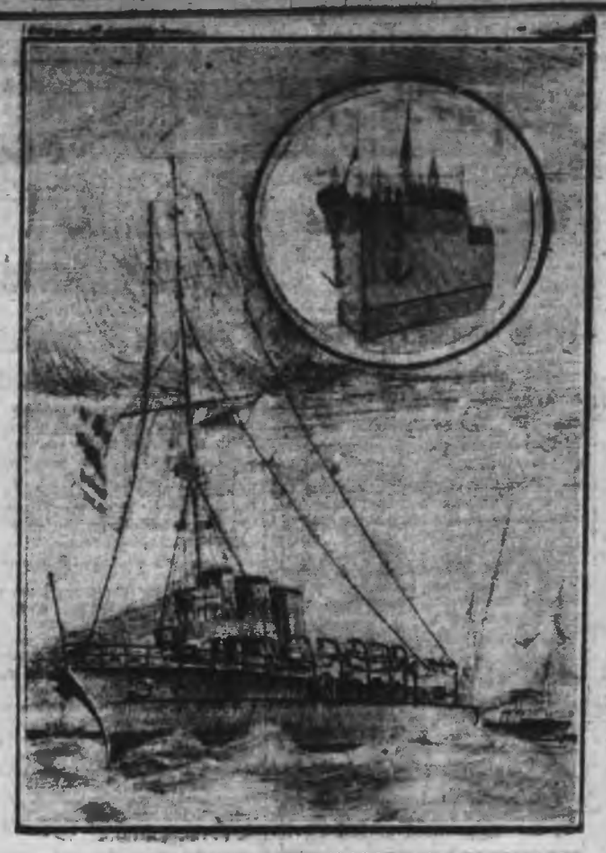
In the western theatre, also, snow has made its appearance, but while the Franco-British forces and the Germans in France and Belgium will have to endure the discomforts of living in the field through a winter campaign the winter in France is not as severe as in East Prussia, Poland and Galicia. Besides the supply trains in the west can be operated with much greater facility than across the desolate stretches where the armies of the east are fighting.

Live in Comparative Comfort.

Along the greater part of the front from the Channel almost to the Swiss frontier, there is not likely to be any material change in the line before spring. On both sides of this line the defending troops will take their positions behind the works in reliefs, the remainder resting in the shelters, which will most likely take the form of corrugated iron huts, heated by stoves. In these cantonments the men will live in comparative comfort.

Instead of the extended drives eastward of the German forces in Belgium, following the fall of Antwerp and the release of the troops necessary to maintain the lines of communication while the fortress was still in Belgian hands the Germans have lost ground almost daily in the campaign in northern France and Belgium. From Hazebrouck, near the Belgian frontier, which they held with a force of cavalry less than a week ago, they have been forced eastward to Lille, a distance of 25 miles. The latest victory won by the allies in this field was at Armentieres.

On the other hand the Germans were forced northward from Furnes in Belgium and the troops that inflicted the defeat were none other than the Belgians who do not seem to have wasted much time in resting as was reported.



NEW OIL BURNER CRUISER UNDAUNTED.— The latest hero ship of the British fleet which sank four German torpedo boat destroyers and later captured a German mine layer off the Dutch coast. It is one of the Arethusa class of oil burners launched only a few months ago. They are the cheapest, lightest, and fastest warships ever built, and this combined with the absence of smoke, enables these ships to sneak up on almost anything afloat, without being noticed.

General Hit By Shrapnel.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—A letter received in London yesterday from an officer friend of Maj.-Gen. Hubert Hamilton, whose body has been brought to England, tells how the British general met his end on the French battlefield.

"He was standing with a group in a covered place," the officer writes, "when a shrapnel shell burst 100 yards away. A bullet pierced Gen. Hamilton's temple and he was killed on the spot. No other member of the group was scratched."

Austrian Fleet Driven to Cover.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph from Rome says advices received in the that city from Cettinje, Montenegro, state that the Austrian fleet in the harbor of Cattaro, Dalmatia, attempted to escape Sunday and break through the French fleet blockading the port. The despatch adds that the Austrians were promptly driven back into the harbor.

Two New Men On The Force

The Police Commissioners met yesterday afternoon at half past five o'clock and Chief Thompson reported the death of P. C. Wm. Patterson. There were two applications for the position now vacant on the Police force, from Alex. Ridd and W. H. Peryer. The former's application was accepted and he was appointed on the police force. W. H. Peryer's application was held in case a future vacancy arises.

The Chief wrote that in accordance with the authority given him he had appointed James McCarty on the force to succeed G. F. Hayward. He also reported that for the winter certain additions to the wardrobe of the department would have to be made. He was authorized to make the necessary purchases, which include four suits, and some fur caps.

Barrie's Furs Cheaper Than Last Year

¶ BUY PETERBOROUGH MADE FURS. Keep your money circulating at Home—Keep your town's people employed—While nearly all lines of Merchandise show a tendency to rise in price, Furs are cheaper than for many years.

It will pay you to Buy your Coat or Set now

And in Peterborough, at BARRIES the saving between the price asked now and what we had to ask last year is considerable.

¶ Do not think that only by the announcement of a "Special Sale"—you can be sure of getting the advantage of this season's lower prices. Marking goods at last year's values and then reducing them to this year's figure, may show you the exact amount of the saving, but we consider such a method misleading. We have only one price on our Furs and that is

THIS SEASON'S LOW PRICE

We can tell you exactly how much more a certain piece of Fur was worth last year, but we never say: "This was $150.00 reduced to $100.00." We mark a garment $100.00, that is its value this season and it cannot, under any circumstances, be called a $150.00 article.

¶ We will sell any of our Furs with the explicit understanding that they may be returned and the purchase price refunded (provided the Furs have not been worn), if a comparison of values leads you to believe that lower prices obtain elsewhere.

FACTORY—PETERBOROUGH

ARE SWAMPED WITH INQUIRIES

OTTAWA, Oct. 19.— There are two subjects which are rather tender ones to the officials of the Department of Trade and Commerce these days. One is the subject of pit props and the other apples. Mention pit props and apples and the officials throw up their hands in a helpless, surrendering way.

Pit props are the timber used in the great British collieries. Some twenty tons are used weekly, so that the demand is enormous. The supply in the past has come almost entirely from Sweden and Norway and Russia. The war has cut off that source of supply and the British mining men have turned to Canada as a new field for pit props.

There were appeals for pit props printed in the Weekly Trade Report, while a commission came to Canada to report on the possibility of a permanent source of supply. Letters started to roll into the Trade and Commerce Department, these letters started others and the correspondence accumulated like a great snowball. Officials, clerks and stenographers worked long into the night answering letters on pit props.

Inquiry List Grew.

It was like "pigs in pigs." The files grew to such proportion, the daily mail has so increased that the officials have capitulated. It is announced that it is impossible at present to answer all the letters and inquiries, as is explained that it has been established that Canada has an almost inexhaustible supply of pit props. The supply is so great that it is doubtful if it would be possible for inland points to compete with districts near the salt water. Inland freight rates are too high to meet prices nearer the ocean successfully. Those who have not heard are asked at present to accept this explanation.

The British Commission has returned from a visit to Newfoundland, where they found immense quantities of suitable timber, while prices are low and Newfoundland with its favourable water location, can ship cheaply. It is certain Newfoundland will be able to supply a portion of the British demand. The Maritime Provinces will also be drawn up. The Commission is now going to British Columbia to investigate the pit prop resources of that Province.

Booklet on Apples.

To return to apples. When it was apparent that Canada was to have a super-abundant apple crop with a confined market owing to the war, Sir George Foster decided to institute an apple campaign throughout the Dominion to encourage the apple eating habit. A firm of expert advertisers was consulted, and they undertook a Dominion-wide campaign. Sir George has no doubts now it pays to advertise. He and the [illegible] have been deluged with correspondence, principally feminine, in regard to how, when and where to buy apples, the best apples to purchase, etc., etc., ad infinitum. It was advertised that a booklet would be distributed free giving two hundred apple recipes. So far there are twenty thousand requests for the booklet and the department has been swamped with the extra work.

FUNERAL OF JOS. JEFFERSON

The flag hung half past this morning on the Fire Hall and the bell of the City clock tolled when the funeral cortege of the late Fireman Joseph Jefferson, left the residence, Aylmer Street and proceeded to St. Peter's Cathedral. The fire hose waggon was draped in black, and containing floral tributes of the friends of the deceased, formed part of the processions. Alderman Green, chairman of the Fire committee, Alderman Duffus, Adj. McElhiney, Chief Thompson, Chief Howard and others were present and the firemen and the police walked in a body. At the Cathedral mass was sung by Rev. Fr. Phelan and at the grave the Rev. Fr. McGinnity officiated. The pallbearers comprised firemen, two police officers and two members of the Hibernians, several members of the last mentioned organization being present.

In the passing of Mr. Jefferson, the brigade loses one of its most popular members; all the men concur that he will be greatly missed.

EDMUNDS SAYS HARDY CAN'T THROW HIM ONCE IN AN HOUR

And Pocket Hercules Has Money to Back His Claim---Possibility That the Featherweights Will Settle Their Differences in Peterborough.

After the wrestling bout in Brock Street rink the other night Alf Hardy, the English wrestler, expressed confidence that he could throw Artie Edmunds, the Toronto wrestler, four times in an hour and offered to back himself up to $500. Jack Forbes, who went to Toronto on Saturday, called Edmunds' attention to Hardy's statement, with the result that the Examiner received the following letter this morning:

185 Jarvis Street, Toronto.

Sporting Editor Examiner:

In answer to Alf Hardy's challenge to throw Artie Edmunds, the Pocket Hercules, four times in an hour, I, Jack Forbes, on behalf of Edmunds, do hereby accept same and will cover all the money Hardy can find that he can't even throw Edmunds once in an hour.

BOSTON BRAVES ARE RECEIVING SOME JUST RECOGNITION NOW

BOSTON, Oct. 19—There are two facts about this recent world series aside from the final verdict which stand out above all others and should be put down as undisputed. To verify our weary judgment on these points after the game we put them up to Johnny Evers, Jack Coombs, Hugh Jennings and Wild Bill Donovan—all world series veterans — and all four agreed that the said facts were eminently correct.

Th first is that the Mackmen, despite four straight defeats, played the best ball ever put up by the beaten club in a world series fight.

The second is that the Braves played the best four world series games, including all departments, ever played since Boston and Pittsburg started the world series warfare eleven seasons ago—back in the days of 1903. These are important points in plumbing the depths of a piercing mystery that baffled the civilized world and some parts of Europe. For the size of this mystery and the amazing bulk thereof can be understood from these figures:

The Mackmen had been in three world series and had won all three. They had fought in sixteen world series games and had twelve victories against four defeats. Yet, here comes a young ball club along, starting its first world series and it beats the Mackmen as often in four days as the Giants and Cubs together were able to beat them in three years.

Briefly, here is a great ball club, great in brain power, experience and speed and in four test games it is outbatted outpitched, outguessed, out played and outfought. There are exactly two answers to this tangled state of affairs, viz.:

1.—The winning club that turned the trick must also be a great ball club—far greater in actual physical properties than any one aside from Stallings has given it credit for being. And the Braves are exactly this—not a grand ball club, but a great ball club, built upon wonderful pitching, miraculous fielding alert work on the bases and a keen, aggressive attack that has more of the cut of a rapier than the power of a battle axe.

2.—Exactly eight hours and forty-eight minutes were required to finish all four games. This totals 28,280 seconds. And in every throbbing, fleeting second of the 28,280 employed from Friday afternoon to Tuesday's dusk the Braves were fighting and working as no ball club ever fought before. Not for one second out of more than 28,000 seconds did they cease an untiring, agressive assault. They never quit playing baseball and all the baseball they knew how to play from the moment that Moran fouled out to McInnis at 2 o'clock on Friday until McInnis died from Deal to Schmidt at 3.55 on Tuesday afternoon.

All of which brings up another most interesting drift of psychology. The Mackmen in past years have always been praised for their ability to take each world series as an ordinary occasion and to face each battle without a flutter in their stolid, untroubled way.

The Mackmen went up to play a better game than they knew how to play—than any other world series club ever played before, and they made good. They resented the widespread opinion that they were joke champions; and they were wrought up over Mack's feud with Stallings. Between these two emotions they started at top speed from the first gun and for four days they fought with greater ferocity and with greater energy than any ball club in the sixty-year history of the game had ever shown.

You've heard before of "college spirit." But for three months in their own league, and all through this series, these wild-eyed Braves made college spirt look pallid and insipid, and absolutely uninspired. No Yale or Harvard of Princeton or Michigan football team ever went into four successive battles with the spirit these Braves have shown. It wasn't sport with them, and it wasn't business. It was war.

They say that all the game is commercialized. Yet when some outsider suggested that 2,000 additional seats be placed in centre field to net the players $2,000 more, Johnny Evers' reply was this. "To h—l with the extra $2,000 or $200,000. We are out there to win this series, and we want to take no chances on a cramped field." And every member of Stallings' club backed their Captain up.

Beat a club like this? With what? The cry of other clubs when things were looming darkly has been this: "Well, we'll get 'em to-morrow." Boston's war cry was: "We'll get 'em now." And what's even more — they got 'em, and they kept on getting 'em until the picking was clean.

In this remarkable series, John Franklin Baker hit no home runs. He batted exactly .250, and he got one two-base hit. Collins fell even below this. But while Mack's stars were subsiding, Hank Gowdy topped all past Bakerian records with three doubles, a triple, a home run and the bulky average of .555. Gowdy broke all world series slugging marks and set new figures that will stand for quite a spell. Back of Gowdy came Johnny Evers, the redoubtable Trojan, who, in addition to playing grand ball at second base and driving in more runs than any other man batted .425. Johnny put it all over his great rival. Eddie Collins, who played good ball, but slipped a trifle at the finish. The game little Trojan looked fagged out Tuesday night, but his smile completely circled his brainy dome.

For the first time in their career, Collins and Barry, as a team, were outplayed around second and short. Barry played brilliantly—but no more so than the midget Maranville, and the combined effort of the Brave stars was above the combined result obtained by the two great Mackmen. The duel at short between Barry and Maranville was one of the big features of the series. Both did wonderfulwork, but Maranville gained a slight edge when, in the sixth round yesterday, Collins started a rally by stinging one over second. It was the last Mackian chance, and Maranville swinging far back of the bag, made a miracle play and killed the blow with an amazing stop. This shot tore down the last Athletic fort and broke up the game.

"They'll get Rudolph the next time he starts," was the cry after Dick had beaten them in the first game. For five innings they hammered away, and got one run. Then Rudolph settled, and for the last four rounds, not a hit was made against his brainy work. Another feature not to be overlooked was the play of Butch Schmidt at first base. McInnis played great ball—but Stuffy was expected to shine. Not so much was expected of Schmidt, but the big Brave furnished one of the finest exhibitions of first base play ever seen. He was not only steady, but in each game he made at least one star play that averted impeding trouble.

In a rambling conclusion, it might be just as well to make some mention of the man who put the machine in motion and carried it on through—of the man who predicted last Friday morning that his club would win four straight games or four out of five at least. Two years ago George Stallings had charge of a tail-ender back in July. Yet within less than three months he had so inspired and reorganized this club that it won a National League pennant and cleaned up the best ball club in the game without a defeat.

"You fellows," said Stallings, "thought I was whistling my way through a graveyard. But I knew before the first ball was pitched I had the better machine—that I had the better pitching, the better batting, the better fielding, and that in addition I had the greatest fighting ball club that ever lived—and I bar none of them from 1888 to 1914. I've seen clubs that had fighters on it before, but I never saw a club that had 26 fighters out of 28 men enrolled. No one on the outside will ever know or understand the spirit and gameness of my club. It is impossible to put it into words. I can say that I have never seen a man on it quit at any time—not even to get a breathing spell."

When we asked Stallings if he had any particular statement to make, he reached in his pocket, and with a smile pulled out a yellow slip of paper.

"Some fan," he said, "after the game rushed up and slipped me this. It is signed Omar Khayyam, and whether Omar wrote it or not, he called the turn."

This was written on the paper:

"The lips of those who glibly prophesied

RUBE OLDRING WEDDED FOR SURE

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 17—Although deserted and non-support charges preferred by a woman who claims to be his wife are still pending, "Rube" Oldring, left fielder of the Athletics, and Miss Hannah A. Thomas, of Brighton, N.J., have been married by Magistrate Wrigley.

Oldring secured the license late yesterday afternoon after closing hours at the license bureau. He told Chief Ferguson that he was to be married immediately by Magistrate Wrigley.

Oldring gave his age as thirty and his address as New York. In his application for a license he swore that he had never been married. His bride was married before, being divorced on June 15, 1908, by the court of chancery, New Jersey, on the grounds of desertion.

"I was never married to the woman who brings this charge against me," declared Oldring emphatically to-day. "She is simply after my world's series money, and this proceeding is blackmail pure and simple. If she was married to me why didn't she sue me before? I haven't seen her for more than two years.

"This trouble put me off my game in the big series. What chance had I to play decent ball when everyone in Boston was yelling that I had deserted my wife? I know I didn't play as I should, and I attribute it to this trouble."

Mackmen Refuse To Be Banquetted

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 19—At the request of President Shibe and Connie Mack no banquets will be held this fall in honour of the Athletics' victory in the American League pennant fight.

The White Elphant chiefs feel that the Mackmen have been honoured sufficiently in the past, and that functions in their honour might well be omitted this year.

City hall officials and leading fans were insistent that a dinner be held, particularly to show that the fans were still with the Athletics, despite their defeat in the world's series, but they accepted the views of the Athletics and th proposed banquet has been called off.

Members of the team are rapidly disappearing to their homes for the winter. Five members of the dethroned kings of the diamond left for Chicago yesterday to join the All-American team which will play games with the All-National team in the West this fall and winter.

They were Captain Ira Thomas, Pitcher Joe Bush, Catcher McAvoy, and Outfielders Murphy and Walsh. Thomas and Bush were accompanied by their wives. Thomas will manage the All-Americans.

CONNIE MACK ALWAYS A SQUARE SPORTSMAN

A good deal has been said about the "psychological" factor in connection with the race of the Boston Braves to a pennant in the National League and their striving for a world's championship. The Braves have been popular champions in their league and without doubt public favour with them was a considerable influence in carrying them through to victory. Likewise, they entered the world's series with practically the entire fan-body of the nation pulling for them to win, for a variety of reasons that it is not necessary to detail.

The Braves' wonderfully astute leader, George Stallings, recognized the effect of this sentiment in its influence on his players and he took advantage of it to the limit, using it as an inspiration to spur on his temperamental players, says the St. Louis "Sporting News."

But the question may be asked if he did not exceed the limit when he played the "psychological" stuff to the point of attempting to make out Connie Mack a poor sportsman by stirring up his little argument with the leader of the Athletics over the issue of practice hours for the Braves at Shibe park preliminary to the big games.

If Stallings chose to hypnotize his players, first with the suggestion that in the National League race the Giants were unpopular champions and that all the world was pulling for the Braves to dispossess them, and then, having become contenders for the world's championship, that it was the duty of the Braves to consider themselves as the standard bearers of the players as a class in the struggle with the Athletics, because of the latter's anti-fraternity stand, that was his privilege, and no one raised great objection to his Svengali act. But when he sought to further arouse the "temperament" in his Boston crew by holding Connie Mack up to them as a poor sportsman it does seem time that a halt should be called on his "psychology."

That Stalling's controversy with Mack over the matter of practice hours was a studied effort to antagonize his players against the Athletics and accentuate a bitter feeling preliminary to keeping the field in the big games appears clear from the comments of unprejudiced and uninfluenced commentators. It seems to have been all deliberately planned, even to the carefully staged telephone conversation with Mack, in which the Boston leader threatened to punch Connie's nose at the first opportunity.

It is doubtful, in view of the developments, if Stallings seriously desired or expected a period of afternoon practice at Shibe Park. He received more consideration than in past years has been asked or granted to rival teams when he was permitted to the use of the Athletics' field for mornings previous to the big games. It is a fact that in previous world's series the visiting teams in Philadelphia have done their preliminary work on the National League grounds there. The Cubs did that in 1910 and the Giants practiced at the Phillies' Park in 1911 and again last fall.

When Connie Mack offered the use of Shibe Park to the Braves for morning work the concession was regarded as a fine piece of sportsmanship and Stallings seemed to consider it as such. Then came the accident to Smith and the consequent depression of the Braves' spirits. Something was needed to arouse their fire and the "Miracle Man" proved equal to the occasion.

First came the story that Mack had shown lack of sympathy over the loss of Smith. That helped. It was followed by a request for use of the Athletics' field at a certain hour in the afternoon. Manager Mack explained that he had arranged for his own players to work out at the hour asked for. It was certainly to be expected that they would require the use of their own field under the circumstances and Stallings, being a manager of some wisdom, must have understood the situation. Yet, he made his play to the newspapers for the benefit of the public and his team, and got the results sought.

The objection here raised is that the results were secured at the expense of Connie Mack's reputation as a sportsman. It was unfair tactics, an injustice to the leader of the Athletics, who does not deserve the odium thus cast upon him.

Connie Mack is as fair and square a sportsman as there is in the game, a generous opponent, a good loser, and a magnanimous victor. Who has forgotten the incident of him refusing to take advantage of the technicality when Larry Doyle failed to touch home plate in the series with the Giants? His career is filled with such incidents.

Certainly Mack's record will bear comparison with that of any man who at this stage seeks to traduce him, and Stallings, least of all, should be the man to raise the issue.

Miss McCarthy's Annual Exhibit

Miss Maimie McCarthy's Annual Art Exhibit for 1915 suggests not only wonderful improvement, but from the increased number of works, that many additional pupils have attained sufficient deftness during the past year to enable them to enter their work for public inspection. Even to the unpracticed the various specimens of brush work are most appreciable, while variety lends additional attractiveness to the whole. The sylvan scenery, some in peaceful summer repose, and others portraying the severity of winter, denotes true perception in the artists of nature during the seasons, while the delicacy of the china work is most commendable. Nor is portraiture, a more difficult branch of the art, perhaps, neglected, for several magnificent specimens are exhibited.

Mrs. Gallivan exhibits a fine picture of a mother and sick child. For several nautical scenes Miss Dobbin is responsible, and for country scenery, Mrs. Lang. Miss Florence Howden's flocks of sheep are to be commended and considerable skill is also shown by her sepia work, and in this regard the same may be said of Miss Josephine Gordon, several of whose specimens adorn the walls. Mrs. J. Comstock and Mrs. Ed. Conroy present various fine specimens of china work, those of the latter being rich and dark. In this branch of the art, too, Miss May Kelly and Mrs. McDonald are deserving of special mention, and Miss Sybil White exhibits a whole tea set. The china work in white and gold are mainly Mrs. Copping's contributions and a pretty tea set in pink is the work of Miss Nora Coughlin.

Miss Curtis has several tasteful oil paintings on exhibit, as has also Mrs. McGrath. The skill of Mrs. McCarthy is shown in a summer and a winter scene, and also some floral paintings. Several of Miss McCarthy's own works appear, notably among her latest being a large and splendid portrait of the Rev. Father Ferguson, of Lindsay, late of Peterborough, and also one of Rev. Father Cote.

The exhibition will continue all this week at Miss McCarthy's Studio, 379 Park street, and is entirely free. No invitations have been issued this year, but all those interested in art are cordially invited.

BISHOP BIDWELL AT ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

The mission conducted by His Lordship Bishop Bidwell of Kingston, at St. John's Church, commences this evening at 8 o'clock. Previous announcements have referred to His Lordship's coming to Peterborough, and it is felt that large congregations will attend the services which will be purely devotional. Bishop Bidwell is an earnest preacher, who on his former appearance at St. John's, made a deep impression. It is expected that as many as possible will take advantage of the services and attend either in the evening or in the afternoon, the latter beginning to-morrow, at 4.30 p.m.

Crossley Meetings Close To-night

The Crossley meetings close to-night. The addresses by Rev. H. T. Crossley, on Sunday, June, were very helpful, and were delivered to large and appreciative congregations. The morning address was an exegetic on the Scriptures. At the conclusion of his address to the Sunday School scholars, in the afternoon, 174 signed the cards as members, Christians, or those desiring to lead Christian lives. His evening address on "Wrong Views of Hell" was a masterly effort, and a thoroughly Gospel presentation. By request, he sang "The Pearly Gates of Golden".

To-night closes the special services. "Ten Business Mazims" were given last night in his address on "Mind Your Own Business." These served as a basis for appeals to Christian devotion and service. During the service he sang one of his favourite solos, "Papa Come This Way." Many were led to decision for Christ as the choir sang "Where He Leads Me, I Will Follow."

Rev. F. A. Connors, of Park Street Baptist Church, assisted in the services.

Mr. Crossley stated on the Sabbath that he would give one of his photos to each family represented at the Tuesday evening meeting.

The song service begins at 7.45. Do not forget this is the closing meeting, to-night.

INDIA'S LOYALTY TO THE EMPIRE PUT TO THE TEST

LONDON, Oct. 19.—In the first critical days of the war it was not known how far the loyalty of India could be depended upon, but any doubts were soon set at rest. The arrival of the Sikhs and the Gurghas has made a deep impression throughout the Continent, including Germany. It showed that the British Empire was putting all of its resources into the conflict, and that all of her races, citizen and subject, will aid without stint.

These are the first Indian troops that have ever taken part in a European war. They were especially selected from the hardiest races, men of the hills. The Kurkhas, it is said, would be at a great disadvantage even in the heats, especially the moist heats of the Continent summer. It is not the cold that is feared for the Indians, but the damp. Very special precautions have been taken by the Indian army chiefs to enable them to withstand these conditions, especially in providing them with warm, light clothing and rainproof uniforms. The Sikhs are magnificent looking men, handsome as the finest Arabs, with splendid figures, coal-black eyes full of varying expression and by contrast the whitest of teeth. When the attentions of the fair Marseillaise made them smile there was always a cry "Look at their snowy teeth!" The Sikhs bid fair to cut out the Highlanders with the French women, even though they don't wear kilts.

The transporting and feeding arrangements for the Indians have been carfully arranged. Their meat must be killed according to their caste ritual; the slaughter is not permitted to cook it, and the cooks cannot hand it direct to the men; this must be done by a native of a particular caste. They prefer goat flesh to any other, and immense flocks of goats accompany the Indian battalions. Their food is less varied than that of the British soldier but such as it is it must be more carefully prepared. They never touch alcohol in any form and especial precautions are taken to save them from being tempted to acquire this taste as it is ruinous to the Indian native.

The regiments are accompanied by numerous interpreters in addition to their officers, who all, even if not British, speak English, while a large proportion of the British "Tommies" have a smattering of Hindustani.

A sombre interest was excited by the Gurkhas' manipulation of the deadly looking dagger, the kukhri; they use it at close quarters, throwing it at an object with unerring aim or parrying bayonet charges.

The exact number of the Indian contingent has not been officially divulged, but it is understood to be 70,000 men of all arms except artillery, of which the native army has none, except machine guns. Artillery, however is included in the British contingent which accompanied them from India.

Horses Baulked Had Arm Broken

Yesterday morning Mr. William Swinton, a well known resident of the township of Smith, was the victim of an accident on Simcoe Street when his team, which had been standing in front of the Canadian Cereal Co., took fright. The horses, backing up, upset the waggon, and Mr. Swinton was thrown out. He sustained a fractured arm and was badly shaken up. He was taken by auto to Dr. Moir's office, where his injuries were attended to. To-day he has recovered somewhat from the effects of the accident, but his injured arm is still painful.

German Battalions Destroyed by Explosion—French Retreat and Let Them Occupy Danger Spot

LINE IS SHORTENED

FROM THE BATTLEFRONT, Oct. 21.—(Via Paris.)—The German invaders in their efforts to shorten their lines and rest their right wing further southwestward upon the English Channel are meeting with a vigorous offensive by the allies. A good part of the fighting is being done in the obscurity of fogs.

French marines on Monday put forth a fine effort against the Germans. The troops of Emperor William had tried a surprise attack on the marines Sunday, but they had held the field works against superior numbers. The fight lasted all day, and then the Germans contented themselves with cannonading the position of the marines.

A thick fog covered the entire region Monday, and the marines, accustomed to such weather conditions, crept toward the German trenches. "No shooting," was the order; "use the bayonet!"

The marines got within thirty feet of the trenches before they were seen. It was too late for the defenders, who were bayoneted in the trenches and beyond the trenches as they ran. Four hundred German prisoners were taken.

One of the places where the French had been most harassed is near the elbow of the western line. The important position there had been taken and retaken frequently during the last three weeks. Every time the Germans had been obliged to abandon the position they returned in greater force and pushed back the French by weight of numbers.

The French took the position for the twelfth time and held it for ten hours. Then came a shock of the human battering ram, and the French gradually gave way. The Germans began fortifying the place, but while they were engaging in this task the earth heaved and a deafening explosion occurred. The ten hours the French had held the point had been sufficient to mine every rod of the ground.

It is estimated that three German battalions were annihilated.

GERMANS DEFEATED ALONG THE YSER

Are Forced to Retire From Two to Five Miles All Along the River, Meantime the Crown Prince is Being Enveloped

LONDON, Oct. 21. — The Belgian army yesterday made good its excellent beginning against the German advance toward Dunkirk and the other French channel ports. Heavy fighting along the River Yser resulted in complete defeat of the Germans. They have ceded from two to five miles of ground all along the northern bank of the river. Their losses are said to have been considerable.

Ypres was again the centre of desperate fighting, French and British troops gaining strategic positions of value and materially strengthening the movement against the German left flank in Belgium.

Along the battle line from Arras to the coast heavy reinforcements are concentrating on both sides and it seems probable that a decisive engagement may take place here between formidable forces.

It was reported from several sources yesterday that a British maritime force landed at Ostend and drove the small German garrison from that city supported by the guns of the fleet off the port. This information was passed by the censor, but without confirmation of any kind. However, Ostend is of small importance in a military sense and it is believed that the foothold of the Kaiser in western Belgium is so precarious that the Belgian watering place is likely to be occupied by the advancing allies at most any time.

The last definite statement of the position of the Belgian forces places their advance at Roulers, thirteen miles northwest of Courtrai and but a short distance from Ostend. If this wedge should penetrate further, Ostend would be isolated from the remainder of the German army.

Out of the mass of conflicting messages stands the fact that the Germans in Belgium are attempting two major operations, first, to cut through the Belgians between Nieuport and Dixmude, and second, to throw back the Franco-British army around Arras. All of their skill and the full weight of their powerful army has been directed to this end, but without any result whatsoever.

The statement made Monday that Lille had been retaken by the allies proves premature. The town is invested on three sides and advantage in the fight for its possession rests plainly with the Germans. They have erected strong fortifications and have some of their best regiments in the trenches around the town. The Kaiser is said to place much importance on holding the city and there can be no question that the conflict at this point will be stubborn and long drawn out.

In distinction to the success of the Germans at Lille is the progress made by their foes to the west of that point. Here the allied troops have driven the Germans backward and Lille now stands well forward in territory held by French and British forces.

This is also true of St. Mihiel, held by the crown prince, now the most southerly position of the Germans. It is regarded as one of the most surprising developments of the war that Frederick Wilhelm has been able to maintain himself at St. Mihiel, with the French winning on both sides of the town. Although his stubborn resistance reveals a resolute spirit that commands the highest respect, it is agreed by all military authorities that he is none the less in a very serious predicament and is risking capture or destruction of a good part of his army by holding on to a position that is almost hopeless. The day was marked by French concentration on the right bank of the Meuse, further endangering the haughty German heir. Despite a desperate counter-attack delivered by his forces in the vicinity of Camp des Romains, the French gained considerable ground around that town. Etain continues to be the objective of a fierce French attack and its fall would mean a complete severance of the crown prince's communications with Metz.

On the centre the situation remains in status quo, both the French and German lines having been weakened until artillery play is practically the only activity.

North of Zagny, on the road to Metz, the Germans yesterday combated the French most savagely. The hand of the Kaiser is seen in the increased resistance in this vicinity. He has evidently taken alarm at the close approach of the republic's army to that strong fortress. Monday it was asserted that German trenches, only nine miles from Metz, had been assaulted.

Japs Destroy Torpedo Boat.

TOKIO, Oct. 21.—Tokio officially announced that the German torpedo boat S90, after escaping under cover of darkness from the Tsingtau, ran ashore at a point south of Kiao-Chow Bay and was destroyed by the Japanese blockading squadron. It was the S90, according to a message from Tsingtau, which sunk the Japanese cruiser Takachiho.

It may be questionable statesmanship, but the easiest way to stop a little war is to start a big one.

REPULSED EVERYWHERE.

Paris War Office Has Brief But Satisfactory Bulletins.

PARIS, Oct. 21.—News from official sources concerning the war operations is meagre but satisfactory.

The French official statement issued last night says that the Germans, during the day, made attacks along the entire front and everywhere were repulsed.

"The day has been characterized by an effort on the part of the Germans along all parts of the front—to the extreme north, where the Belgian army has held remarkably; at Labassee where the German troops have attempted an offensive movement of particular violence to the north of Arras; at Mametz, between Peronne and Albert, at Vauqous, to the east of the Argonne, and, finally, on the heights of the Meuse and in the region of Champion.

"Everywhere the German attacks have been repulsed."

"In Belgium, in spite of violent attacks on the part of the enemy, the Belgian army has held its position on the line of the River Yser.

"There have been other actions in the region of Ypres between the allied forces operating in this territory and the forces of the enemy.

"On the Meuse the enemy has endeavored in vain to drive back the advance posts of our troops, who have moved out along the river bank of this stream in the peninsula of the Camp des Romain.

"To sum up on the day of Oct. 19, we have made progress at various points on the front.

"In East Prussia, and on the Vistula River, there is no change in the situation. The efforts of the Austrians to cross the River San have been repulsed. The battle south of Przemysl is continuing under conditions favorable to the Russians."

HE WARNED BRITISH.

Captain of Italian Steamer Rewarded For Saving Transports.

LONDON, Oct. 21. — The Calcutta Statesman publishes an official statement from the Government of Bengal eulogizing the services rendered by Captain Giacapello of the Italian steamer Loredano in warning British vessels of the presence of the German cruiser Emden in the Bay of Bengal. Four or five vessels, including the City of Rangoon, and two transports were preserved from risk of capture by Captain Giacapello's efforts, and the Governor, Lord Carmichael, presented him with a gold watch and chain in recognition of these services. Mementoes were also given to the officers of the Loredano and a money reward to the crew.

Germans Growing Anxious.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 21.—From all quarters comes the news that the Germans in Belgium are perturbed by the latest tidings from their front in France. Correspondents in nearly all the Dutch frontier towns which are news centres for Belgium agree on this fact. What the news may actually be is never stated, but the blatant, bullying optimism of recent weeks has given place to anxiety. In Antwerp the Germans are repairing the forts with feverish haste, and trials of the new guns mounted there are to take place soon.

WRECKED BY BOMB

Nine Tenements and Three Stores Are Blown Up in Montreal—Six Occupants Are Killed

FOREIGNERS SUSPECTED

MONTREAL, Oct. 21. — Two men who are believed to have blown up a block of nine tenements and three stores in Frontenac street, about six o'clock last night with a bomb, met death in the ruins of the explosion, in which a dozen others were injured, according to the information that Inspector McLaughlan gathered last night in an investigation that he started at the Frontenac street police station, following the explosion.

The body of one of the men believed to have thrown the bomb is thought to be in the ruins, while that of the other is in the morgue.

Paul Belanger and Joseph Lafreniere, who say they were passing up Frontenac street at the time of the explosion, told Inspector McLaughlin that they had seen two men who looked like foreigners, carry a big, round, black object into one of the doorways of the block of tenements in which the explosion occurred. The moment they deposited it on the stairway there was a loud explosion, and the entire block appeared to rise from the ground. They both said that one of the men they had seen carry the object into the doorway was hurled back on the sidewalk, but the other man did not appear and must have been buried in the ruins.

The two young men were detained as witnesses for the coroner's inquest that will be held.

The explosion occurred while the majority of nine families and their boarders, who occupied the premises, mostly Russians, were at supper. The interior of the building was wrecked from cellar to roof, and how anyone who was inside escaped is a miracle. The explosion not only shattered the block of nine tenements, but it smashed the windows in houses on both sides of the street for some distance.

So far as the police were able to learn last night from the Russians who occupied the tenements in the buildings, none of those who resided in the building were missing.

The police were of the opinion that if there was a body in the ruins it was that of one of the men who are said to have deposited what was evidently a bomb in one of the hallways of the building.

Many of the occupants of the tenements of the house were blown through the windows by the force of the explosion.

So far as can be learned there are two men dead, two women supposed to be dying, one man in a critical condition, four men in hospitals with good chance of recovery, four known persons whose injuries were not severe and probably half a dozen persons more or less injured who were not taken to any hospital.

Late last night the police came to the conclusion that only one body was in the ruins, that of the unidentified second boom-thrower, hence the search for bodies was discontinued.

The dead man in the morgue is thought to have been an Austrian, and meant to have caused the death of the occupants of the building because they were Russians. There are Austrians and Germans living in the vicinity of Frontenac and Ontario streets, where the explosion took place.

18,000 GERMANS KILLED.

Russians Have Buried That Many In Present Battle.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 21. — Official statements declare that the Germans are continuing their efforts to cross the Vistula river at several points, despite very heavy losses. At no point, says the statement, have they succeeded.

According to a statement published in The Army Gazette, some 18,000 German dead, left on the field by the retreating Germans, were buried by the Russians.

The War Office states that the German right wing, which is extended into Galicia, has been making determined attacks in co-operation with the Austrians, but it is claimed that at no point have the enemy succeeded in gaining any distinct advantage.

An official announcement, dated Oct. 19, has been given out by the General Staff of the Commander-in-chief of the Russian forces, as follows:

"There has been no further change in the general situation. Russian troops are in contact with the enemy at various points, and there has been fighting on the River Zoura, at Stry, in Galicia, and in East Prussia.

"To the south of Przemysl the Russians continue to take prisoners in large numbers. An entire Austrian battalion, with all the officers and machine guns, surrendered to us."

Berlin Fears Portuguese.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—The following despatch was received here last night from Berlin by the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Co.:

"On Sept. 12 Portuguese left for Angola and Mozambique, Portuguese possessions in West and East Africa respectively. Each of these forces consisted of one battalion of infantry, one squadron of cavalry, one battery of mounted artillery, one battery of machine guns and an ambulance staff. Each force aggregated approximately 16,000 men. Two native companies, each of 240 men, have left Mozambique for Angola."

Getting Out of the Rut.

The merchant who conducts his business according to the method of the last century is not giving his customers the service they are entitled to. The spirit of the new century is to do more than to merely turn goods over at a profit. It is to really earn that profit by giving real service, accommodation and reliable advice. The modern merchant must know his goods thoroughly and what is best adapted to every household requirement.

That class of merchant invariably advertises. That is the one sure test of his being abreast of the times.

"DARKNESS AND DAWN"

By Geo. Allan England

"I guess we'll take the apartments and sign the lease," he decided toward noon, after they had clambered, pried, explored with improvised torches, and penetrated far into some of the grottoes. "The main thing to consider is that we can find darkness and humidity for the Folk by day. They mustn't be let out at first except in the night. It may be weeks or months before they can stand the direct sunlight. But that, too, will come. Patience, girl—patience and time—and all will yet be done."

Yet, even as he spoke, a strange anxiety, a presence of tremendous difficulties, brooded in his soul. These were not cattle that he had to deal with, but men.

Could he and Beatrice, rulers of the Folk though they now were, could they—with their paltry knowledge of the people's language, superstitions, prejudices and inner life—really bring about this great migration?

Could they ravish a nation from its accustomed home, transplant it bodily, force new conditions on it, train, teach, civilize it? All this without rebellion, anarchy, and failure?

"God!" thought the engineer. "The labours of Hercules were child's play beside this problem!"

His heart quaked at the thought of all that lay ahead; yet through everything, deep in the basic strata of his being, he knew that all should be and must be as he planned.

Barring death only, the seemingly impossible should come to pass.

"I swear it!" he murmured to himself. "For her sake, for theirs, and for the world's, I swear it shall be!"

At high noon they emerged once more from the caverns, climbed the steep cliff face, and again stood on the heights.

Facing northward, their gaze swept the lower river-bank opposite, and reached away, over the rolling hills and plains that lay, a virgin forest, to the dim horizon, brooding, mysterious, quivering with fertility and wild strange life.

"Some time," he prophesied, sweeping his arm out toward the wilderness—"some time all that—and far beyond—shall be dotted with clearings and rich farms, with cottages, schools, towns, cities. Broad highways shall traverse it. The hum of motors, of machinery, of industry—of life itself—shall one day displace the cry of beast and bird.

"Some time the English tongue shall reign here again—here and beyond. Here strong men shall toil and build and reap and rest. Here love shall reign and women be called 'mother.' Here children shall play and learn and grow to manhood and to womanhood, secure and free.

"Some time all good things shall here come to realization. Oppression and slavery, alone, shall be undreamed of. These, and poverty and pain, shall never enter into the new world that is to be.

"Some time, here, 'all shall be better than well.' Some time!"

He circled her with his arm, and for a while they stood surveying this cradle of the new race. Much moved, Beatrice drew very close to him. They made no speech.

For the dreams they two were dreaming, as the golden sun irradiated all that vast, magnificent wilderness, passed any power of words.

Only she whispered "Some time!" too, and Allan knew she shared with him the glory of his vast, tremendous vision!

CHAPTER X.
SEPARATION.

They spent the remainder of that day and all the next in hard work, making practical preparations for the arrival of the first settlers. Allan assured himself the waters of the New Hope River were soft and pure and that an ample supply of fish dwelt in the pool as well as in the rapids—trout, salmon, and pike of new varieties and great size, as well as other species.

Beatrice and he, working together, put the largest and darkest of the caves into habitable order. They also prepared, for their own use, a sunny grotto, which they thought could with reasonable labour be made into a comfortable temporary home.

"Though it isn't our own cosy bungalow, and never can be," she remarked rather mournfully, surveying the fireplace of roughly-piled stones Allan had built. "Oh, dear, if we only could have had that to live in while—"

He stopped her yearning with a kiss.

"There, there, little girl," he cheered her, "don't be impatient. All in good time we'll have another, garden and sun-dial and everything. All in good time. The more we have to overcome, the more we'll appreciate results, eh? The only really serious matter to consider now is you!"

"Me, Allan? Why, what do you mean? What about me?"

He sat down on the rough-hewn bench of logs that he had fashioned, and drew her to him.

"Listen, Beta. This is very serious."

"What, Allan? Has anything happened?"

"No, and nothing must, either. That's what's troubling me now. Our separation, I mean."

"Our—why, what—"

"Don't you see. Can't you understand? We've got to be apart a while. I must go alone—"

"Oh, no, no, Allan! You mustn't—I can't let you!"

"You've got to let me, darling! The machine will only carry, at most, three persons and a little freight. Now if you take the trip back into the Abyss I can only bring one, just one of the Folk back with me. And at that rate you can see for yourself how long it will take to make even a beginning at colonization. I figure three or four days for the round trip, at the inside. If you go we'll be all summer and more getting even twenty-five or thirty colonists here. Whereas, if you can manage to let me do this work alone, we'll have fifty in the caves by October. So you see—"

"You don't want to go and leave me, Allan?"

"God forbid! Shall I abandon the whole attempt and settle down with you here, all alone, and—"

"No, no, no! Not that, Allan!"

"I knew you'd say so. After all, the future of the race means more than our own welfare or comfort or anything. Even our safety has got to be risked for it. So you see—"

She thought a moment, clinging to him, somewhat pale and shaken, but with an indefinable courage in her eyes. Then asked she:

"Wouldn't it be possible in some way—for you can do anything, Allan—wouldn't it be possible for you to build another machine? Surely in the ruins of some city not too far away, in Nashville, Cincinnati, or Detroit, you could find materials! Couldn't you make another aeroplane and teach me how to fly, so I could help you? I'd learn, Allan! I'd dare and be brave—awfully brave, for your sake, and theirs, and—"

He gravely shook his head in negation.

"I know you would, dearest, but you mustn't. Half my real reason for not wanting you to go with me is just this danger of flying. You'll be safer here. With plenty of supplies and your pistol you'll be all right. I know it seems heartless to talk of leaving you, even for three days, but, after all, it's far the wisest way. We'll build a barricade and make a regular fort for you and stock it with supplies. Then you can wait for me and the first two settlers. And after that you'll have company. Why, you'll have "subjects"—for, until they're educated, we've simply got to rule these people. It'll be only the first trip that will make you lonely, and it won't be long."

"I know; but suppose anything should happen to you?"

He laughed confidently.

"Nonsense!" he exclaimed. "You know nothing ever does happen to me! Everything will be all right, my best-beloved. Only a little patience and a little courage, that's all we need now. You'll see."

Till late that night, sheltered in their cave, they talked of this momentous step. Redly their firelight glowed upon their walls and roof, where sparkled myriads of tiny rock-facets. Far below the rapids of New Hope River murmured a contra-bass to their voices.

And in the canon the sighing of the night-wind, pierced now and then by some strange cry of beast-life from the forest beyond, heightened their pleasant sense of security. Only the knowledge of approaching separation weighed heavy on their souls.

From every possible standpoint they discussed the situation. Allan's plan, viewed with the eye of reason, was really the only sane one. Nothing could have been more absurdly wasteful of time and energy than the idea of carrying the girl down into the Abyss each time and bringing her up with every return. Not only would it expose her needlessly to very grave perils, but it would bisect the efficiency of the Pauillac. Allan realized, moreover, that in the rebuilding of the world a time must inevitably come when he could not always stand by her side. She must learn self-reliance, harsh as that teaching might seem.

All this and much more he pointed out to her. And before midnight she, too, agreed. It was definitely decided that he was to undertake the transportation work alone.

Thus the matter was settled. But on that night there was little sleep for either of them, or, on the day after the morrow was to commence their first separation since the time they had awakened in the tower, more than a year ago.

Separation!

The thought weighed leaden on Allan's heart. As for Beatrice, though in the dark she hid her tears, she felt that grief could plumb no blacker depths save utter loss. Only the thought of the new world and all that it must mean steeled her to resignation.

Morning dawned, aflare with light and colour, as only a June morning in that semitropic wilderness could show. Allan and Beatrice, early at work, resolutely attacked their labour of preparation.

First of all they laid inadequate supplies of fruit and game, both of which, in that virgin field, were to be had in a profusion undreamed of in the old days of civization. With an improvised lance Allan also speared three salmon in the rapids. The game and fish he dressed for her and packed among green leaves in the cool recesses at the extreme inner end of the cavern.

"No need whatever for you to leave the cave while I'm gone," he warned her. All I say is I'll be far happier if you stay close at home. Will you promise me that, whatever happens, you won't wander from the cave?"

"I needn't promise, dearest. All I need to know is your wish. That's enough for me."

Together they set about fortifying the place. They built a rough but strong barricade of rocks across the mouth of the cavern, leaving only one small aperture, just sufficient to admit a single person on hands and knees.

Allan fetched a rounded stone that she could roll into this door by night and arranged a stout sapling to brace the stone immovably. He supplied her with firewood and saw to it that her bandoliers were full of cartridges. In addition, he left her the extra gun and ammunition they had found in the crypt under the cathedral.

With a torch he carefully explored every crevice of the cave to make sure no noxious spiders, centipedes, or serpents were sheltered there.

From the Pauillac he brought his own cloak, which he insisted on her keeping. This, with hers, would add to the comfort of the bed they had made with fragrant ferns and grasses.

Indigestion And Headaches

In the western Provinces, where so many thousands live far from doctors and drug stores, very many rely on Dr. Chase's medicines to cure disease and maintain health and strength. This letter gives some idea of what perfect control Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills exert over the most common ills of life.

Mrs. H. K. Hewer, farmer's wife, Eastburg, Alta., writes: "For about ten years I suffered from constipation, indigestion, headache and languid feelings. Treatment from two or three doctors afforded only temporary relief, so I turned to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and with most satisfactory results. Headaches have disappeared, regular habits established and general health very much better. Both my husband and I can speak highly of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver pills, as we have both been greatly benefited by them." FAMOUS SIEGES - CARTHAGE

SCIPIO

Hasdrubal (On the Wall) Makes Peace with the Mutineers of His Army

By Henry M. Snevily.

FAMINE, pestilence and nerve shattering vigilance—these are the scourges which in the end drive besieged cities to surrender. From Carthage to Port Arthur they have hounded brave men to defeat and it is not unlikely that at Kiaochou, Paris, or even Berlin, they will play their part again. The story of the siege would be grim and sordid enough were it not for the flashes of desperate valor, the wild sorties in the night, the heroic conflicts at wall or intrenchment.

The siege has always played an important part in history. Carthage, Rome's most potent, most feared rival, was wiped out by a three-year siege. The Third Punic War was inspired by Rome's determination to destroy this great city of the Phoenicians, and in 149 B. C. the Consuls Manilius and Censorinus, with an army of 80,000 men, which was later enormously increased, sailed against Carthage.

The city itself was built upon a mushroom shaped peninsula, the narrow neck of which was about three miles in breadth. Across this strip of land three great walls were built, the outer one about six or seven feet thick and forty feet high, with towers at intervals of 200 feet. These three walls were so connected that they formed one continuous system of masonry, embracing 300 horse-shoe shaped stalls for elephants, storage for their fodder, stables for 4,000 horses and barracks for their riders and 20,000 infantry.

On all three water sides the city was well fortified, the most vulnerable quarter being a narrow strip of land between the Gulf of Tunis and the Lake of Tunis. This neck, called the Taenia, was pierced by a narrow passage into the Lake of Tunis which was used as a harbor for the merchant fleet, and there were also two landlocked harbors built by hand where a limited number of merchantmen and the ships of war could anchor.

It was from the tops of great man-built islands in the centre of the very inner harbors that the admirals of the fleet watched the approach of the Roman vessels and soldiers as the investment of Carthage began.

Misled by Roman promises that if the city would submit to Roman rule it would be unmolested, the Carthaginians had delivered up almost all their arms and weapons of warfare at the city of Utica, which had gone over to the conquerors. It was not until the enemy appeared before their very walls that the inhabitants learned of the Roman determination to wipe out the city at any expense.

MIDST WILD SCENES IN SENATE WAR AGAINST ROME DECLARED

When the news was announced in the Senate a wild scene ensued. Members of the patriotic party who had counselled war against Rome loudly upbraided the conservatives. A delegation of matrons whose sons had been sent to Rome as hostages marched on the Senate chamber and filled the air with their cries of mourning, even threatening to attack Senators whom they deemed responsible for the catastrophe.

Yet even these mothers, who thus signed the death warrants of their sons, firmly demanded that war should be the decision of the nation.

Men ran to the quarters of the elephants which had so inspired the Romans with fear in the first Punic Wars, but though they called the trained beasts by name no friendly trumpetings echoed through the masonry stalls. The animals had been delivered up to Utica unbeknown to the majority of the population and even many of the soldiers. The impatient trampling of horses was not heard, for they, too, had been surrendered to the Romans.

Scores of catapults, stored for resisting a siege, had been dismantled and scores more had been hauled to Utica, but in a single night hundreds of women cut off their hair and twisted ropes of it to repair the catapults.

Squads went from house to house stripping lead from the roofs and heaping it near the towers on the walls where great fires were kept burning so that the melted metal could be poured upon the scaling parties. Buildings were smashed down for the iron in the walls, which might be used in fashioning weapons.

Every slave in the city was set free, armed and promised liberty if he should fight for Carthage.

Thousands of men were buried at the city, under Manilius from the land side and under Censorinus from the direction of the Taenia, which was not so well fortified.

Part of the Lake of Tunis was filled in with huge stones to give the siege weapons play, and a ram operated by 2,000 men smashed a hole in the wall. Right up to the breach the Roman legions thundered, and there, to their surprise, were met by a shower of heavy rocks, great lumps of iron and spears and arrows.

Forming platforms with their shields, the infantry lifted their comrades, and some of them, brandishing their short swords, clambered almost to the summit of the wall.

Men and women fighting side by side tipped cauldrons of boiling oil and molten lead upon them; and the invaders, midst the shrieks of wounded men, fell pell mell back upon their comrades and retreated.

Both divisions of the Roman army were obliged to go into fortified camps, and for two years the siege was maintained without important results.

In 147 B. C. a young centurion, P. Cornelius Scipio, was put in command of the Roman troops. About the same time Hasdrubal the elder, through political intrigue, gained command of the Carthaginian defence.

GREAT MOLE OF SCIPIO FAILS TO BOTTLE SHIPS IN HARBOR

All through the year 148 B. C. little progress was made. The besieged city was receiving supplies by sea, and to prevent this Scipio caused to be erected a great mole designed to shut off entrance to the Lake of Tunis and the artificial harbors. At the end of two months the mole was completed, but on the very day that the last stone was placed a Carthaginian fleet of triremes glided out through a new canal and manoeuvred in the Gulf of Tunis. Had they given battle then to the Roman fleet they might have defeated it, but instead they waited several days and were badly whipped by the Romans.

Once a horde of naked Carthaginians swarmed at night through a breach and wading in the Lake of Tunis gained the artificial land made by the Romans. They were decimated by Roman archers, but they burned many of the catapults and other war engines.

One of the elder Hasdrubal's first acts upon assuming command of Carthage was to torture all the Roman prisoners in sight of their comrades and hurl their bodies from the walls. Incensed the Romans fought with redoubled fury, and at last, through a ruse designed by Lselius, the inner landlocked harbors were captured. This made the great market place the easy prey of the Romans.

From the market place three streets led directly to the citadel, which was three blocks, probably the length of a long city block, away. In these three short streets took place some of the fiercest fighting the world has seen.

To traverse them the Romans battled continuously for six days, suffering terrific losses. From the roofs of the houses, most of which were six stories high, the Carthaginians hurled great lumps of lead, rocks, iron and boiling oil. As the Romans entered one building and drove the defenders to the roof they retreated across planks, drawn after them, to the next roof.

Infantry was massed in the streets, while men with swords fought their way into the buildings and drove those whom they did not slay out of the windows or over the roof edge, whence they fell and were impaled on the spears of the soldiers below.

At last the streets were cleared and a handful of defenders in the citadel were all who remained between the mighty power of Rome and complete destruction of the city. From this fort the little band saw the buildings in which such a heroic stand had been made burned to the ground, while the night was hideous with the cries of women, children and aged men who had been concealed in cellars and closets.

The elder Hasdrubal sneaked from the citadel and before the eyes of his men, who hurled anathemas upon him, threw himself at Scipio's feet, begged and won his life; this according to Polybius, a friend of Scipio and a witness of the fighting at Carthage. Polybius is also responsible for the story of the burning of the citadel.

DEFIANT TO THE VERY LAST. DEFENDERS BURN THE CITADEL

Realizing that they were doomed, and scorning to surrender, the gallant handful of defenders set fire to the building and prepared to sell their lives as dearly as might be. Hasdrubal's wife arrayed herself in all the barbaric finery of her wardrobe and, climbing to the citadel's roof, her jewelled arms flashing in the ruddy glare of mounting flames, complimented Scipio as a noble foe in glorious contrast to her perfidious husband.

Then, seizing a sword, before the eyes of the Roman host she slew her sons, and herself leaped into the raging fire beneath.

Scipio was at last in possession of Carthage, but the victory was not fraught with joy for him. As he gazed upon the ruins of the heroic city his eyes filled with tears and Polybius heard him murmuring over and over to himself Homer's words, "The day will come when sacred Troy shall fall and Priam and all of Priam's people too."

His prophetic fancy was not unfounded, for, though Rome stood for centuries, the fall of Carthage removed her one potent rival, the fear of whom had kept her people hardy and their minds from the softening vices of luxury.

EFFICACY OF THE MOTOR IN TIMES OF WAR; EXPERIMENTS SOUND DOOM OF THE HORSE

IN VIEW of the charge made by armed motor cars by the German army at the siege of Liege—the first time in history—special interest attaches to an experiment which was made in England by the Royal Horse Artillery to determine how motor traction can be successfully substituted for horses in the transportation of artillery.

For the purpose of the test it was supposed that a raiding force, strongly supported by cruisers and destroyers, and estimated at five thousand men in two transports of 5,000 tons each, had as its objective Great Grimsby.

At eleven o'clock a telegram was received by the officer commanding the West Riding Battery of four 15-pounder 8.5 inch Erhardt guns to proceed to Waltham, three miles from Great Grimsby, and await orders there. The battery was parked at Wentworth during the night, and about three o'clock the ammunition train left for the depot at Selby, a good deal to the north of the road, followed by the guns, which left the park two hours later.

The principle of haulage was simple. Instead of the shafts on the gun carriage a special "shaft" of steel had been fitted, and this was attached to a hauling bollard on the chassis, which, it was demonstrated, could be converted into a hauling chassis in two minutes fifteen seconds. The test, of course, was whether the limber of the guns could stand the strain of travelling at a speed of more than twenty miles an hour for several hours together. The result proved they could, and was considered highly satisfactory by those responsible for the operations.

There were no "casualties" to report, the bearings had not got overheated, and a distance of nearly eighty miles had been covered at an average speed of twenty-one miles an hour in striking contrast to the speed at which artillery can be moved by horses even at a gallop.

To show that the chassis could be equally well used for taking the guns into action, the battery proceeded to Cleethorpes, where they took up a position to command the mouth of the Humber and Grimsby Harbor. They were hauled into a field over ground such as would have to be traversed over under service conditions, and were wheeled into position, unlimbered and ready to fire an effective shot in less than thirty seconds—the chassis having followed the usual practice of the gun team, and taken up a position in the rear of the battery. Afterward the guns were limbered up again and hauled into Grimsby.

REMARKABLE PROPHECY MADE BY VICTOR HUGO AT THE CLOSE OF THE WAR OF 1870

ON March 1, 1871, the National Assembly of France convened at Bordeaux to ratify the preliminary articles of peace concluded with Germany. On that occasion Victor Hugo, after charging Napoleon III. with the French débâcle, contrasted the futures of the contending nations. As a result of her victory Germany, he declared, would be sternly ruled by a Caesar of "divine right" whose sceptre would be the sabre, enchaining thought, muzzling the press and stifling the national conscience, while conquered France would overcome her misery under the guidance of the sovereign people, with free speech, free conscience and human rights. Amid the wildest enthusiasm he concluded with this remarkable prophecy:

"Oh! The clock will strike—and we shall hear the sound for this perfidious revenge. This will begin the to-morrow when France shall have one thought alone, to collect herself, to rest from the terrible gloom of desperation, to reassemble her forces, to educate her children, to rear with sacred passion those who shall become great, to form alliances, to create an army which shall be the people, to call science to the succor, to remake her wounded hands for service. Thou hast freed me from my enemies. I will free them from mine."

WOMAN'S SHARE IN THE GREAT WAR

They Are Bearing the Burdens of Industry While the Men Fight Besides Nursing Wounded

While men on the European Continent are attending to the business of war, women are doing man's work of peace, with the exception of the Servian women, who are taking a material part in the actual fighting of battles. The women of France are doing what the women of the Balkans did. The farm women were in the fields even before President Poincaire made the appeal to them to complete the work of gathering the crops left unfinished by the men who have been called to arms." as in rural France the women are full partners of the men in farm management.

The underground railroads in the city of Paris are kept going with the aid of women. Women of society are working as clerks where the male employes have gone to the front. They are also street car conductors. Wherever the destructive tide of war manifests itself women are quick to respond, showing quite clearly that the French womanhood of the Joan of Arc type is not by any means extinct.

For the first time in history there are women aviators acting as scouts during war. Three French women, all experienced fliers, are at the front. They are Madame Pallier, Madame Marvingt, and Helen de Rugnio.

The Duchess of Sutherland was among the first arrivals in Belgium as a Red Cross nurse. Queen Alexandra has donated to and is receiving Red Cross funds, one of the subscribers being the Empress Eugenie of France.

Queen Amelia of Portugal offered her services as a nurse in the English military hospitals, and she is by no means an amateur at such a task. She has studied medicine, and conducted a clinic for the poor in the Royal Palace at Lisbon when her husband and son reigned.

The Queen of the Belgians is a physician, and has practiced much among the poor in Brussels.

Queen Wilhelmina is doing all she can to cheer up the Hollanders, who fear a German invasion. She leaves the palace at 7 o'clock in the morning in an automobile for a tour of inspection of the military posts. They are a sort of surprise visits that cause great enthusiasm among the soldiers. When not fort inspecting, she assists the Prince Consort in caring for the wounded German soldiers in the Red Cross hospitals.

YOUTHFUL ADMIRALS OF BRITISH FLEET

Most of Them, However, Are Veterans in Naval Service—Average Age 52 Years

A glance at the British fleet commanders shows that, comparatively speaking, this is the day of young admirals. There are hardly any officers flying their flags in the fleet who can be called veterans in point of age, though the term may be used in regard to their service, for the majority have had over 40 years in the navy. In the First Fleet the oldest officer, Vice-Admiral Sir Douglas Gamble, is 57 and the youngest, Rear-Admiral Sir David Beatty, 43. The average age is about 52 years.

Sir John Jellicoe, who as commander-in-chief of the Home Fleet is in supreme command in the North Sea, is 54 and has been in the navy since 1872.

Rear-Admiral C. E. Madden, chief of the staff to Sir John Jellicoe, is a brother-in-law of that officer. Entering the navy in 1875, Rear-Admiral Madden served in the Egyptian war and specialized in gunnery. Promoted to flag rank in April, 1911, while serving a term of two years as Fourth Sea Lord, he has since flown his flag in the First Battle Squadron and Third and Second Cruiser Squadrons.

Vice-Admiral Sir Lewis Bayly commands the First Battle Squadron, flying his flag in the new battleship Marlborough. He is 56 years of age, and has been in the navy since 1871. A torpedo specialist, he obtained the $400 prize for this branch at Greenwich College in 1884. On two occasions he has seen war service, in Ashanti in 1873-4 and during the Egyptian war of 1882; he was also employed against Congo pirates in 1875. As commodore of the Home Fleet destroyers he did much to promote the efficiency of the flotillas, and was afterwards placed in command of the War College from 1908 to 1911.

Vice-Admiral Sir George Warrender has the distinction of commanding our most powerful battle squadron, the second, for its eight ships are all armed with 13.5 inch guns. He joined the navy in 1873, and is now 54 years old. Twice he has seen fighting on land, in the Zulu war of 1879 and the China war of 1900, in the latter of which he was flag captain to the rear-admiral of the China Squadron. As a commodore and rear-admiral he was commander-in-chief in the East Indies in 1907-9, and after two years in the Second Cruiser Squadron in 1910-12 he was appointed to his present command on December 16, 1912, his flag flying in the King George V.

Vice-Admiral E. E. Bradford in the Third Battle Squadron has charge of the principal pre-Dreadnought battleships, in one of which, the King Edward VII., his flag flies. He is a gunnery specialist, like Sir George Warrender, than whom he is one year older. Entering the service in 1872 he was in the Egyptian war of 1882. In 1890 an essay from his pen on the maritime defence of the United Kingdom and its trade in a war with a naval Power was placed second in the competition for the United Service Institution's gold medal.

Vice-Admiral Sir Douglas Gamble, with his flag in the Dreadnought, is in command of the Fourth Battle Squadron. He was 57 years of age and has been in the navy since 1870.

THE CASUALTY LIST

Of Every Four Men Hit Three Usually Survive Wounds

War cost is computed from various points of view—the financial obligations it imposed, the industrial and commercial impairment, moral laxity and vice that train after the disbandment of armies and the time consumed in the recovery of normal adjournments, and losses in men killed and disabled.

The element of human sacrifice is always at first of paramount interest. A writer in a prominent medical journal says that roughly speaking, battle casualties in recent wars have varied from 10 to 20 per cent. of the number of combatants engaged. The ratio of killed to wounded has been about one to four. Of the casualties from 65 to 80 per cent. have been caused by rifle fire and from 20 to 30 per cent. by artillery fire. Bayonet and sabre wounds have been of comparatively infrequent occurrence.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back its Natural Colour, Gloss and Thickness

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn grey, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant, remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, grey or dry, scraggly and thin. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While wispy, grey, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all grey hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

An Old, Family Cough Remedy, Home-Made

Easily Prepared—Costs Very Little, but is Prompt, Sure and Effective

By making this old-time cough syrup at home you not only save about $2, as compared with the ready-made kind, but you will also have a much more prompt and positive remedy in every way. It overcomes the usual coughs, throat and chest colds in 24 hours—relieves even whooping cough quickly—and is excellent, too, for bronchitis, bronchial asthma, hoarseness and spasmodic croup.

Get from any drug store 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), pour it into a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Full directions with Pinex. Keeps perfectly and tastes good.

You can feel this take hold of a cough or cold in a way that means business. It quickly loosens the dry, hoarse or painful cough, and also heals the inflamed membranes. It also has a remarkable effect in overcoming the persistent loose cough by stopping the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes.

The effect of pine on the membranes is known by almost every one. Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol and other natural healing pine elements.

There are many worthless imitations of this famous mixture. To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and do not accept anything else.

WAR INTOXICATING AS A STIMULANT

Doctors Say That Men Choose It as a Narcotic—An Irresistable Temptation

War is nothing more nor less than a stimulant or narcotic, according to medical diagnosis of the world situation in an editorial in the New York Medical Journal.

"War," says the Journal, "belongs in the category of stimulants or narcotics, to the number of which civilized man has constantly added to relax the strain and confer temporary oblivion of actual existence. It is indeed a question worthy of debate whether the abstinence from alcohol and tobacco now enforced in many places for economic reasons, together with the adoption of merciless 'speeding-up' processes, has not so increased nervous disequilibrium as to render it a welcome relief. Force upon men unnatural speed and concentration and take away their accustomed sedatives and you drive them to a more potent lethan stream.

"Nothing can compare to the glorious intoxication of war in the mind of the healthy adult at his best—between the ages of 18 and 30 years; middle age, like night, brings counsel. The normal young man fights and makes love, both occupations deplored and sneered at by the older, whose tissues are hardening. War-like youth puts on its' handsomest and most becoming raiment, takes along its most stirring music, heedlessly leaves property behind, to be made good by justifiable loot, kisses its sweetheart good-bye in sure anticipation of more or less willing loves among the enemy's womankind. Even his horse is said to sniff the battle afar off and laugh.

"Apart from the irresponsible excitement of war, there are the healthful open air life, the coarse but whole some food, the absence of any necessity for original thinking, all of which cause a superb euphoria. The chances of agonising wounds, of death itself, are cheerfully accepted along with this tremendous joy of living.

"War is an irresistible temptation to man, still not quite civilized. Some day, perhaps, a boy caught playing at 'Kriegspiel' will be treated like one who should to-day be caught torturing a dumb animal; that will be a long time hence, when not only new kind of education will be universal, but there will be comparatively fewer and wiser people. A scientifically regulated birth-rate may furnish a world of population that has had all childhood's rights and privileges, and is, consequently, strong physically and self-controlled mentally. Such a population may well believe that it is too good merely to furnish food for powder."

FRANCE'S POPULAR HERO

General Pau is the French commander next in rank to General Joffre. It is proof of his popularity and efficiency that, having been retired for age at sixty-seven, he had resumed active service before the outbreak of the present war as a result of a popular campaign to reinstate him. Short, thick-set, thoroughly French in manner, he is even a more complete contrast than is General Joffre to the rigid type of German commander.

Rum For the Sailors

Rum is an important item in the British bluejackets' dietary. As a rule, he gets half a gill of it, watered down several times, as aptly "tot." This may be increased as deemed advisable by the authorities.

If Jack is a teetotaller he may receive an equivalent in coin and total abstinence is encouraged in the navy.

ENGLAND'S HANDS CLEAN

Opinion of Noted Educator After Impartial Observation

Few men have a better right to speak about the meaning of the terrible calamity which has befallen Europe than President David Starr Jordan of Leland Stamford University, California. He may be described as an eye-witness of the events which led up to the war. For six months he has been traveling in Central and Eastern Europe. Shortly before the war Dr. Starr Jordan journeyed through the Balkans, down the Danube to Belgrade and across the country to Salonika and Kolva. He spent a good deal of time in Germany lecturing on the peace movement, and visited Paris for the same purpose.

On his return home he said that what had impressed him most was the monstrous failure of democracy to disarm its enemies. "Through this failure the power of life and death has been left in the hands of men who have fought longest against the rights of men. Small cliques and groups of men, none of them of marked ability or dominating character, have thrown the civilization of Europe into the melting pot. Every step in this recent affair has been criminal. But Great Britain has clean hands. I have the deepest sympathy with the people of Germany, more than 60,000,000 of whom are opposed to the policy of their own Government, but have no means of controlling the Government. It is in the hands of men thoroughly devoted to the idea of war, and dominated by the military caste. Their loyalty to the Kaiser has convinced him that they are right in urging that war is necessary in order that the expansion of Germany in Europe and over the seas can be secured. I lectured in Germany to large audiences and received the very best of receptions. There is a great body of people in Germany who look upon war with absolute horror, and the best people there are thoroughly in favor of an understanding with the best people of other nations. But no opportunity was given for these rational and sympathetic voices to be heard. Even the great manufacturers, traders, and bankers—men on whom the prosperity of the country depends, and on whose wealth the military caste are only parasites—were denied any kind of hearing."

DODGED KAISER'S HONORS

Herr Ballin, Creator of Germany's Merchant Marine, Not a Politician

What Von Tirpitz did for the German fleet, Albert Ballin, director-general of the Hamburg-American Line, did for the German mercantile marine. He made it.

Ballin, of Hamburg, stands in the same relation to the Kaiser as did those counsellors of another generation to their sovereigns and Governments—Rothschild, of Paris, to Napoleon III., and Bleichroeder, of Berlin, to Emperor William I., and Bismarck. The Kaiser tried and failed repeatedly to make him a Cabinet Minister. Ballin always insisted that he could be of more service to the Fatherland on the Alsterdamm than in the Wilhelmstrasse.

On one of the various occasions when the Kaiser sought to saddle a Ministership on Ballin, or tack von on to his plebian name, or give him hereditary membership in the Prussian House of Peers, Ballin compromised by accepting his Majesty's photograph. The Kaiser inscribed it: "To the far-seeing and tireless pioneer of our commerce and export trade."

To Catch the Worm

"An extraordinary change has come over the spirit of our army," said a Boer War veteran who is again with the colors. "In the old days they had to be kicked out of their blankets when the réveillé sounded. To-day they're up and about before the bugler."

Many people with foreign-sounding names are changing them to British ones.

CZAR'S COSSACKS ARE FINE FIGHTERS

Trained as Horsemen and Warriors From Childhood—Have Long Enjoyed Wide Liberties

The Russian Cossack, who is playing an important part in the present war, is unique. He is the Czar's professional warrior, and the most loyal member of the Russian military system.

The Cossacks are not a distinct stock but are descended from refugees and outlaws who once occupied the frontier of Russia, between the settled and nomadic tribes. They were afterwards organized as a frontier militia and light cavalry. The only Cossacks now in European Russia are those in the lower valley of the Don River and in the Ural Mountains, and they number only about 3,000,000 out of Russia's total population of 160,000,000 inhabitants.

The Cossack is, nevertheless, the backbone of Russian military government. His loyalty is never questioned, and he can be depended upon to obey orders, when all other forces fail. This peculiar faithfulness, on the part of the Cossacks, is due to the fact that the Cossack enjoys all the freedom and privileges demanded by the revolutionary forces of Russia. He has plenty of land, and is not bound by any of the limitations placed upon the rest of the population. In return he is required to fight for the Czar and he carries out his contract to the letter.

Since the establishment of the present Russian Empire by Ivan the Terrible, the Cossacks have been the most faithful servants and defenders of the Czar. Unlike the Janisaries of the Sultan, they never have revolted. They regard their "Little Father" with the same fanatic adoration as the Japanese do their Mikado.

They believe him a god: He can do no wrong and his will is divine.

Every male Cossack is required to give twenty years in military service to the government. From earliest childhood he is trained for this service to the exclusion of everything else. He is not a farmer or a worker, and is not a soldier in the ordinary sense, Cossacks are "irregular" troops, and are formed into cavalry regiments, as they are famous horsemen.

The Germans have not met these men since the days of Frederick the Great. During the Napoleonic campaign, the Cossacks fought side by side with the Prussians. During the disastrous retreat from Moscow Napoleon's shattered columns feared most the constant onslaughts of these semi-oriental horsemen. Nothing but the masterly generalship of Marshal Ney enabled the serried ranks of the French army to reach the banks of the Beresina.

The Cossacks were a large factor at "The Battle of the Nations" (Dresden.) They were among the first troops, after Waterloo, to enter Paris.

In the Crimean War, their tactics were so harrassing to the French and English troops that the allied advance was confined to a small area. Sebastopol was destroyed but Russia didn't lose a square foot of Crimean territory. In the Russo-Turkish war of 1877-1878, the Cossacks did most savage fighting under General Gourko. He was a Lithuanian, but the Cossacks adored him and in the Shipka Pass, they dismounted and fought on foot, hand-to-hand with the Turks.

They are the conquerors of Central Asia, and extended the outposts of the Russian Empire beyond the Merve and to the very gates of Herat. They outrode the wildest Turkomans of the desert.

"George" Fund to Aid Officers

In accordance with his Majesty's desire, it has been decided that the greater part of the fund subscribed to commemorate the Coronation by those of the King's subjects bearing the Christian name "George" shall be invested to aid junior officers of the Royal Marines in meeting the cost of the final stages of their military training. The income arising out of the investment is to be devoted to the institution of "King George Prize Scholarships." The fund, which totalled over $17,000 was given by 55,000 subscribers, many of whom were working men.

A YEAR INDOORS

"For thirteen months I was so bad with chronic indigestion that I could not go out of doors. Nerves were unstrung, the heart bad and smothring feelings came on till I thought I would choke. Doctors' treatment failed me, so I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which I thank for my present good health. I am now doing my housework and have a family of ten.

ANY DYSPEPTIC CAN GET WELL

By Taking "Fruit-a-tives" Says Capt. Swan

Life is very miserable to those who suffer with Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Sour Stomach and Biliousness. This letter from Captain Swan (one of the best known skippers on the Great Lakes) tells how to get quick relief from Stomach Trouble.

PORT BURWELL, ONT., May 8th, 1913.

"A man has a poor change of living and enjoying life when he cannot eat. That was what was wrong with me. Loss of appetite and indigestion was brought on by Constipation. I have had trouble with these diseases for years. I lost a great deal of flesh and suffered constantly. For the last couple of years, I have taken "Fruit-a-tives" and have been so pleased with the results that I have recommended them on many occasions to friends and acquaintances. I am sure that "Fruit-a-tives" have helped me greatly. By following the diet rules and taking "Fruit-a-tives" according to directions, any person with Dyspepsia will get benefit".

H. SWAN

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box 6 for $2.50, or trial size 25c. or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

"War Novelties" Sell Well.

The manufacture of "war novelties" that are being sold at a Regent street, London, shop, is keeping several factories busy. Silk flags of all nations, except those of Germany and Austria, are particularly popular, being used as dinner table and general interior house decorations.

The profit made on each article sold is given to the Red Cross Society. The flags cost from 25 cents to $2.50 each. In a $2.50 flag the profit is 60 cents. A pincushion with a patriotic emblem, sold for 25 cents, gives four cents to the fund, and a more elaborate pincushion, sold at 32 cents, gives 8 cents.

Precautions in Berlin.

Every French and English name has disappeared in Berlin, according to cables, the Westminster hotel becoming the Station hotel and the Piccadilly cafe the Vaterland. Clocks in jewelers' windows, formerly registering the hour in each capital of the world, now have paper paste over the names of London, Paris, St Petersburg and Brussels.

On the Advice of His Doctor

He Used Dr. Chase's Ointment for Protruding Piles With Splendid Results.

Too often a doctor can only think of an operation when asked for a treatment for piles. Some are sufficiently broad-minded to use the most effective treatment available, which is undoubtedly Dr. Chase's Ointment, as was proved in the case referred to in this letter.

Mr. Simon E. Jones, Railway street, Inverness, N. S., writes; "I have found Dr. Chase's Ointment the best treatment obtainable for protruding piles. For three years I suffered from piles, and was advised by a local physician to try Dr. Chase's Ointment. I had tried many treatments in vain, and therefore know which is the best. I can highly recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment, and you are at liberty to use this statement."

The record of cures of every form of piles which stands behind Dr. Chase's Ointment is the strongest guarantee you can have that it will promptly relieve and cure this ailment, even in the most aggravated form. 60c a box, all dealers.

An Episode In Mexico

By BURKE JENKINS

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

Nick's little back room on the ground floor was our customary meeting place. Here we came together in the equality of true democracy. There have been evenings when eleven or twelve different professions of our throbbing metropolis were represented about Nick's little three legged table.

This evening attentive ears were turned toward Carusworthy, the opulent. That gentleman busied himself for a moment with a seltzer siphon. "Yes," he commented, "I rather believe in secret societies, fraternities, brotherhoods or whatever you choose to call 'em—that is, some of them."

He lounged into an easier attitude. "It happened down in Mexico in the state of Chihuahua—little, old, driedup town—can't exactly recall the name, but it began with a V."

"Varrejo?" inquired Shaw, the detective, quietly.

"The very place," agreed Carusworthy, glad to come by the name. "You know your geography, Shaw."

"Have to," was Shaw's laconic answer.

"Well," went on the narrator, "I had been making a thorough investigation of certain mines in which I was interested.

"Of course it had been convenient to make my visits to the nearest shipping points of the mines in my private car, and I had managed pretty well to avoid those sad hostelries of a flea bitten populace. I carried my own hotel. On the night of which I'm telling my car had been sided at a little town not an inch on the map from the Texas border, and I was counting on hitting the states some time the next day. Varrejo was the name, as Shaw reminded me.

"But the through limited that was to pick me up was reported full six hours late, and an attack of acute indigestion didn't help me to look on the bright side of the situation.

"I went to bed early, but sleep wouldn't woo for a copper. So I got up, slipped on the universal duck and Panama rig of the clime and time, left the car without being seen by any of my attendants and made for anything that might show semblance of a drug store. I rustled into a dilapidated wickiup, roused a profusely polite Mexican from postprandial slumber and demanded some cure all device of the doctor's for that sense of oppression.

"He led, with many explanations, to a stuffy little rear room, and there I underwent the ordeal of the most conglomerate mixture of all the Russian-Turko-Fiz Zip, steam-calorific baths that ever I suffered the shock of.

"But, nota bene, it did the trick. I became another 'pleased patron' and reached for my roll for the wherewith to requite my deliverer.

"My hasty toilet had omitted the prime necessity. I explained matters; hastened back to the siding.

"My car was gone. The through limited had caught up some of that lost time and, likewise, as per schedule, had caught up my outfit and was now merrily whirling my belongings northward. And my crew thought I was comfortably ensconced for the night. It was distinctly annoying.

"I hastened back to the apothecary and explained the situation. I could not blame him for that smile of incredulity which broke through his set politeness. The tale was rather a tall one, and it was evident that he took me for a new species of the genus grafter.

"I first turned my attention toward a civilized expedient in this extremity. 'Will you direct me to the telegraph office?' I assumed more or less of an imperial tone, for I calculated on soon disabusing my creditor of his erroneous impression concerning myself and standing. 'I will telegraph to New York for money.'

"His expression changed from one of sarcasm to one of alarm. 'You're from New York, senor?'

"THE TALE WAS RATHER A TALL ONE."

"'Certainly! What's odd about that?' I replied, somewhat nettled by his attitude, for I could see that his alarm was coupled to a hatred which an unpaid bill could scarcely account for.

"He changed his face on the instant, and, assuming a semblance of his former politeness, he said: 'Certainly, senor. I myself will conduct you to the telegraphic office, though it is rather late.'

"He led the way up a dingy street, casting furtive and what seemed to me uneasy glances at a little shack beside what I took to be a freight depot. My guide here left me for a moment, saying, 'I'll see what can be done, senor.'

"He disappeared into the shack and returned a minute later. 'Extremely sorry, senor, but the telegraph office is closed.'

"I didn't believe him, so I pushed my own way into the house and confronted a sleepy operator. 'The line is closed,' snapped that worthy before I could say a word.

"For some reason these two were in collusion against me. The why of it I couldn't fathom. The apothecary had apparently tipped this fellow off—to what I couldn't imagine.

"Accordingly, in distinct chagrin, I left the two and strode off into the night to think my situation over.

"But I had never been a man to look too long on the wrong side of a cloud, so it didn't take a great while for me to catch a glint of the silver lining.

"And this glint could almost be said to be a glint in very fact, for as I rambled around those tangled streets of that little old town I became aware of a gleam of light upon a hill just without the village limits.

"To add to the cheer, from time to time I caught the sound of music.

"Now, I have never been characterised by bashfulness, so, carried away perhaps by the entire incongruity of my whole evening thus far, I decided to add to it, and I headed for the scene of merriment, the grand house on the hill.

"I entered from a balcony unobserved, for the dance was in full swing, and I'm here to state that when a Spaniard dances he puts all that's in him in it. As for the senoritas I'm silent, for words fail on occasion.

"So I will attempt no description of that little woman who sat somewhat apart from the dancers, eagerness written all over her. 'Of course she must dance!' I stated emphatically to myself. 'What in the world can these fellows mean by leaving her for a wallflower?'

"Without further thought I trotted up to her and asked for the dance. At first she looked up in alarm; then, the spirit of coquetry conquering, she merely glanced down the hall before she rose and took my arm.

"When the dance ended I led the pretty senorita out on the balcony, where I had observed tables for refreshments.

"Seated vis-a-vis we continued the frothy conversation we had begun inside. As we chatted I looked up at her. Her gaze had left me and was fastened with frozen fear on something behind my back.

"I glanced up quickly, for something glinted above me. It was a pretty bit of a stiletto, and I could even note the arm that wielded it. There, tattooed on the tender skin of the under forearm, was the device of a brotherhood. I belonged to that order myself.

"But no time was there for an interchange of signals. I reached a quiet hand and caught the wrist above me. Then I shoved forward, bringing my assailant with one lunge on to my back, and, with the impetus of my vigorous resistance, over the balcony rail we both went, landing in the shrubbery. I fell on top.

"The fellow was not seriously hurt, but without much trouble I wrested the jeweled weapon from his grasp, and as he recovered from the shock of the fall I leaned toward him and whispered something in his ear.

"His entire attitude changed, and in spite of his bruises he jumped to his feet and called to the anxious faces that peered from the balcony down into our darkness in the shrubbery: 'It's all right, friends. I have made a mistake. Nobody hurt.'

"And then he explained matters to me. He was the son of Don Roderigo, chief man of that region, and had had the misfortune to be ignorant of the views of the United States in such matters as the too free use of knife or revolver. It seems he had been forced to track an enemy to New York, and there, ignorant of our viewpoint and caring little, he had found him and knifed him after the most approved Castilian style.

"It had all been about that very girl I had just danced with too. Now, the friends of the murdered man had even gone so far as to get out extradition papers, and it had been rumored that detectives had set out for the border.

"'Then you took me for a detective looking for you?' I asked, beginning to comprehend.

"'Exactly,' he answered, 'and Pedro, the apothecary, my good friend, thought so too. It didn't help matters, either,' he went on, with a half smile, 'when I returned from Pedro to find you dancing with my partner.'

"Well, there is little more to add, gentlemen, except that for two days, until my car returned, that populace turned itself loose doing nice things to me. But I have often wondered how the real detective fared when he arrived in that tender spot. I'll bet he had his troubles."

"He did," drawled Shaw, the detective. "In fact, I had to give that case up."

Radway's Ready Relief

E. L. Haddock of McGee, Mo., writes: "I had muscular rheumatism six weeks. Had three doctors, but did not get much relief. A friend insisted on me trying R. R. R. and sent me two bottles. In twenty minutes after the first application I could turn in bed with ease. Have used two bottles and am well."

Rheumatism

Apply the Relief externally to the part or parts affected, as briskly as circumstances will permit. Benefit will also be derived from Radway's Pills, their alterative action being peculiarly suited to this disease. Where the joints are swelled, stiff or contracted, the Relief, with sweet oil, is an admirable lubricant.

Copeland's Cure For Consumption

WINS CONFIDENCE BY ITS WONDERFUL CURATIVE POWERS.

MR. W. R. COPELAND.

Dear Sir—Now that I am well and strong again, I write to state that the fact I am alive to-day witnesses to the merit of your medicine.

My doctor, a specialist, said that I had the worst kind of consumption and that it was impossible for me to live. He gave me only eight to ten days before the disease would terminate fatally. He also said that it was no use in treating me, as I was too far gone.

I was left to die, but a friend came and told me about your medicine and procured me a bottle. Without much hope, I tried it. It did wonders. First the weakening perspiration stopped and the food I took stayed in the stomach. After a second bottle, I commenced to regain my appetite and was up in a few days of the time that the doctor said I should die. Five weeks later I was at work and have been working ever since.

I wish everyone could know the worth of your medicine, especially those afflicted with consumption as I was, for I undoubtedly owe my life to its use. I will at all times cheerfully answer any correspondence, and you are at liberty to publish this letter if you think it will help to recommend your medicine to others. I remain, Gratefully yours,

DAVID WARNOCK, Street Car Conductor,
282 Withrow Ave., Toronto.

The remarkable power of this medicine marks it as one of the greatest discoveries of this century. Its work is only just started, but it is safe to say that its reputation will grow world-wide.

It is a blessing, as all who have used it testify. To the real "down-and-out" consumptive, the chronic sufferers from bronchial and lung troubles—it is something more than a blessing. To them it means the difference between happiness and misery, and sometimes life instead of a grave.

It is a medicine that is honest. No false claims are made for it. It is good, most beneficiently good for the ailments specified above. These, even consumption, it will tackle, fight and OVERCOME. If you have a bad cough or cold—take this medicine. If you are a consumptive—take this medicine, for a greater medicine for consumption has NEVER BEEN KNOWN. If you are troubled with bronchitis and can't sleep at night for coughing—take this medicine. Your trouble will become a memory. If your throat or lungs are in any way weak or sensitive—take this medicine—and they will become strong and normal.

Cavities heal under its benign influence. Congestion is freed by its action to remove phlegm until the lungs are clear and work naturally without pain or distress. Emaciation, night sweats, poor appetite, inability to retain food in the stomach—all these effects of disease are mastered and the system built up under its curative and nourishing powers.

Ask your druggist, or send direct to us. Price, $1.00 per bottle. Testimonials of many others can be had on request. 2-44

PEKIN, China, Oct. 21.—Refugees who have come out of Tsingtau, the fortified position in the German possessions in Shantun province are authority for the statement that up to the time they left the Japanese had lost several thousand men before Tsingtau, while the casualties of the Germans had not amounted to more than several hundred.

Reliable information obtained in Pekin is to the effect that a British detachment sustained a number of casualties while crossing land that had been mined by the Germans in Kiaochau.

Arrivals at the Chinese capital from Siberia say that Russian troop trains are traveling westward over the trans-Siberian Railway hourly.

An uncensored letter received in Pekin from a reliable correspondent within the Japanese lines, dated Oct. 9, says that the Japanese attacked Tsingtau on several nights, but invariably were repulsed. Once, the correspondent says, the Germans followed the Japanese successfully for a short distance.

Girlish Complexion Now Easily Acquired

"A skin of blended snow, cream and rose" is the way an Ohio correspondent describes her newly acquired complexion. She is one who has adopted mercolised wax in place of cosmetics, massage, steaming and other methods. Many who have tried this marvellous wax report that its effects are quite different from those of any other treatment. It produces a complexion of exquisite girlish naturalness, rather than one bearing evidences of having been artificially "made over." One that is indeed "Nature's own," the result of gradually absorbing dead particles of surface skin, permitting the younger, healthier skin beneath to show itself and giving its pores a chance to breathe. Mercolised wax, procurable at any drug store in original one ounce package, is put on at night like cold cream and washed off in the morning.

I have also had many favorable letters from those who have tried the wrinkle-removing face bath which I recommended recently. If any have mislaid the formula, here it is: 1 oz. powdered saxolite, dissolved in ½ pt. witch hazel.—"Natalie" in the Woman Militant.

RECRUITING ON HOLIDAY.

Trafalgar Day Is Being Celebrated By Campaign for Soldiers.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—To-day is Trafalgar Day and it will be made the occasion of a great effort to recruit men for the army.

Hundreds of wreaths and bouquets have been banked at the base of the Nelson monument in Trafalgar Square, where great crowds were present throughout the day. Canada, New Zealand, Australia, Japan and South Africa sent mammoth floral offerings, which are displayed beneath the monolith, which is surmounted by the statue of Admiral Nelson. Nearly all the British ships also sent flowers.

Numerous pathetic notes accompanied the wreaths sent by relatives of the officers and men of the British cruiser Pathfinder and other ships destroyed recently by German submarines or mines.

In addition to the flowers the entire base of the Nelson monument is enveloped with recruiting banners bearing the words: "Your King and your country need you."

When You Hear That Dinner Bell

Does Your Mind Go Back to the Days When You Could Eat Like a Farm Hand?

The memory of an appetite is a woeful thing. The loss of stomach power—the ability to eat—the yearning after good old-fashioned food—that conditions is pitiful. Why can't you realize what thousands of others have demonstrated?

First Man—"I'm as hungry as a bear."

Look at the above illustration. Most every one remembers such a scene. Fancy yourself wild for food now. Fancy yourself able to eat as one of these men can eat.

Use a little common sense and look at your stomach trouble in a practical manner. Something has gone wrong with your digestive apparatus. Set your body machinery aright. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are Nature's own way to digesting food. By eating one of these tablets after each meal you digest that meal. Digesting that meal means easing the work of the stomach, intestines, liver and pancreas and storing up new materials for digesting future meals.

Eat what you will and when you will but always carry a little Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet in your pocket. In a short time you will be surprised at the gladsome spirit with which you look on food.

Go to your druggist anywhere and buy a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets this very day.

To anyone wishing a free trial of these tablets please address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich., and a small sample package will be mailed free.

NEVER, NO MORE!

Czar Says Russia Will Go Out of the Liquor Business For Good.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 21.—The Russian Government will never again embark in the manufacture and sale of alcoholic drinks. This statement, confirming previous reports, has been made in the name of Emperor Nicholas himself.

The Russian Union of Abstinence, which devotes its energies to the combating of alcoholism, addressed to Emperor Nicholas a solicitation that he forbid forever the sale of spirituous liquors in Russia. His Majesty replied in a telegram sent in the name of Grand Duke Constantine and addressed to the president of the alliance, in which he said:

"I thank you; I long ago decided to interdict for all time in Russia the sale of alcoholic drinks by the Government."

Blondin, Deputy Speaker of the House of Commons, as Minister of Inland Revenue, there came to an end most of the rumors that have been circulating around Parliament hill regarding changes in the Cabinet.

Mr. Pelletier was compelled to resign his portfolio on account of ill-health. He also vacated his Quebec County seat in Parliament. Mr. Casgrain will be a candidate in Quebec County.

Hon. W. B. Nantel was yesterday appointed to the Railway Commission to succeed Hon. M. E. Bernier whose term of office has expired. This was anticipated, but the appointment of Mr. Blondin as his successor to the portfolio of Inland Revenue was a complete surprise.

Mr. Casgrain's appointment to the Cabinet leaves the chairmanship of the Canadian section of the International Waterways Commission vacant. That will go to C. A. Magrath, who is a member of the commission and was to have been chairman on his appointment in 1911, but stepped aside for Mr. Casgrain. It is probable that J. G. H. Bergeron, K.C., of Montreal, will be appointed to the board.

Another vacancy is the office of Deputy Speaker of the Commons. Possibly Albert Sevigny, M.P., will receive the appointment.

Germans Admit Terrible Losses.

ROTTERDAM, Oct. 21.—The latest lists of casualties published in the German papers clearly indicate that the claims of the British and French troops to have wiped out whole battalions are absolutely true. Reserve infantry regiment No. 17 lost in one battalion 500 men wounded, apart from the dead, and in another battalion of the same regiment 740 were killed at the battle of the Marne.

Reserve infantry regiment No. 69 is said to have had unaccountable loss, and such words as "innumerable losses" and "tremendous number of dead and wounded" follow the names of several regiments.

Jibutil Under Fire.

ROME, Oct. 21.—The port of Jibutil, in British Somaliland, has been under fire from a German cruiser, causing considerable damage to the terminal buildings of the Addis Abebe Railway. Jibutil is located near the entrance to the Red Sea, opposite Aden.

Germans Still Employed.

KINGSTON, Ont., Oct. 21. — As they are experts at this certain kind of work Germans employed at the locomotive works here for years, are now engaged in the manufacture of shrapnel. Considerable complaint is made by Canadians about Germans being given preference in this work.

Killed By Falling Tree.

NORTH BAY, Ont., Oct. 21. — At Field Station, on the C. N. R., Mike Rossa, a Pole, was fatally injured by a falling tree. The unfortunate man not being used to bush life, made a step in the wrong direction and the tree fell directly across his chest. He lived only three hours.

REAL SOLDIERS RARE.

Volunteers and Landwehr All Germany Has Left.

PARIS, Oct. 21.—An official communication issued by the War Office last night says:

"'With us officers and soldiers are becoming rarer. We have no more men than are adequate. Volunteers and men of the landwehr are all we have to-day. If you saw these soldiers you would turn your head. Everybody is being taken. It is Germany's last hope. All the aged men are becoming soldiers. Have you bread? Many complain they have none.'"

Austrian Losses.

ROME, Oct. 21. — Austrian losses in action against Russia, Servia and Montenegro up to Oct. 6 are estimated approximately at: Officers, 426 killed and 1,589 wounded; men, 4,784 killed and 23,272 wounded; total killed, 4,769; wounded, 24,811. Only eight officers and 133 men, it is stated, are missing, and the numbers who have been taken prisoners are not given.

These figures are official, but are declared to be approximate. They are regarded as underestimated.

$67 GONE

Every Canadian consumed, during 1913, approximately $67.54 worth of imported goods. Every Canadian thereby sent sixty-seven dollars of Canadian money to enrich some other country, to keep foreign workmen employed.

It does not seem so much, but it makes the gigantic total of $675,428,168. The value of all goods "Made in Canada" is less than double this. Of these imports 65% come from the United States, yet by every condition of nature we are just as well equipped to manufacture many of these goods as our neighbour—and we do.

If only 25% of this 675 million dollars' worth of goods were produced in Canada, that production would give employment to 62,500 workmen, sufficient with their families and dependents to support 250,000 people, to populate a city larger than Winnipeg, or to create 16 cities the size of Guelph, Moncton, Brandon, or New Westminster.

By purchasing only goods "Made in Canada" you can help to keep a good share of this 675 million dollars at home, you can bring about a greater prosperity than Canada has ever known.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—Enlarged deliveries from first hands gave the wheat market today a downward turn. Prices closed weak, 1¢ to 1⅞¢ off. Corn lost 1⅝c to ⅞c net and oats ⅛c to ⅜c. There was an irregular finish in provisions ranging from 10c decline to an advance of 12½c. After ten days of almost continuous climb, the wheat seemed to many dealers to be in a position where any bearish developments would have unusual weight. In this connection stress was laid on the continued bulge in prices had induced rural holders in the northwest to accept bids more freely passed sufficient reason to cause extensive profit-taking here on the part of recent buyers. Notwithstanding that considerable rallying power was shown, especially after the first break in prices the market closed at the lowest point of the day.

German Advance on Sea Coast Stopped

THE ATTEMPT TO MOUNT HEAVY ARTILLERY FAILED

SAY THE GERMANS GOT THEIR BIGGEST SURPRISE OF WAR IN THE NORTH

Reports of the Fighting Near the Sea Coast Show That the Enemy's Advance Has Been Completely Checked--Germans Were Caught Between Two Fires.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, October 21.—The correspondents of the London newspapers in the field have succeeded to-day in getting through some details of the fighting along the Channel coast in Belgium. The reports all agree that the enemy has met with a reverse, and it is said that the Germans are retreating to the east of Ostend.

The Belgian correspondent of the Telegraph says,—"The order was given for the infantry to advance, and the rattle of machine guns supplemented the noise of the naval guns. The Germans were caught between two fires and their lines began to waver, and slowly gave way before the presure of the infantry."

"The strength of the attack was then increased, and soon the whole German line resting on the coast was in full retreat."

"The Daily Mail's Rotterdam correspondent under date of Tuesday night says,—"The Germans have received the greatest surprise of the war."

A despatch from Ghent says,—"The result of this fighting has caused anxiety among the German officers, one of whom, a German general, committed suicide."

REVOLUTION IN PORTUGAL

LONDON, October 21.—The Exchange Telegraph Company, says it has received information that a Royalist revolution has started in Lisbon. Reports are current last week that the friends of the deposed King Manuel have promised to finance an attempt on his part to regain the throne of Portugal.

LONDON, Eng., October 21.—That former King Manuel of Portugal, who, with his German wife, has been resting in England for some time, should be expelled from the country at once, is the agitation in some quarters to-day, following an attempted uprising in Portugal, which the Republican Government has put down with considerable loss of life. It is stated here that German agents have swarmed Portugal lately, promising that the Kaiser would restore the Monarchy to Portugal if the allies were beaten. The feeling against Manuel here is intense.

COPENHAGEN, October 21.—Reports have reached here of an attempt by the British submarines to srink the German destroyers off the Island of Rugen. No details of the encounter have been received The Island of Rugen is in the Baltic, off the coast of Germany, and is the largest of all the German Islands If British submarines are operating in the Baltic, it will likely be found that they are accompanied by a British fleet of considerable strength sent to engage the German Baltic fleet This if true is a very daring cutting out expedition of the British COPENHAGEN, October 21. — The military correspondent of the Berliner Tageblatt hints that there is a certain amount of anxiety about the situation manifesting itself in Germany. "While fresh masses of troops can be brought without hindrance over seas," he says, they constitute an awkward adversary. Although the unity of their handling if they invaded Germany is to be doubted, Germany has still a somewhat hard task, which must not be forgotten in waiting for a decision." Chancellor Bethmann Hollweg, the "Scrap of Paper" man is, according to the Tageblatt, being attacked in certain influential quarters as responsible for the war.

UNITED STATES ENTERS PROTEST

Protests Against Action of British Navy in Seizing the American Steamer "John D. Rockefeller"

AN OIL TANKER

Examiner Special:

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21. — The State Department entered a vigorous protest to the British Government against its seizure of the steamer John D. Rockefeller, a Standard Oil tanker, bound from New York to Copenhagen. This vessel, it became known to-day, was seized off the Orkney Isles within the last few days. She was an American bottom with a cargo of petroleum, and had not been in a foreign registry.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Oct. 21. — Great Britain and the United States are rapidly approaching a show-down on the question of the British seizure of American vessels, according to official indications to-day. One strong protest to Great Britain was lodged to-day and another was in prospect. A protest over the seizure of the Standard Oil Tanker Brindilla off Ambrose Channel is also imminent. Acting Secretary of State Lansing conferred at length to-day with President Wilson, presumably on British seizure subject. At the last of the conference he positively declined to indicate what the outcome was to be. It was officially indicated, however, that a protest in the Brindilla incident will be forthcoming, if it is found her seizure was based solely on the question of the validity of her transfer to the American flag.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—The Standard Oil steamer Platurnia, now under United States registry, but formerly flying the German flag, which left here Oct. 5th, with a cargo of oil, has been captured by a British war vessel off the coast of Scotland. This makes three.

Mr. Ed. Hawthorne reported that he had received the following cheques:

Myrtle	$40.00

John Young stated that some of the patrons preferred to give money rather than milk, and he suggested that arrangements be made to collect such contributions.

Mr. Gillespie moved, seconded by Mr. Johnston, that the salesman of each factory be appointed to receive the contributions of patrons or others, the same to be handed in to the Board's special Patriotic Committee.

Jas. Cork moved, seconded by J. H. Miller, that all contributions be made before the next meeting of the Board to Ed. Hawthorne, who will act as Treasurer.

RUSH OF RECRUITS AT THE ARMOURIES

Scores Are Anxious to Enlist for Service With the Second Canadian Expeditionary Forces—Medical Examination is Rigid.

ELEVEN ARE PASSED

That there will not be the slightest difficulty in securing Peterborough's quota of the second Canadian Expeditionary force was amply evidenced in the enthusiasm shown around the Armouries last night when recruiting was commenced. In fact the general feeling was of disappointment that only seventy-five are to be taken from Peterborough. There were double that number in evidence last night, and in addition to those anxious to go with the 57th Regiment Col. Young took the names of twenty men who want to go to the front as artillerymen. The 57th added quite a number of new recruits to its home strength as well and it is evident that Peterborough will not be found wanting in the second or further contingents.

The medical examination of the recruits for overseas is even more rigid than last time, and although the Medical Officer Major Cameron worked for two hours, only eleven men were passed in that time, each man being put through a severe test. There were scores wanting to be examined but it was impossible to handle any more last night. Recruiting will continue to-night at 8 o'clock and each evening until the quota has been examined and sworn in. A number failed to pass the examination last night and they were badly disappointed men.

There was a big turnout at the weekly drill of the Regiment and the different companies put in an hour's drill, while several companies had profitable practice in the miniature rifle range. The following orders were read:

Headquarters, Oct. 20.

Orders by Officer Commanding 57th Regiment, Peterborough Rangers.

1. Orders having been received from headquarters for the enlistment and mobilization of the infantry of the second contingent for the Canadian Expeditionary force recruiting for the same will begin at once and will be continued at the Armouries each week night at 8 p.m.

2. Enlistment will be voluntary and the term of service will be for the duration of the war.

3. All applicants must be medically fit, 5 feet 3 inches and over in height, with chest not less than 33 1-2 and between the ages of 18 and 45. A high standard will be required in musketry and general proficiency

4. Other considerations being equal applicants will be selected in the following order (a) unmarried men, (b) married men with no children, (c) married men with children. In every case married men must obtain the consent of their wives in writing.

5. Pay will be the same as laid down for the first contingent.

6. Until further orders all new enlisted will report at the Armouries daily at 8 p.m., except Sundays.

7. Major G. S. Cameron will act as Regimental Medical Officer.

8. Leave of absence from parade is hereby granted to Capt. McPherson, Major Davidson and Capt. McLean.

9. The following are taken on the strength of the Regiment Oct. 19th, 1914: C Company—Pte. E. J. Doleman; E Company, Ptes. F. W. Eggleton, P. Ferguson, E. Shrimpton; H Company, Pte. W. Flowers.

Information For Recruits.

OTTAWA, Oct. 20. — Some amendments and additional regulations governing recruiting for the second Canadian contingent have been issued in the form of a circular by the Militia Department. The proviso that no married man may enrol himself in the ranks of the volunteers without the consent of his wife is being allowed to remain in spite of the fact that this threatened to work havoc in the ranks of those desiring to volunteer for the first contingent.

In the case of a youth between the ages of 18 and 21 who desires to serve his country abroad he will be accepted if otherwise qualified, but only after he has obtained the consent of his parents. In the case of an only son whose parents depend upon him for support it is also provided that he must obtain their written consent before going to the front.

No change has so far been made in the physical requirements which the recruit must possess and it is not anticipated that there will be any difficulty in obtaining the necessary men, although in the Old Country the standard has already been lowered. The experience of the medical men at Valcartier camp was that about 7 per cent. of those who offered could not pass the prescribed tests.

MR. WEIR IS NEW ALDERMAN FOR EAST CITY

Elected Yesterday by a Majority of 10 Over G. L. Hay, to Succeed Ex-Alderman Anderson

WAS A KEEN FIGHT

Mr. Archibald Weir, of the firm of Weir and McCarthy was yesterday chosen by the ratepayers of East City to succeed Ex-Ald. J. C. Anderson in the City Council. His opponent was Mr. G. L. Hay, and the fight was a strenuous, albeit friendly, one, a large vote being polled. Mr. Weir's majority was ten, the total vote being 207 for Weir and 197 for Hay.

The figures are as follows:

For twelve years Mr. Weir was a member of the township council of Otonabee. Since coming to Peterborough he has been in the coal and wood business in East City for ten years, the firm being known as Weir and McIntyre, then Weir and O'Brien, and now Weir and McCarthy.

IMPORTANT EVENTS ARE DEVELOPING IN THE THEATRE OF WAR

Sudden Tightening of Censorship Indicates Momentous Happenings---French Communique Merely Says "Situation Unchanged" But High Officials Admit That They Expect to Receive Good News

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, October 21. — By Wm. Philip Simms. — That important events are developing in the immediate theatre of the war was indicated to-day by the sudden tightening of censorship. Only yesterday's events were discussed in the official declaration. It is understood that to-day the allies are making determined efforts to retake Lille, where the general German headquarters for the entire right wing are understood to have been established.

At headquarters here there is an air of great expectancy. All the high officials admit that they expect momentous and especially good news in the near future. It is generally believed that the Germans are again retiring inside the Belgian frontier, although there is as yet no confirmation of the report that they have been compelled to relinquish their hold on Ostend.

Reports are current here, and generally credited, that the German attempt to mount their heavy artillery along the coast for offensive operations against the British gunboats, which are supporting the extreme left of the allied lines, has utterly failed. The guns have been dismounted by the wonderfully accurate shooting from the fleet, and from the guns of the naval brigade now in action along the coast.

The Germans attempted a submarine raid but, according to reports received here, failed to make any headway, all of their torpedoes launched going wide of the mark.

PARIS, October 21.—That the general situation on the battle front continues unchanged, was the dominant note of the official communique telegraphed here from Bordeaux at three o'clock this afternoon. It made no general reference to the fighting known to be in progress to-day, referring specifically to yesterday's happenings. The attacks of yesterday along the front of Dixmunde, La Bassee, were of the most violent character, declared the statement, but in every instance they were repelled and the enemy was unable to gain any ground. Otherwise the situation remained unchanged.

LONDON, October 21.—The British war office is confident that the German movement to invade France by way of the seacoast has been completely checked. While severe fighting in this zone can be expected for a long time to come, the situation now on the northern line in France is in exact parallel or that which exists farther south. Both sides are already entrenching, and can be expected to dig themselves in so that it will be hard to make progress either way.

The Germans have brought up their heavy artillery in the north. This fact shows that they have abandoned their original hope of a decisive dash which would break down the allied defensive and permit them to reach Dunkirk in a day or two. With their heavy guns at the front they will now, if previous performances are followed, attempt to push forward step by step, entrenching as they proceed.

All information received here by the war office shows that the general situation along the entire battle line in France is improving.

THE ORATORIO.

The highly successful presentation of the Oratorio of Judas Maccabaeus last night had two or three especial points of significance. It added a considerable amount to the Patriotic Fund; it demonstrated the unity of spirit, that this time suggests, and it gave a strong promise of a higher development of musical interests. The composition of the chorus represents a far-reaching musical influence. With one choir leader excellently conducting the chorus, and two leaders of other church choirs, excellently taking some of the principal solos; and with the chorus of eighty voices drafted from the several city choirs we have evidence of a spirit of harmony that does not always obtain with persons whose metier is the study and practice of harmony. The thorough training given the members of the chorus in the preparation of the oratorio and the taste for the higher forms of musical composition developed by such training, will be reflected in greater zeal and better work in the choirs of the several churches from which the members of the chorus are drawn. The occasion which brought the Conservatory Orchestra into prominence with excellent accompaniments will promote and intensify the success that has already been obtained in orchestral music. In addition to all these advantages the chorus, the soloists and the orchestra set an example to all our citizens in the way of zeal in the interests of the Patriotic Fund. If the time spent by the chorus and soloists and orchestra in preparing for such a splendid musical treat could be capitalized and reduced to terms of money, they would represent a far greater contribution individually to the Patriotic Fund than the individual contributions of the audience at last night's concert, and far more than the average contributions, otherwise, of our citizens. True patriotism is speechless—it does not express itself in words, without accompanying deeds that count.

WHAT WE NEED.

Brantford is making special efforts to provide work for the unemployed. The city council a night or two ago made the principal business of its meeting the passing of a by-law to raise $21,000 to construct a portion of its proposed Park Drive, in order to give employment. To this amount the "Parks Board" is willing to add a part of its appropriation. While this enterprise on the part of the City Council of Brantford is only an imitation of the action of the City Council of Peterborough, in adopting the advice of The Examiner to raise money by issuing short term bonds to provide employment, the occasion reveals the fact that Brantford is ahead of Peterborough in having an equivalent of a Park Commission, something that Peterborough sorely needs. We have no body with authority to take charge of the park interests which include the boulevarding, curbing, tree planting and tree care, incident to the successful and systematic beautification of our public places. The City Council has the authority, but in this regard its past attitude and action—its wanton removal of venerable and stately trees, its neglect of the streets, indicate that the city cannot count upon that body to do much in this direction. This does not apply alone to the present council, but to all others which have preceded it. We had a big meeting last June and passed strong resolutions in regard to a Civic Driveway. But all these have gone the way of the proverbial New Year resolutions. Not a thing has been done to implement the decision vigorously, if vaguely, arrived at. Perhaps the chief reason for this has been that we have not authority concentrated in a single definite body like a parks commission, or some body answering its function and purpose, whatever name may be given it. If we had had such a body to give definite direction and impulse to, the resolution of the civic beautification meeting of last June, we might have work going on now that would give employment that is badly needed on the edge of a doubly hard winter; made so by the hardship of unemployment, added to the rigours of the meteorological hard winter; for it may be a winter of severe weather. The balmy weather of to-day will not last, and on the principle of nature averaging weather conditions, the winter when it comes, may be severe to compensate, for the abnormal projection of summer weather conditions far into the autumn months.

THE RED CROSS WORK.

The Red Cross Society may not count in war-waging operations, with armies and fleets, but it is of the highest and most humane importance in gathering the frightful red harvest of war. Governments throw troops into the field to slay and maim. The Red Cross Society sends its members into the field to heal, help and comfort; to help repair, as far as may be, the wastage of human vitality wrought by bullet and shell and disease. From a human point of view the work of the Red Cross Society is infinitely more important, than big guns and other instruments of inflicting death and suffering. In the stress of battle the combatants are too busy with their grim work to note the fall of a comrade in arms even though he may be a brother. They press on and leave the sore stricken to lie ugheeded and untended. The most agonizing suffering of war falls upon the sorely or even slightly wounded; and, if it were not for the Red Cross good Samaritans, the sufferings of our brave defenders who escape in many cases, the mercy of swift death, to lie bleeding and mangled upon the field exposed to cold and storm would be very greatly intensified. We cannot attach too much importance to the work of the Red Cross Society. One feature and one of its noblest features is the place it gives, to women who cannot help in the destructive activities of war, but in her place in the Red Cross line can realize the beautiful truth of the lines of Scott—

O, women in our hours of ease
Uncertain, coy and hard to please;
But O, when anguish wrings the brow,
A ministering angel thou.

From the days of the Lady of the Lamp till the awful now, women have indeed been ministering angels to the sufferers from war. And they are today doing noble work, and any encouragement we can give, will be a response to the call of humanity and an assistance in promoting the best work of war—caring for the wounded and diseased. On this account, we print on another part of this page, instructions as to how women may be instruments of help, by busying themselves in the quiet of their homes in helping forward there the work of the Society. Kingsley tells us that "men must work and women must weep"; but this is the time when women must work as well as weep; and they can do a noble work in helping forward the objects of the Red Cross Society. There is work that the humblest, as well as the highest woman can do. A little womanly skill and practical expression of womanly heart, and a few simple materials are all that is needed.

JINGOIZING BUSINESS.

Confidence in the "made-in-Canada" campaign might well afford now and then to break forth into jingozing. An old song went the round of the London music halls in 1878, when England and Russia were on the verge of war over the Turkish question. There was a large war party in England composed of both Tories and Liberals, and a war poet made a song of which one verse has become famous:

"We do not want to fight, but by
Jingo, if we do,
We've got the ships, we've got the men, we've got the money,
too."

There is an industrial war party in Canada just now, and it consists of Canadian citizens not from both political parties, but without reference to parties whatever. This Made-in-Canada party is national. Recognizing that in an industrial crisis this country has everything necessary to grapple with conditions, it may be permitted for to inflict this commercial parody on the old jingo song:

"We well know how to fight, and by Jingo, when we do,
We've got the power, we've got the men, the raw material,
too."

STEALING THE FOOD OF THE BELGIANS.

If only for the sake of the population of Belgium it is to be hoped that the Germans will soon be driven out of that country. The Germans are reported to be shipping the food supplies of that country wholesale to Germany—a significant demonstrate of the state of Germany, but a calamitous proceeding for the starving Belgians. In circumstances like the present, if the United States Government carries out the suggested scheme for relieving the population whose food has been stolen by the Germans, the Germans will probably steal the supplies sent in and ship them to their own country.—Montreal Herald.

How Women Can Help The Work of the Red Cross Society

Below are published practical instructions to guide all our women in helping in the work of the Canadian Red Cross Society, which is organized to collect money and goods for the relief of the sick and wounded in war. The head office and receiving warehouse is 77 King Street, Toronto. A little leaflet issued by the Society, details its needs, and suggestions for work, as follows:

Money.

This is the first and most urgent need of the Society. It can at any moment be converted into the most necessary supplies and can be easily sent to any place.

Other Supplies.

As some persons, more especially the women of the country, can give work and not money; and as some goods are better made by hand than bought, the following suggestions are offered to individuals and working parties who are desirous of helping.

Women organized for sewing should not spend money on buying the supplies which have simply to be shipped away as bought, as these can be better bought at Headquarters, but they are recommended to spend money on materials to work up into such garments as shirts, pyjamas, dressing gowns, bed jackets, nightshirts; or socks, wristlets, mitts, cholera belts and scarves; or kit bags, all of which require careful making.

A—Garments

In making these garments, Butterick's patterns, as approved by the British Red Cross Society, should be used. Set of five patterns will be issued to any woman's society applying for them to the Superintendent of Supplies, 77 King Street, East, Toronto, enclosing 10 cents for mailing These patterns are presented to the Red Cross Society by the Butterick Publishing Co., and should only be used in Red Cross work.

This must not be understood to mean that no other patterns are useful, but these are suggested to standardize the work.

The following garments are required:

Bed Jackets (No. 129), flannel or eiderdown.

Pyjamas (No. 130), flannelette or lightweight flannel.

Night shirts (No. 131), cotton or flannelette.

Day Shirts (No. 7003), lightweight flannel or flannelette (detachable collar, at least 16 1-2-inch). This pattern requires a 2-inch box pleat in the back.

All collars should be at least 16 1-2 inches, and should vary up to 18 inches Mark all garments with size of collar and tie up each size in a separate parcel.

Bed Socks. — Cut two pieces of eiderdown the shape of the foot of a sock or moccasin, but considerably larger, and with four inches of leg. Sew the two pieces together down the back, along the sole, and over the top of the foot, leaving an opening in the leg at the front. Hem or face the top of the leg so as to form a casing, and in this run a tape, leaving the ends long enough to tie. When complete, the socks should look like a pair of overshoes, or large boots.

B.—Knitted Goods.

Knitted Cholera Belts—Cast on 100 to 150 stitches, No. 13 steel needles; knit 3 inches ribbed, knit on to No. 9 bone needles, and knit 8 inches plain; knit on to the steel needles again, and rib for 3 inches. Sew up the back. Cast on and take off loosely. Fingering yarn No. 5, in neutral or pale grey; soft quality.

Cast on and cast off very loosely.

Many men prefer woven belts. These can be obtained in three sizes, wholesale, for less than 30 cents each. Flannel belts are also very useful.

Socks—With heels, are best; in three sizes, 10-inch, 10 1-2 inch, and 11-inch foot. For the British Army, these are made in heavy grey yarn of good quality (wheeling), and sizes are distinguished in the following way:

Socks with 10-inch foot have 6 rows of red wool in the ribbing about 1-inch from top of leg of sock.

Socks with 10 1-2 inch, have similar stripe in bright blue wool.

With 4-ply yarn, use No. 14 steel needles, casting on about 64-72 stitches.

The toe should be very carefully finished so that there is no 'ridge' in casting off. "Darning-in" the stitches when reduced to 20 is the most satisfactory method of finishing the toe.

Scarves—72 inches long, 9 inches wide, in grey or khaki; loose stitch.

Sleeping or Balaclava Cap—(A very simple pattern)—No. 9 bone needless. 4-ply yarn in grey or khaki.

Begin with 48 stitches and knit two flaps of 48 stitches each, 2 inches deep of 2 and 2 rib, 96 stitches in all. Then join the flaps by knitting on to 4 needl

Knit 10 inches of 2 and 2 rib.

Cast off 30 stitches and leave a space 1 1-2 inches deep; then cast on 30 stitches again and knit as before six inches before shaping the top. To shape the top knit two stitches together every alternate stitch. Knit one row plain. Repeat these two rows until only about 30 stitches are left on the needles, then decrease every other stitch each row.

Wristlets—Grey or khaki. 4-ply fingering. No. 14 steel needles. (4).

Cast on about 60 stitches; rib for 9 inches. Cast off loosely. A hole for the thumb may be left if desired, so that the wristlet can be used as a mitt.

Mitts—3 oz. of 4-ply yarn. Grey or khaki. 6 needles, No. 14.

C.—Hold Alls or Kit-Bags.

Kit Bag or Hold-All. — (To hang over soldier's cot in hospital).

Coarse linen or canvas, about 16 inches x 24 inches, with rings at corners to hang by. Pockets containing comb, brush, tooth-brush and paste. Towels, wash cloth, soap. Pair of pyjamas and socks, and soft slippers. Also 12 sheets of paper, envelopes in rubber band, and pencil, etc.

D.—Bedding.

No pillows or pillow slips required.

Sheets—60 x 90. Ready laundered. Good quality not necessary.

Towels—Huckaback or Turkish.

Washcloths.—Assorted.

Blankets.—Grey or brown. 80x60.

Pneumonia Jackets. — Of cotton, wool and cheesecloth, should only be made under direction of nurse or doctor.

Bandages. — Bandages 2-in., 2 1-2 in., 3 in., and 4 in., to be made of good factory cotton or old sheets in good condition. Length, 5 yards, to be used as outside bandages. No other bandages should be made, as they will be bought with medical supplies.

Handkerchiefs (for the hospital) — Should be of unhemmed cheesecloth, 18 x 18, laundered. Tie up in dozens.

Men's handkerchiefs, of ordinary size, ready laundered, are also acceptable. Tie up in dozens.

Packing and Shipping Directions.

1 Launder all cotton goods, also socks and belts, carefully, before sending them.

2. Tie up all articles in dozens, or half-dozens, according to size and material.

3. Bd socks, socks, wristlets, mitts and gloves should be lightly sewn together in pairs, not pinned. Bandages should be fastened by safety pins.

4. List of contents should be placed inside and outside every parcel, and a copy also forwarded by mail to the destination of the package.

5. Almost all railways and express companies are carrying Red Cross packages free of charge, but charges should be paid at point of despatch, and the receipt forwarded to Secretary, 77 King Street, East, Toronto, who will make, in due time, a general application for refunds.

6. To avoid expense and trouble in handling packages, it is suggested that no single package should weigh more than 150 lbs.

7. As far as possible, only one kind of article should be packed in each package; e.g., a case of sheets, a case of socks, etc., etc.

8. Small parcels can always be sent in to the Head Office, or Provincial Receiving Centres, but no large shipment of goods should be made without consulting the Head Office as to the correct destination of the goods, as shipping instructions must vary with the season.

THE DIFFERENCE.

Fight for the world's freedom and the world fights with you. Fight for absolute world domination and you fight alone.—Montreal Herald.

WAR AND THE COST OF LIVING.

A report just isued by the Dominion Labour Department shows that the war has had but little effect upon food prices in Canada, for, although the index number has gone up five points, a careful analysis of the quotations from the two hundred or more articles scattered over the whole field of production and consumption reveals that the increases are largely upon articles which hardly go to make up the average man's dinner table. For example, cream of tartar, antimony, alcohol, solder, sulphur, tin and rubber, have nearly all doubled in price. On the other hand, the report says that meats and flour are showing a tendency to decline. And it is worth while noting that in Great Britain the Economist's index went up six per cent. during August, the rise being great in foodstuffs; while Bradstreets' index number for the United States went up 12 per cent. in August. So when everything is considered we find that the shock of war has been withstood by Canada as well, if not better, than most other countries of the world.—Brantford Expositor.

"FRIENDS IN NEED."

The patriotism of the Dominions in placing their food supplies at our disposal at a time of crisis suggests a policy of mutual trade benefit in the future. Australia, which in common with the other Dominions, has long given the United Kingdom a trade preference, is now considering how to ensure, by force if necessary, that its supplies of food are placed at the disposal of the Mother Country before all competitors. A commission which has been considering ways and means of effecting this object, has made certain practical proposals to this end. In the same way Canada and New Zealand have displayed a most vital desire to secure for this country a constant and abundant supply of food. Friends in need are friends indeed. When peace once more dawns in the world these gracious and kindly acts are not likely to be forgotten by the British people. —London Morning Post.

HON. DR. BELAND IN BELGIUM.

Hon. Dr. H. S. Beland, former Postmaster General of Canada, and who still represents Beauce County in the House of Commons, is a distinguished Canadian who is doing fresh honour to his country in the great war. The circumstances under which Dr. Beland volunteered his services were at once romantic and characteristic of the man. He had been married but a few weeks to Mrs. Cogels of Cappelen, near Antwerp, Belgium, a lady whom he met on a trip to Belgium a year before. The happy couple were in France and just preparing to come to Canada, when war was declared. They hastened to Antwerp where Dr. Beland immediately volunteered his services as a surgeon. Their house, near Antwerp, was turned into a hospital for British soldiers and the latest reports from Dr. Beland state that he has been treating many of the British wounded from the batle of Mons and that he is in charge of the larger hospital for British wounded, which consists of the Dawson Memorial Church, which has been given for that purpose.

Dr. Beland has made formal application to be attached to the medical corps with the Canadian expeditionary force when it takes the field. — Canadian Liberal Monthly

Just One Day's Pay Means $141,738.64 for Those Dependent on Canada's Fighting Men.

The voluntary contribution made by officers and employees of the Canadian Pacific Railway to the Canadian Patriotic Fund of the one-day's pay in the month of September has amounted to the fine total of $140,816.71, to which must be added the sum of $1,421.93 contributed in the same way from the Dominion Atlantic Railway, the line owned by the company in Nova Scotia.

In view of the fact that this contribution was collected from all districts served by the railway from Atlantic to Pacific, Sir Thomas Shaughnessy has written to Ottawa asking that credit in the distribution of this sum should be given to the various provinces in the following proportions: British Columbia, $18,000; Alberta, $16,000; Saskatchewan, $15,000; Manitoba, $28,000; Ontario, $28,000; Quebec, $28,000; New Brunswick, $5,316.71, and to Nova Scotia the sum already quoted of $1,421.93.

The "one-day's pay" idea initiated by the Canadian Pacific has proven one of the most fertile fields for the Patriotic Fund, as it was adopted by a large number of firms as the most practical method of enabling all classes to contribute according to their means.

This contribution is entirely separate from the sum of $100,000 voted by the directors of the Canadian Pacific Railway to the fund, and to the large sums given by directors and officers in their individual capacity. During the campaign week for the Montreal branch of the fund over $10,000 was collected in Windsor Street Station over and above the contributions under the one-day's pay scheme.

NO LONGER CONSIDERED A CONTEMPTIBLE LITTLE ARMY, SAYS DOYLE

British Author Resents Kaiser's Phrase and Points Out Some Lessons For the Germans--Shooting Eight of Ten Points of the Complete Soldier.

(By Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.)

LONDON, Oct. 10. — Early last year, in the course of some comments which I made upon the slighting remarks about our Army by Gen. von Bernhardi, I observed, "It may be noted that Gen. von Bernhardi has a poor opinion of our troops. This need not trouble us. We are what we are, and words will not alter it. From very early days our soldiers have left their mark upon Continental warfare, and we have no reason to think that we have declined from the manhood of our forefathers." Since then he has returned to the attack. With that curious power of coming after deep study to the absolutely diametrically wrong conclusion which the German expert, political or military, appears to possess, he says in his "War of To-day," "The English Army, trained more for purposes of show than for modern war," adding in the same sentence a sneer at our "inferior Colonial levies."

He will have an opportunity of reconsidering his views presently upon the fighting value of our oversea troops, and surely, so far as our own are concerned he must already be making some interesting notes for his next edition, or, rather for the learned volume upon "Germany and the Last War," which will, no doubt, come from his pen. He is a man to whom we might well raise a statue, for I am convinced that his frank confession of German policy has been worth at least an army corps to this country. We may address to him John Davidson's lines to his enemy:

Unwilling friend, let not your spite abate.
Spur us with scorn, and strengthen us with hate.

There is another German gentleman who must be thinking rather furiously. He is a certain Col. Gadke, who appeared officially at Aldershot some years ago, was hospitably entreated, being shown all that he desired to see, and on his return to Berlin published a most deprecatory description of our forces. He found no good thing in them. I have some recollection that Gen. French alluded in a public speech to his critic's remarks, and expressed a modest hope that he and his men would some day have the opportunity of showing how far they were deserved. Well, he has had his opportunity, and Col. Gadke, like so many other Germans, seems to have made a miscalculation.

Germans Untried in War.

An army which has preserved the absurd parade schritt, an exercise which is painful to the bystander, as he feels that it is making fools of brave men, must have a tendency to throw back to earlier types. These Germans have been trained in peace and upon the theory of books. In all that vast host there is hardly a man who has stood at the wrong end of a loaded gun. They live on traditions of close formations, vast cavalry charges, and other things which will not fit into modern warfare. Braver men do not exist, but it is the bravery of men who have been taught to lean upon each other, and not the cold, self-contained, resourceful bravery of the man who has learned to fight for his own hand. The British have had the teachings of two recent campaigns fought with modern weapons —that of the Tirah and of South Africa. Now that the reserves have joined the colours there are few regiments which have not a fair sprinkling of veterans from these wars in their ranks. The Pathan and the Boer have been their instructors in something more practical than those Imperial Grand Manoeuvres where the all-highest played with his puppets in such a fashion that one of his Generals remarked that the chief practical difficulty of a campaign so conducted would be the disposal of the dead.

Boers and Pathans have been hard masters, and have given many a slap to their admiring pupils, but the lesson has been learned. It was not show troops, General, who, with two corps, held five of your best day after day from Mons to Compiegne. It is no reproach to your valor; but you were up against men who were equally brave and knew a great deal more of the game. This must begin to break upon you, and will surely grow clearer as the days go by. We shall often in the future take the knock as well as give it, but you will not say that we are a show army if you live to chronicle this war, nor will your Imperial master be proud of the adjective which he has demeaned himself in using before his troops had learned their lesson.

The South Africa Lesson.

The fact is that the Germany Army, with all its great traditions, has been petrifying for many years back. They never learned the lesson of South Africa. It was not for want of having it expounded to them, for their military attache—"im with thespatchcock on 'is 'elmet," as I heard him described by a British orderly—missed nothing of what occurred, as is evident from their official history of the war. And yet they missed it, and with all those ideas of individual efficiency and elastic independent formation, which are the essence of modern soldiering. Their own more liberal thinkers were aware of it. Here are the words which were put into the mouth of Guntz, the representative of the younger school, in Beyerlein's famous novel:

"The organization of the German Army rested upon foundation which had been laid a hundred years ago. Since the great war they had, never seriously been put to the proof, and during the last three decades they had only been altered in the most trifling details. In three long decades! And in one of those decades the world at large had advanced as much as in the previous century.

"Instead of turning this highly developed intelligence to good account, they bound it hand and foot on the rack of an everlasting drill which could not have been more soullessly mechanical in the days of Frederick. It held them together as an iron hoop holds together a cask the dry staves of which would fall asunder at the first kick."

Lord Roberts has said that if ten points represent the complete soldier, eight should stand for his efficiency as a shot. The German maxim has rather been that eight should stand for his efficiency as a drilled marionette. It has been reckoned that about two hundred books a year appear in Germany upon military affairs, against about twenty in Britain. And yet after all this expert debate the essential point of all seems to have been missed—that in the end everything depends upon the man behind the gun, upon his hitting his opponent and upon his taking cover so as to avoid being hit himself.

After all the efforts of the General Stab the result when shown upon the field of battle has filled our men with a mixture of admiration and contempt—contempt for the absurd tactics, admiration for the poor devils who struggle on in spite of them. Listen to the voices of the men who are the real experts. Says a Lincolnshire Sergeant: "They were in solid square blocks, and we couldn't help hitting them." Says Private Tait (Second Essex,) "Their rifle shooting is rotten. I don't believe they could hit a haystack at 100 yards." "They are rotten shots with their rifles," says an Oldham private. "They advance in close column, and you simply can't help hitting them," writes a Gordon Highlander. "You would have thought it was a big crowd streaming out from a Cup-tie," says Private Whitaker of the Guards. "It was like a farmer's machine cutting grass," so it seemed to Private Hawkins of the Coldstreams. "No damned good as riflemen," says a Connemara boy. "You couldn't help hitting them. As to their rifle fire, it was useless." "They shoot from the hip, and don't seem to aim at anything in particular."

Not Books That Count.

These are the opinions of the practical men upon the field of battle. Surely a poor result from the 200 volumes a year, and all the weighty labours of the General Stab! "Artillery nearly as good as our own, rifle fire beneath contempt," that is the verdict. How will the well-taught parade schritt avail them when it comes to a stricken field?

But let it not seem as if this were meant for disparagement. We should be sinking to the Kaiser's level if we answered his "contemptible little army" by pretending that his own troops are anything but a very formidable and big army. They are formidable in numbers, formidable, too, in their patriotic devotion to their native courage, and in the possession of such material, such great cannon, aircraft, machine guns and armoured cars, as none of the Allies can match. They have every advantage which a nation would be expected to have when it has known that war was a certainty, while others have only treated it as a possibility. There is a minuteness and earnestness of preparation which are only possible for an assured event. But the fact remains, and it will only be brought out more clearly by the Emperor's unchivalrous phrase, that in every arm the British have already shown themselves to be the better troops. Had he the Froissart spirit within him he would rather have said: "You have to-day a task which is worthy of you. You are faced by an army which has a high repute and a great history. There is real glory to be won to-day." Had he said this then, win or lose, he would not have needed to be ashamed of his own words—the words of an ungenerous spirit.

It is a very strange thing how German critics have taken for granted that the British Army had deteriorated, while the opinion of all those who were in close touch with it was that it was never so good. Even some of the French experts made the same mistake, and Gen. Bonnat counselled his countrymen not to rely upon it, since "it would take refuge amid its islands at the first reverse." One would think that the causes which make for its predominance were obvious. Apart from any question of national spirit or energy there is the all-important fact that the men are there of their own free will, an advantage which I trust that we shall never be compelled to surrender. Again, the men are of longer service in every arm, and they have far more opportunities of actual fighting than come to any other force. Finally, they are divided into regiments, with centuries of military glory streaming from their banners, which carry on a mighty tradition. The very words, the Guards, the Rifles, the Connaught Rangers, the Buffs, the Scots Greys, the Gordons, sound like bugle calls. How could an army be anything but dangerous which had such units in its line of battle?

History Repeating Itself.

And yet there remains the fact that both enemies and friends are surprised at our efficiency. This is no new phenomenon. Again and again in the course of history the British armies have had to win once more the reputation which had been forgotten. Continentals have always begun by refusing to take them seriously. Napoleon, who had never met them in battle, imagined that ther unbroken success was due to some weakness in his marshals rather than in any excellence of the troops. "At last I have them, these English," he exclaimed, as he gazed at the thin red, line at Waterloo. "At last they have me, these English," may have been his thought that evening as he spurred his horse out of the debacle. Foy warned him of the truth. "The British infantry is the devil," said he. "You think so because you were beaten by them," cried Napoleon. Like von Kluck or von Kluck's master, he had something to learn.

Why this continual depreciation? It may be that the world pays so much attention to our excellent right arm that it cannot give us credit for having a very serviceable left as well. Or it may be that they take seriously those jeremiads over our decay which are characteristic of our people, and very especially of many of our military thinkers. I have never been able to understand why they should be of so pessimistic a turn of mind, unless it be a sort of exaltation of that grumbling which has always been the privilege of the old soldier. Croker narrates how he met Wellington in his latter years, and how the Iron Duke told him that he was glad that he was so old, as he would not live to see the dreadful military misfortunes which were about to come to his country. Looking back we can see no reason for such pessimism as this. Above all the old soldier can never make any allowance for the latent powers which lies in civilian patriotism. Let the British Empire be involved, the British public will never allow a trained soldier to leave these islands. He is at the front himself and doing such good work that he has little time for reminiscence, but when he has he must admit that he underrated the nerve of his countrymen.

Assurance Beneath Pessimism.

And yet under the pessimism of such men as he here is a curious contradictory assurance that there are no troops like our own. The late Lord Goschen used to tell a story of a letter that he had from a Captain in the navy at the time when he was First Lord. This Captain's ship was lying alongside a foreign cruiser in some port, and he compared in his report the powers of the two vessels. Lord Goschen said that his heart sank as he read the long catalogue of points in which the British ship was inferior, guns, armour, speed, until he came to the postscript, which was: "I think I could take her in twenty minutes."

With all the grumbling of our old soldiers there is always some reservation of the sort at the end of it. Of course those who are familiar with our ways of getting things done would understand that a good deal of the croaking is a means of getting our little army increased, or at least preventing its being diminished. But whatever the cause, the result has been the impression abroad of a "contemptible little army." Whatever surprise in the shape of 17-inch howitzers of 900-foot Zeppelins the Kaiser may have for us, it is a safe prophecy that it will be a small matter compared to that which Sir John French and his men will be to him.

But above all, I look forward to the development of our mounted riflemen. This I say is no disparagement of our cavalry, who have done so magnificently. But the mounted riflemen is a peculiarly British product—British and American—with a fresh edge upon it from South Africa. I am most curious to see what a division of these fellows will make of the Uhlans. It is good to see that already the old banners are in the wind, Lovat's Horse, Scottish Horse, King Edward's Horse, and the rest. All that cavalry can do will surely be done by our cavalry. But I have always held, and I still very strongly hold, that the mounted rifleman has it in him to alter our whole conception of warfare, as the mounted archer did in his day, and now in this very war will be his first great chance upon a large scale. Ten thousand well-mounted, well-trained riflemen, young officers to lead them, all broad Germany, with its towns, its railways, and its magazines before them—there lies one more surprise for the doctrinaires of Berlin.

A SURPRISE FOR TRAVELLERS

The most surprised visitor to Peterborough, on Monday, the 19th inst., was Mr. W. G. Coburn of Toronto. Mr. J. L. McIntyre, representative of S. Davis and Sons, Limited, of Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Vancouver and Ottawa, the largest manufacturers of high-class cigars in the British Empire, requested Mr. Graham, proprietor of the "Empress," to present, on behalf of his firm, a box of "Noblemen" cigars to the first commercial man registering at the new hotel.

Mr. Coburn was the first to sign the new register, and to say the least, was very much pleased when Mr. Graham handed over the Davis smokes.

And in Peterborough, at BARRIE'S, the saving between the price asked now and what we had to ask last year is considerable.

¶ Do not think that only by the announcement of a "Special Sale" you can be sure of getting the advantage of this season's lower prices. Marking goods at last year's values and then reducing them to this year's figure, may show you the exact amount of the saving, but we consider such a method misleading. We have only one price on our Furs and that is

We can tell you exactly how much more a certain piece of Fur was worth last year, but we never say: "This was $150.00 reduced to $100.00." We mark a garment $100.00, that is its value this season and it cannot, under any circumstances, be called a $150.00 article.

Supplied Milk Deteriorated

James B. Rylott Fined $25 for This Offence in Police Court To-day

Joseph B. Rylott was charged before the police magistrate this morning with supplying to the Victoria Cheese Factory, Belmont, for the purpose of converting into cheese, deteriorated milk. The prosecution was conducted by Mr. Thompson of Madoc, official prosecutor for the Dairymen's Association.

The defendant claimed it was an accident, inasmuch as water leaked from a creamery can which had been placed in the milk for the purpose of cooling.

In reply to the question from the Chief, however, defendant admitted that he did not notify the factory as soon as he discovered the leakage.

The Magistrate imposed a fine of $25 and costs.

Trafalgar Day

"England Expects That Every Man This Day Will Do His Duty"--"I Have Done My Duty, Thank God For That."

(Written Expressly for The Examiner by Frank Russell)

The above are memorable words which will never be forgotten by the Britons. Neither will the occasion on which they were signalled ever fade from human memory. For they are as momentous now as on the day on which they were uttered.

These words were signalled on the flagship "Victory," on October 21st twenty-first, 1805, on the occasion of the memorable Battle of Cape Trafalgar, off the coast of Spain.

The British Victory.

over the French, off Cape Trafalgar, was the sequel of the breakdown of Napoleon's great scheme for the invasion of the British Isles. For over a generation, Napoleon's ambition, like that of a lesser luminary, who is vainly emulating him in the present day, had been the scourge of Europe. The British fleet had met with successes and reverses, when the British naval hero, Horatio Nelson—who, by the way, was born in 1758, a son of a Norfolk Anglican parson—became, on January 1st, 1801, Vice Admiral, by seniority. But differences arising between him and the authorities, he retired into private life.

War on sea and on land had been going on for many long years. But in 1803, when Napoleon's ambition had made it utterly impossible to keep up the fiction of a peace, which had been temporarily made, Nelson was at once called from retirement and there was no question but that he must be appointed to the Mediterranean command. He had before this lost one of his arms, during an engagement. Consequently, in May, 1803, he hoisted his flag as commander of the Mediterranean fleet. Between this date and the hour of his triumphant death, on Oct. 21st, 1805, he was the one great controlling spirit in the vast naval drama which found its closing scene in Trafalgar Bay.

"England Expects Every Man"

The original flag signal, as framed by Admiral Nelson, read 'confides' in place of 'expects.' But as the signal to denote the verb 'confides' would have required a long string of flags to spell out 'confide,' letter by letter, the code signal 'expects' was used in its place.

The Death of Nelson and the Battle of Trafalgar are such matters of history that everyone is conversant with them; therefore it would be a work of super-erogation to either give here a history of Nelson's life or of the great battle in which our mighty hero received his death wound.

Suffice it to say that he entered into the Navy in 1770, and finished up his career on this memorable day, 1805.

The Nelson Column

in Trafalgar Square, London, which was erected to his memory, has, for years past, been decorated with flags and flowers on this day. And as a token of their respect for so brave a man, for many years past our ancient enemies, and now our close allies—the French — represented by their compatriots in London, have largely assisted in these decorations. For the French know, as well as ourselves how to pay honour to the memory of the brave; although on this particular day the hopes and expectations of their demi-god were largely crushed, the final culmination of his downfall, was to take place ten years later at Waterloo.

The Last Hours at Trafalgar

Will never be forgotten by Britons. No figure in English history has been at once so magnificent in battle, or so penetrating in its appeal to the emotions, as was Admiral Horatio Nelson on that last day, when under his leadership the British fleet annihilated the last lingering fear that Napoleon would ever carry his desolating arms into the British Islands. Who can read, unmoved, of Nelson kneeling in prayer by his cabin table as the 'Victory' rolled slowly down on the enemy on that memorable 21st of October, appealing to God for help.

Then went up the

and the 'Victory' passed astern of the French 'Bucentaur,' and was engaged with her and the 'Redoutable'. Nelson walked up and down his quarter deck, accompanied by his flag-captain, Hardy. Suddenly a slanting musket shot from the 'Redoubtable' struck him in the breast and broke his spine.

"They Have Done for Me at Last"

Were the words he uttered when he received the fatal shot.

It was then suggested to him that Admiral Collingwood should decide on the course to be adopted, but the eager reply was

"NOT WHILE I LIVE."

But his last recorded words, as he embraced his friend, Hardy, were those embodied in the proud, yet humble, claim:

"I HAVE DONE MY DUTY; THANK GOD FOR THAT."

"To Make People Comfortable Don't Bring Them Nearer God"

The Right Reverend the Lord Bishop of Kingston, in Opening the Parochial Mission in St. John's Church Last Evening, Makes Some Pointed Remarks on the Love of Material Things.

"Travel on a railway train and you will notice that in nearly all cases conversation will revert to money. There is no harm in wishing to succeed but the danger is in endeavouring to succeed at all cost."

Thus spoke the Right Reverend, the Lord Bishop of Kingston in opening the 1914 Parochial Mission at St. John's Church last evening. His Lordship is not to make sensational appeals or to use startling methods, but to set forth clearly claims of Spiritual life so easily forgotten in this material world, to show how these may be satisfied and souls sustained; and to endeavour to build up, renew and vitalize sense of communion with God. The Mission, though short, should be an oportunity for those who have fallen away from God, or who have become careless or indifferent, to begin a new, better and happier life."

Parochial Mission.

Tuesday, Oct. 20th to Friday, Oct. 23rd, Mission Services at 8 p.m.

Wednesday, Oct. 21st to Saturday, Oct. 24th, Instructions, 4.30 p.m.

Sunday, Oct. 25th—8.30 a.m., 11 a.m., 7 p.m. Men's meeting, 3 p.m.

DEDICATION FESTIVAL

Sunday, Nov. 1st (All Saints' Day) 8 a.m. and 11 p.m.—Parochial Communion Service (in which every communicant is urged to participate).

5 p.m.—Men's Fellowship Tea.

The Mission opened last evening with a service of intercession and a short address, for which the preacher chose the following text:

"It is written man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God."

"I suppose," began the speaker, "that for most of us the greatest evil we have to face are the material things of this life. Thus it was with Jesus in the wilderness. After forty days fasting he was an-hungered. Some men had they power would take advantage of it while in the state in which Jesus was, but Christ positively refused. He refused on account of principle; he wished to bring out the point that our spiritual nature is above our material nature.

The temptation of to-day is thinking that we can live by bread alone. Travel alone on a railway train and in nearly all cases conversations will revert to money. There is no harm in wishing to succeed, but the danger is endeavouring to succeed at all cost.

Often we see in life those who are seemingly prosperous and yet we know, and they know, that something is wanting. It is the soul; it is the Christian life. There are people who say they can get along very well without religion. They may be good citizens, and do good around them, yet they have "no use' for religion. They are trying to live by bread alone and this is what Jesus warned us of when in the wilderness. To make people comfortable won't bring them nearer to God; to have enough to eat, to live in a big house, to wear fine clothes; these things do not bring people nearer God.

"Every word that proceedeth out of the mouth." This is what we need; this is what makes life complete. Let us, therefore, during the next few days endeavour to bring ourselves closer to God.

Interest In The Christian Citizenship Campaign Shows No Signs Of Falling Off

Large Crowd Again Filled St. Paul's Church to Hear Discourse on the "Meanest Man in Peterborough"

DR. GORDON'S REMARKS

"The Meanest Man in Peterborough," said Dr. Gordon in St. Paul's church last night, "is the man who sneers at his wife's religion," and he said it to a congregation that overtaxed the seating accommodation of the church. The subject of his address was the "Meanest Marr in Peterborough," and the above statement from his address was his characterization of the city's meanest man.

Mr. Edouard Hesselberg and Mr. Greenlaw again delighted all present, and no indication whatever of waning interest in the Christian citizenship campaign was shown.

In the course of his address Dr. Gordon said:

Some men are unpopular because they are hard to approach. They have an air of social superiority which chills you to the bone. Richard H. Dana, who wrote "Two Years Beofre the Mast," failed in everything, except literature. An American senator says: "He was a learned lawyer, an aristocrat by nature, a man of eminent power; but he scorned the opinions of inferior men." Unconsciously, he breathed the spirit of Horace, the Latin poet, who wrote: "I hate the vulgar crowd and keep them at a distance." Thank God the crowd has improved somewhat since the days of Horace. There is no man so poor, so ignorant, so unlettered, so eccentric that he cannot tell you something you do not know. All my experience teaches me to strike hands with Henry George, when he exclaims: "I am for men."

A tender regard for all humanity is a sign of true greatness. It is the trade-mark of a genuine Christianity. It is the master sign of an apostolic church. "To believe that a man with £60 a year," Canon Liddon once said, "is just as much worthy of respect as a man with £6,000, you must be seriously a Christian." Lord Chesterfield showed a touch of the true spirit when he wrote a clause in his will leaving to each of his servants' two years' wages. These are his words: "I consider them," said my Lord, "as unfortunate friends; my equals by nature, and my inferiors only by the difference of our fortunes." How pleasant it is to turn to the last will and testament of John Wesley and read: "Let me be borne to the grave by six poor men; let there be no hearse, no coach, no escutcheon, no pomp, no funeral eulogy — nothing but the tears of those who love me."

When the average man of ordinary common sense comes in contact with some shallow but successful specimen of humanity, who has evidently more respect for clothes than character and more regard for possessions than for personality he feels like Delphini, the underpaid but conscientious tutor who had an occasional "set to" with Richard Brindley Sheridan. Thus, when Delphini one day pressed the manager for arrears of salary, Sheridan sharply reproved him, telling him he had forgotten his station. "No, indeed, Monsieur Sheridan, I have not," retorted Delphini, "I know the difference between me perfectly well. In birth, parentage, and education, you are superior to me; but in life, character, and behaviour, I am superior to you."

The high-toned regard for clothes, colour, coin, and cash and the utter disregard for character, conscience, culture and Christian ethics is strikingly illustrated by a paragraph from a sermon by Henry Ward Beecher. "A friend that is present told me this incident which I am at liberty to repeat. During the days when colour was a virtue, in a famous church in New York, a distinguished merchant had a coloured man in his pew. The presence of that coloured man in the congregation had the same effect that a lump of salt would have in a cup of tea. The whole congregation, with an eternity to consider, thought only of the coloured man in the merchant's pew. And as they went out of the church, various persons gathered about the merchant, and said, 'What possessed you to bring that nigger into your pew?' He whispered and said to them, 'He is a great planter, and he is rich—he is a millionaire.' And then they said: 'Introduce us to him!' As soon as they knew he was not a vulgar man, working for his living, but a capitalist and a millionaire, they were very willing to cross palms with him. Then where was their fine taste? and where was that distinguished consideration of minding God's laws? and where was all that ethics that we have heard so much about in years gone by, of social equality, and of different races? It was gone in a minute. When mammon said, "Let it go," it was all right. But when the loving Jesus said, "Let it go,' that was detestable. Men will do anything for money in this bad world. Ah! self-denial is from God!"

An inherent contempt for humanity has ensnared and misled not a few of those born to wealth, position and fame.

Some men are unpopular because they never encourage. They never venture a compliment. They never say a kind word. They never speak to cheer. Joseph Parker, after preaching in a certain community for a month, said, in reverting to the fact, "I was the guest of a millionare provision merchant who never uttered a word of sympathy or appreciation regarding my services." Parker was preaching in the church of which this merchant was an official. During the month he had heard this young and gifted preacher deliver ten splendid discourses. Three times a day they had conversed at the table. But during all that time not one word of compliment, encouragement or inspiration had been uttered. A preacher must have "nerve" who can remain in cold storage for six days of the week and then catch fire on Sunday.

Robert Fulton said, in extreme bitterness of soul, "In all my long struggle to work out the principle of the steam engine, I received innumerable opposing arguments and prophecies of failure, but never once did I receive an encouraging word."

Some men are unpopular because they forget their friends in the hour of their prosperity. Said Sir Walter Scott, in that moment when the world lay at his feet: "I will never cut any man unless I discover in him the elements of meanness." The time to help a man is when you are up and he is down.

'Have you had a kindness shown?
Pass it on.
'Twas not given for you alone,
Pass it on.
Let it travel down the years,
Let it wipe another's tears,
Till in heaven the deed appears,
Pass it on.

Charles H. Hall, rector of Trinity Episcopal Church, Brooklyn, New York, during the trial of Henry Ward Beecher, recognizing the famous preacher in his Sunday afternoon congregation, took him by the hand and let him into the chancel. That was a bold act, for the world was divided, just then, in its estimate of Mr. Beecher's character. Years afterward, when the great prophet of Plymouth Church lay still and silent in death, the question arose: "Who shall stand over these hallowed remains and pay a tribute to the memory of a great soul? And the people of Brooklyn answered the question. The demand was universal: 'Let Charles H. Hall, the rector of Trinity deliver the funeral oration" And it was so.

Some men are unpopular because they never forget a supposed injury. They grow bitter thinking about things which other people have forgotten. Like Roscoe Conkling, when he whined out his miserable complaint about James G. Blaine:—"That attack," referring to some legislative onslaught, "that attack was made without any provocation by me when I was suffering more than I ever suffered before and I shall never overlook it." He never did. People get tired listening to the story of real or imaginary wrongs.

Some men are unpopular because they are self-centred and determined to have their own way. Head strong. Willful. Obstinate. History is replete with illustrations. Think of Henry VIII., sitting in the House of Commons, with his terrible eye fixed on anyone who might venture to oppose him. Or Lorenzo the Magnificent, who proudly remarks: "No one ever ventured to utter a resolute 'no' to me!" Or, again, that famous warrior and sovereign who uttered the affirmation: "I am the state!" Or, yet again, George III., who requested his prime minister to furnish him with a list of those who had, in a certain matter of legislation, voted against his wishes, that he might, socially, turn his back upon them on every public occasion. Kingly! Eh;— The saddest story in history is the story of the man who has had his own way. Some men are unpopular because they are cruel in their business methods. Their methods are expressed in three words—grip, gouge and grind. It was said concerning a millionaire who died recently: "He could throw down a friend, if that friend stood in his way." The first article of his creed seemed to be expressed in three words: "Business is War." Crassus, who lived in the days of Sulla, was one of Rome's meanest millionaires. He would stand by a burning building, with a fire brigade composed of 500 slaves, and offer a price for the fated edifice, wrapped in flames, and if the owner refused to accept the stipulated terms, stolidly refuse assistance whilst the wealth and substance of his neighbour disappeared in smoke. That is the spirit of the soulless combine. Unless you can Christianize commerce our civilization is only a little removed from the civilization of the past.

Some men are unpopular because they are mean. Sin is selfishness and the lowest sort of selfishness is meanness. And meanness is a sin which is as old as the race. Oh to rid the world of meanness! What a divine but terrific task. When Ben Johnson lay a lying in a miserable hovel, the king sent him a paltry pittance: 'Suppose," said Ben Johnson, "the king sent me this, because I live in an alley" — and then with a splendid outburst of dying wrath he exclaimed: "Tell the king for me that his soul lives in an an alley." There are men who, mentally, morally, and spiritually, "live in an alley." They are constitutionally and incurably mean.

Some men are unpopular because they are lacking in courage, backbone and audacity. The difference between the hero and the coward is the difference between Luther and Erasmus. Erasmus said: "I have always been cautious. I would rather die than cause a disturbance. . . . When we can do no good we have a right to be silent. . . . A worm like me must not dispute with our lawful rulers. . . . We must bear almost anything rather than throw the world into confusion. There are seasons when we must even conceal the truth." But this is not the philosophy of the great men of history.

Some men are unpopular because you never know where to find them on questions of vital importance to the community. How many there are who, in portrait and character, match perfectly, the description of Cardinal Richelieu as painted by Dr. John Lord in his "Beacon Lights of History." "During seventeen years of office climbing, Richelieu was to all appearances the most amiable man in France; everybody liked him, and everybody trusted him. He was full of amenities, promises, bows, smiles and natteries. He always advocated the popular side with reigning favourites; courted all the great ladies; was seen in all the fashionable salons; had no offensive opinions; was polite to everybody; was non-committal."

THE LIFE OF A WATCH

It should be cleaned and oiled once a year. Many good watches are allowed to go without cleaning and oiling, and the result is the oil is entirely dried up, the pivots become rust and rusted so badly that it costs nearly as much as a new movement to get it in proper condition again. The old saying, "Like oil to fine saws mills" holds good.

Dr. Gordon's Subject To-night "MISCHIEF MAKERS"

AT ST. PAUL'S CHURCH AT 7.45 O'CLOCK

Judas Maccabaeus At The Grand Opera House

The Peterborough Choral Society repeated "Judas Maccabaeus" at the Grand Opera House, last night, before a large audience. The Oratorio was splendidly sung, although there were lacking some of the little touches of finish that scored the success of the first presentation of this work. But, speaking generally, the Society acquitted itself with such satisfaction that it is hoped the impetus it has gained will be used to advantage in the preparation of future choruses.

The money taken in from last night's production was devoted to the City's Patriotic Fund. Not only the public's response, but other incidents of the evening indicated the appreciation of the Choral Society's efforts. J. J. Turner and Sons gave the use of the Opera House; Miss Olive Casey of Toronto, gave her services for the evening, and the Conservatory Orchestra assisted generously.

The Choral Society scarcely requires references after the comprehensive review of its previous presentation of this splendid oratorio. The main work of the Chorus was a beautiful blend, showing itself particularly in "We Never Will Bow Down," "Tune Your Harps," and "Fallen is the Foe."

Although all the parts were well taken, the sopranos and basses were especially effective. The soloists were Miss Olive Casey of Toronto, Miss Dorothy Allan, soprano, Geo. Chandler, tenor, and Geo. Kenyon, bass. Miss Casey was welcomed again and delighted the audience in her several numbers. The singing of Miss Allan last night was very pleasing. Her voice, in its tone and employment, finds oratorio work its musical metier. George Kenyon of Knox Church, acquitted himself well. In the solo "On, On, Ye Brave" he ably responded to the vocal and sentimental demands. Mr. Chandler was at his best in "Sound An Alarm." His other solos were rendered in good voice and effect.

Under the direction of Mr. Gliddon, the Conservatory Orchestra played the overture "Pomp and Circumstance." The assistance of the Orchestra was most valuable. The triumphal trumpet in "See The Conquering Hero Comes" seemed to stumble jarringly over the higher notes. The Opera House Orchestra assisted materially in the accompaniment with the Conservatory musicians. Mr. Devey's work was productive of fine results in all the oratorio's shading. It is to be hoped that the potential vocal position now held by the Choral Society will be employed in future with equally pleasing effects.

No Bye Elections Will Be Held

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 21.—It is not believed here that the bye-elections, made necessary by yesterday's Cabinet changes, will be contested. It is expected that a mutual agreement will be reached between the two parties to allow all seats now vacant, including Jacques Cartier, formerly held by the late Hon. R. R. Emmerson, to go by acclamation, in accordance with the present British precedent. It is not believed here that the reconstruction of the Cabinet contemplated by the Government is completed, and it is expected that more changes will follow.

Brownton Branch Is Organized

Protestant Benevolent Federation Branches Out in South

A large and enthusiastic audience gathered in the Orange Hall at Brownton last evening on the occasion of the opening of the Brownton branch of the Protestant Benevolent Federation. The officers of the Parent Society were present to initiate the new members of the new branch. A very interesting and successful evening was spent, and judging by the enthusiasm of the members at Brownton the success of the new branch is an assured fact. Next meeting will be held on Thursday, Nov. 12th.

Some men are unpopular because they are animal in their instincts and material in their conceptions. In the lives of such there is to be found no beauty, poetry, or music. Like Esau, they have no spiritual aspirations. To all such "a mess of potage" is vastly more than "a vision of angels." And they talk continually about money, land, merchandise and bonds. A Canadian remarks: "If I could be assured of an unfailing income of $5,000 per year till I die, and reasonably good health, I would have no need for a single other thing that would not come with these to make me perfectly happy. I have no objection to religion, but had I that income and health I cannot see that religion would be a particle of use to me."

Some men are unpopular because they are right. "Where are you going? said Caesar to a member of the Roman senate. "I am going out with Cato. I would rather be found with Cato in prison than with Caesar in the senate chamber." Ah, Cato, stern, inflexible, upright but unpopular, Cato! I once heard Dwight L. Moody say, "I would rather be in the heart of Africa with God than in the heart of America without God"—"Why didn't you accept the nomination for congress?" said an American politician to a friend. "Your political friends would have guaranteed your election if it had cost them a mint of money." The friend answered, "I would rather be found in yonder little church upon the hill top, with Jesus Christ than in the congress of the United States, through bribery and fraud, without Jesus Christ."

Over $100 For The Patriotic Fund

J. J. Turner, Sr., deposited $103.45 with the Choral Society to-day for th Patriotic Fund as the financial results of last night's production of Judas Maccabaeus. This sum, in view of the counter attractions, is considered quite satisfactory, especially with popular admission prices charged. Twenty-five cents was the general admission, with ten cents for the gallery.

SECOND MEETING FILLED MURRAY STREET CHURCH

Dr. Gordon's Question Drawer Found Much Favour With Local People—Some of the Questions

Dr. Gordon conducted two meetings last night, and both were largely attended. Two churches were filled with those anxious to hear his addresses, and after the meeting in St. Paul's Church he conducted a question bureau in the Murray Street Church.

To the question "Is the wage system a system of slavery for the working men?" Dr. Gordon answered, "No. Without a doubt the time will come when the competitive commercial system would be supplanted by a better one, but the working men today are in no sense slaves, as were th working men of Athens, three-fourths of whom were owned, body and soul."

"Why is it that, as a rule, men are not interested in the Church as women?"

Because, said the speaker, the Church services and style of preaching and standard of thought appeal very largely to the feminine mind.

"Why do men demand a different standard of morality for women than for themselves?"

"Are men given to gossip as much as women?"

No, but a masculine gossip can outdo the most successful feminine talker.

"Why is it that being a profound Christian does not enhance a man's financial standing?"

Because business men are suspicious of the man who tries to work religion into business. The real truth is that there is so little difference between a Church member and a man who is not a member of the Church that a certificate of Church membership means little in the business world.

"Are men morally weaker than women?"

Yes, womanhood stands for the moral conscience of the world. Were it not for woman's regard for the immortal and spiritual the world would go to ruin in a generation.

"Why is it easier to be bad than good?"

Because badness is yielding and being good is conquering.

"Why does God permit people to be tempted?"

Because there is no development of character without trial or temptation. The weakest person in the world is one who has never been tempted.

Cattle—The quality of the cattle on sale was no better than Monday, if as good, not a single load of choice finished butcher's cattle being offered. Prices were about the same as on Monday. Best butchers' steers, $7.75 to $8.00; good butchers' steers, $7.50 to $7.75; medium butchers' steers, $7.00 to $7.25; common butchers' steers, $6.00 to $6.50; choice butchers' heifers, $7.75 to $8.00; common butchers' heifers, $7.00 to $7.75; choice cows, $6.50 to $6.75; good cows, $6.00 to $6.25; canners, $3.50 to $4.50; bulls, $4.50 to $7.00.

Feeders and Stockers—There was a very fair demand at Monday's decline in values. Choice steers, $6.75 to $7.00; good steers, $6.25 to $6.50; medium steers, $5.75 to $6.00; good stockers, $5.25 to $5.75; common eastern stockers, $4.00 to $5.00; stockers, $4.00 to $5.75.

Milkers and Springers — Demand was strong at $65 to $115 each, bulk sold at $75 to $90 each.

Calves — Light deliveries caused values to be firm. Choice veals, $10.00 to $11.00; common to good $8.00 to $9.00.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts were moderately large which caused prices to rule about steady, both for sheep and lambs. Sheep, $5.00 to $6.00; culls and rams, $2.50 to $4.75; lambs, $7.00 to $7.85; culls, $6.00 to $6.50.

Hogs—The market was again weaker. Selected, fed and watered, $7.85 to $8.10 f.o.b cars, and $7.40 weighed off cars.

I take this means of thanking all those who contributed to my election, either by vote or influence, as Alderman for Ward Five.

HARDY PUTS IT UP TO EDMUNDS

The letter from Jack Forbes in last night's Examiner in regard to Artie Edmunds, soon brought results from Alf. Hardy. The English lad has replied as follows, and he puts the issue squarely up to Edmunds when he gives him three different chances:

Sporting Editor Examiner:

Seeing Edmunds' challenge in the Examiner I find it hard to make out what kind of a match Edmunds would like, but he can have any of the following matches for any part of $50 a side:

1. I will throw Edmunds four times in one hour, a fall for him not to count.

2. I will throw him once in an hour, and if he should get a fall he wins, or

3. I will wrestle the best of three falls to finish our Toronto match.

ALF. HARDY.

EVERS ON TWO WORLD'S CHAMPIONSHIP TEAMS

Johnny Evers, Captain and second baseman of the Boston Braves, and Pat Dougherty, the old Boston and Chicago outfielder, are the only baseball players who have played with two different world's champion teams Dougherty played with the Boston Americans when they won the world's championship and he was with the Chicago Americans when that team won the championship two years later. Evers played with the Cubs when they won the title in 1907 and 1908 and equalled Dougherty's feat by playing with the Boston Braves in this year's series.

John Devore, the Boston substitute outfielder, took part in world's series with two different teams, but until the Braves won this year he was never a world's champion. And the year he got into the series only in the capacity of a pinch hitter.

Evers' record is the more remarkable because there was a space of six years between his two championship connections. In seven years almost any baseball player is expected to slow down, and yet seven years after playing with his first world's championship team the irrepressible Johnny is found as the mainstay of an entirely different team.

Evers' record is also unusual in that he is still able to play great base ball despite his unfortunate experiences as a manager. Few players have been able to maintain their standard of playing after once attempting the managerial end of the game. Jake Stahl who led the championship Red Sox team in 1912, was one of the few players whose disastrous experience as a manager did not have a bad effect on his playing. And at that Stahl made his "comeback" more as a manager than as a player. He was still a good player, however, when the Red Sox played the Giants, two years ago.

The names of the great players who have started to go back after falling as managers, are many. One of the best examples is that of Hal Chase, the former Yankee first baseman, who seems never to have been the same brilliant player since his brief attempt to guide the Yankees.

Evers is one of the kind of players upon whom failure seems to make no impression. If he fails once, he is ready to try again and keep on trying. It was just this spirit which he seems to have imparted to the whole Boston team, which made them an unbeatable combination, although far the inferior in mere mechanical ability of many of the teams they so easily overcome.

Despite his varied career, Evers is still a comparatively young man. He is only 30 years old and has quite a big advantage on Leach, Wagner, Matty and some of the other veterans who are still keeping up with the youngsters.

AFTER THE BATTLES

(From "Up to the Front" by Arthur Ruhl in Collier's)

At the end of the village the road climbed again from the ravine and emerged on open fields. A wall of timber, dark and impenetrable as the woods round an old chateau, rose at the farther end of these fields—the road cutting through it like a tunnel—and on the brow of the ravine, commanding the road and the little plain, was a line of trenches. Here evidently they had fought.

We walked on down the road. Below the northern horizon, where they were fighting now along the line of the Aisne, rolled the sullen thunder of artillery, as it had been rolling since daylight. And the autumn wind cold with the week of equinoctial rain, puffing out of thickets and across ravines, brought, every now and then, the horrible odour of death.

Ahead, to the right, one caught the glint of a French infantry's red trousers. A man was lying there, face downward, on the field. Then across the open space appeared another—and another—they were scattered all over that field, bright as the red poppies which were growing in the stubble, and as still.

They were in various positions. One lay on his back, with one knee raised like a man day-dreaming and looking up at the sky. Another was stretched stiff with both hands clenched over his chest. One lay in the ditch close beside us, his head jammed into the muddy bank just as he had dived there in falling; another gripped a cup in one hand and a spoon in the other, as if, perhaps, he might have tried to feed himself in the long hours after the battle rolled on and left them there. All these were French, but just at the edge of the thick timber was a heap—one could scarcely say of Germans, so utterly did the grey sodden faces and sodden grey uniforms merge into anonymity. A squad of French soldiers appeared at a turn in the road. Two officers rode beside them, and they were just moving off across the fields carrying shovels instead of rifles. Looking after them, beyond the belt of timber, one could see other parties like theirs on the distant slopes to the left, and here and there smoke. Two more French soldiers appeared pushing a wheelbarrow filled with cast-off arms. With the boyish good nature which never seems to desert these little men in red and blue they stopped and offered us a few clips of German cartridges. They were burying their own men, they said, burning the Germans The dead had been lying here for nearly a fortnight now, while the battle line rolled northward, clear across France.

"Reprisals"

Whether the Mayor of the old town of Senlis, a few miles west of Crepy, was in any way tactless, is scarcely of importance now, in so far as it concerns him, for he and the other hostages were shot by the German commander, and however little good it may have done anybody, he at least gave France his life. It is said that his order to the townspeople to turn in their arms was not completely obeyed. It was also said—and this several people of Senlis told us—that a few Senegalese, lagging behind as the French left, fired on the Germans as they approached; that it was possible that one or two excited civilians had joined in.

When such things happen they are the subject of reprisal, according to the custom of war, and granting that civilians did fire after hostages had been given, there remains only the question of how severe the reprisal should be. It was the German commander's idea that Senlis, like Louvain, should be taught a lesson, and this consisted of shooting the Mayor and the hostages, and sacking and burning the main street—a half mile, perhaps, from end to end. The idea was carried out with characteristic thoroughness, and for hours men ran along from house to house feeding the flames with petroleum, and even burning a handsome new country house which stood apart at one end.

It is said that soldiers fired into the burning houses and into other houses and that several citizens were killed in this way. A nice-looking elderly gentleman whom we met in front of the ruined Hotel du Nord, said that the Germans came there and, finding champagne in the cellar after the maitre d'hotel had told them there wasn't any, set fire to the hotel and, as I recall it, shot him. How true such stories are I cannot say, but there was no doubt that Senlis had been punished. At least half of the quaint old city on the banks of the wistful Neuette—it is a much larger place than Crepy, with a cathedral of some consequence—was smashed as utterly as it might have been by a cyclone or an earthquake. The systematic manner in which punishment was administered was suggested by the fact that, in the long street running parallel to the one picked for destruction, nearly every door still carried its chalked order to "Schonen." One house spared was that of a town fireman. "I've got five little children," he told the German soldiers. "They're one, two, three, four, five years old, and I'm expecting another." And they went on.

The Three Zones of War.

In Paris, recovered now from the dismay of three weeks before, keen French imaginations were daily turning the war into terms of heroism and sacrifice and military glory. Even editors and playwriters fighting at the front were able to send back impressions no wand then, and these, stripped by the censorship of names, dates and everything that could attach them to any place within the zone of actual operation, became almost as impersonal and detached as pages torn from fiction. Sitting comfortably at some cafe table, reading the papers with one's morning coffee, one saw the dawn coming up over the sodden trenches along the Oise and Aisne, heard the French "seventy-fives" and the heavy German siege guns resume their roar; saw again, for the hundredth time, some hitherto unheard-of little man flinging away his life in one brief burst of glory. And these thrills, repeated over and over again, without sight or sound of the concrete facts, in that strange, still city whose usual day-by-day life had all but stopped, produced at last a curious sense of unreality. Meaux and Chateau-Thierry became as far away as Waterloo and one read words that had been spoken yesterday exactly as one reads that the old guard dies but never surrenders.

A man could leave a table in the Cafe de la Paix in an atmosphere like this and in two hours be under fire at Soissons or Fismes, where killing was as matter of fact and continuous as driving tacks, and men had no more time to think of how war looks or what war means than a groggy guard has time to watch the clouds in the last five minutes of a tie game. And in between these two zones—the zone where war was at once a highly organized business and a splendid terrible game, and that in which its disjointed horrible surfaces were being turned into abstractions, into ideas, poetry, rhetoric — was this middle ground through which we were now tramping, where one saw only its silence and ruin and desolation.

A First-class Fighting Man.

Across the table, a big French dragoon, just in from the firing line, his horse-tail helmet on the chair beside him, was also dining. This man was as different from the rather rueful little infantrymen we had often seen as the air of that town was different from deserted Paris. Just as he was, he might have stepped — or ridden, rather—from some cavalry charge by Meissonier or Detaille—a slendid fellow, combining French elan and British ruggedness.

After weeks of newspaper rhetoric and windy civilian artisanship, it was like water in the desert to listen to him—straight talk from a professional fighting man, modest, level-headed, and, like most fighting men, as contrasted with those who stay at home and write about fighting, ready to give a brave enemy his due. The German retirement was not at all a rout. When an army is in flight it leaves baggage and equipment behind, guns in the mud. The Germans had left very little; they were falling back in good order, methodically, after their fashion. Their soldiers were good fighters, especially when well led. They might lack the inidivdual initiative of Frenchmen, the nervous energy with which Frenchmen would keep on fighting after mere bone and muscle had had enough, but they had plenty of courage. Their officers — the dragoon paused. Yesterday, he said, they had run into a troop of German cavalry. The German officer ordered his men to charge, and instead they wavered and started to fall back. He turned on them. "Schweinhunde!" he shouted after them, and flinging his horse about, charged alone straight at the French lances.

"Yes, we killed him," smiled the dragoon. "It was a pity. Joli garcon he was"—he ran a hand round a weather-beaten cheek as if to suggest the other's well-made face—"monocle in his eye—and he never let go of it until it fell off—a lance through his heart."

SIMPLEX SHOE POLISH Brightest and Best

GERMANS SHOULD BEWARE OF MEDIUM-SIZED BLACK MAN WITH SMILE AND SHOOT FIRST

PARIS, Oct. 10.—(By mail to New York)—I'm not allowed to give any information to the German soldiers, but if you have any friends in the German army, you'd better tip them off that if they see among the enemy a medium-sized black man with a big smile who answers to the name OOh! La! they'd better shoot first or beat it.

My friend OOh! La! in spite of his smile and his ivory teeth is one of the most terrible men I've ever known. Senegal is his home and Ooh! La! is as black as the ace of spades.

Ooh! La! came up from Senegal three weeks ago with thousands of his black brothers to help the allies against the Germans. No one paid Ooh! La! any particular attention for a long time. He fought at dozens of places, but his black brothers all fought about the same, so Ooh! La! didn't stand out anything extra. It takes a special superlative murderousness to make a fighter conspicuous in a crowd like Ooh! La!'s.

At last there came the battle with the Germans on the Ourcq near Meaux where, with ten to one against them, the men from Africa fought with bullets, knives, bayonets and fists, singing like devils, treating German bullets and shells as if they were only mosquitoes. The result was that the Germans went away from there and about 10 o'clock that evening the American ambulance corps in Paris got word that there was need for them at Meaux. The American doctors reached the deserted town about midnight and were led by an aged peasant straggler to the church. It was an inferno of pain. Three hundred and fifty black men were stretched about on the stone floors, all wounded. The building was in pitch darkness except for one candle which was bobbing about in ghostly fashion at the altar end of the aisle. The doctors found it was carried by a peasant woman who was doing her best for the wounded by washing their ghastly injuries with arnica, her household remedy for all aches and pains. The doctors sent out for their auto lamps. The groans which now filled their ears had been almost as much as even a doctor could endure, but the sight that met their eyes in the glare of the lamps was almost paralyzing.

The church was like a giant can of bait with human beings for the writhing worms. One doctor noticed a thing whose torn clothes were black and stiff with dried blood. He threw his light on it. The thing turned the whites of its great eyes, showed huge white teeth in a huge smile and said: "Will monsieur kindly give me a cigarette?"

It was Ooh! La! the doctors took him first. He had nine wounds, all bad and painful.

"Get a stretcher' ordered a doctor.

"Don't trouble," said Ooh! La! "Carry me out in your arms. Time is precious for the other men."

Two ambulance men picked him up. Outside the door, Ooh! La!' said: "Now you fellows put me down and give me a cigarette."

They were not going to obey until Ooh! La! swore in Mohammedan, showing that he meant what he said. Then they followed orders. They put a cigarette between Ooh! La!'s lips and lighted it. He drew a massive "pull" to the very bottom of his lungs, closed his eyes in blissfulness and then blew out a torrent of smoke.

"All right'" he said. Now I'm ready.

They put him in the dark ambulance where the butt-end of his cigarette glowed on his smiling black face and went down for more sufferers.

Three hours later Ooh! La! was in bed at the American hospital, sound asleep. They say a turtle has no nerves of suffering. Ooh! La! was a human turtle. The doctors had to awaken him from a deep sleep to dress his wounds. They found his left arm shattered by a bullet, among his other injuries. Ooh! La! never groaned during the probing. Half an hour after the doctors were through he was sound asleep again.

The next day his fever was 105. But all day long he smoked and smiled and demanded bread. The dainties didn't appeal to him. A big loaf of bread that he could break into biteable chunks was his ideal meal. He was a favourite of the nurses at once, until the truth came out about him. This was during the battle, he had killed 18 Germans by bullet or bayonet. Everyone of Ooh! La's! friends had kept scores and they all agreed that Ooh La!'s, with his 18 Germans led them all.

It jolted the nurse a little at first, I think. Most of them are American girls who have ideas about killing that Ooh! La! wouldn't understand. Still they also have the characteristic American worship for efficiency, so Ooh! La!'s stock is above par again.

Ooh! La! isn't his real name either. What his real name is doesn't matter. But he had to be called something and when the following incident occurred, he got the Ooh! La! name.

"Those Germans are very obliging," said Ooh! La! to his doctor one day.

"How do you mean?" asked the doctor.

"Why, when I started at one with my bayonet, he got down on his knees and raised his hands upward toward me, so that they were out of the way of my bayonet. Most men put their hands across their stomachs when they see my bayonet coming."

"And what did you do?" asked the doctor.

"Ooh! La!" said the black patient, making the motion of a man pitching hay with a fork.

The doctors say that "Ooh! La! the smiling super-killer, will be out of the hospital and back on the job again within a few weeks.

GOOD MANNERS AND GOOD MUSIC

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Good manners and good music do not always go together. The spirit and essence, and the proper function of good manners is to please. Like St. Paul's definition of charity—"it suffereth long and is kind"—will do nothing to mar the pleasure of others. Last night, after the oratorio, a lady who is passionately fond of good music, complained, with more temper than tears in her voice, of the conduct of some of her neighbours in th chairs; who kept up a continual chatter during the music, and when not chattering, crunched candies. She does not know who they were and is glad of her ignorance, for she blames them for spoiling her enjoyment, and, therefore, would not consider their desirable acquaintances. In this sense, to the disturbance of her hearing, they added dishonesty; they robbed her; prevented her getting the full worth of the money she paid expressly to hear the music. These comments do not apply except where they fit. Last night is not the only example where persons—sometimes persons pluming themselves on their high position in society—commit the offence mentioned. It is remarkable that, at concerts persons will be found not only advertising their lack of good manners and good heart, but also advertising their lack of ability to appreciate good music. People go to concerts to either listen to the music or to show themselves. If they go to listen and give others a chance to listen and hear, they are getting the worth of their admission fee, much more than others will do in the event of the other alternative obtaining.

Yours truly,
Tempo Giusto.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Oct. 21. — The Press Association says this evening that the British warships co-operating with the allied left wing in Belgium on Sunday brought down a Zeppelin, and an armoured Taube aeroplane off the Belgian coast. Whether the aircraft were completely destroyed or were prizes of war is not stated. The same source declares that the British warships and naval brigade put six German batteries out of business with a loss to the Germans of 1,500 artillerymen. SPLENDID SPECIAL MUSIC TO-NIGHT

At the Christian Citizenship Meeting

To date Dr. Gordon's Christian citizenship meetings have been very largely attended, and a great deal of interest has been shown in the sayings of the noted lecturer and the musical offerings of the two artists assisting him. To-night Dr. Gordon will speak in the St. Paul's church on "Mischief Makers in the Home, Church and Society." Tho e who have heard his addresses or even scanned the press reports of them, must know that under this caption the eloquent westerner will have something not only very interesting but very helpful to say.

The Music.

To-night Mr. Sdouard Hesselberg, the eminent Russian pianist, will give a special programme of instrumental numbers. His selections will include "Polonaise Russe" and the "C. C. Campaign March." Mr. Hesselberg's pre-eminence as a pianist has gathered many music lovers around him in whatever city he visits, and an unusual musical treat is promised for those who are present at the meeting to-night. Mr. Hesselberg has no peer at the piano who has ever played for a local audience, and his presence in the city for the space of two weeks is certainly a privilege for local music lovers.

Mr. Albert E. Greenlaw, whose singing has been very greatly appreciated will sing to-night three selections. They are "Face to Face," and two plantation melodies, "There's a Great Day Coming," and "Steal Away to Jesus." The musical numbers alone would seem to be worth while giving up an evening to hear, but beside that Dr. Gordon will have distributed to-night two thousand copies of his booklet entitled "The Day When Everything Goes Wrong." There is much quaint but worthy philosophy contained in this valuable little booklet, and to-night every one present will receive one. It is the only opportunity local people will have of securing one of these booklets.

RUSSIANS ATTACKING

German's Advance Broken and the Russians Are Energetically Pushing Line Foward

AUSTRIANS ACTIVE

PETROGRAD, Oct. 22.—The Russian official statement issued last night says:

"The German troops which had occupied the roads leading to Warsaw, in the region north of the River Pilitza, have been repulsed and are now in full retreat, leaving their wounded on the battlefield.

"The Germans have abandoned the positions they had fortified in advance.

"The Russians who had been gallantly holding for eight days the region of Kozenitz, under most unfavorable conditions and heavy artillery fire, achieved considerable success on Oct. 20, and their position on the left bank of the Vistula is now secure.

"The attempt by the Austrians to cross the River San below Przemysl have been checked, and the Russians are assuming the offensive there.

"In the region south of Przemysl are found the remains of all the Austrian corps defeated in prior fights in Galicia. Here the Russian troops are energetically checking the advance of numerous bodies of the enemy.

"There is no essential change in East Prussia. We are at present in touch with the enemy on a front covering over 400 versts (about 267 miles) from the lower Bzoura to the slopes of the Carpathian Mountains."

Young Men To Be Trained.

BORDEAUX, Oct. 22—The French Government, through the Minister of Public Instruction, has directed Baron Pierre De Coubertin, president of the French Olympic Games Committee, to organize the physical and military training of the young men of France, and especially of those youths who would come normally into the army in 1916.

These young men are now eighteen years of age, and they number between 275,000 and 300,000.

GERMAN LINE REELS FROM ALLIES' ATTACK

Every Counter Attack of Germans Along the Long Battle Line is Repulsed---Desperate Battle Around Lille

LONDON, Oct. 22.—All along the allied front from the English Channel to Switzerland the Germans were held at every point during the fighting of yesterday. In some instances they lost ground after desperate counter-attacks started by them in an effort to resume the offensive. The situation on their extreme right is rather uncertain, but it is positively known that the Belgians have maintained their position on the River Yser, and that British warships are pouring a devastating fire on the German troops within reach of their guns. The fire of the warships has also served to render futile every effort of the Kaiser's men to bring heavy guns into play. Aviators of both the fleet and army have kept the naval commanders fully informed of every such attempt, and the British gunners have more than sustained the navy's prestige for accuracy of gun fire. One German battery after another has been blown into atoms, and it now seems that their artillery operations along the channel must be confined to light field guns, which can be kept on the move.

A flotilla of German torpedo boats delivered an attack against the British men-o'-war, but were driven off by destroyers. Details of the engagement have not been received, but it is stated that all the torpedoes fired by the Germans went wild.

From Lille to the channel the fighting yesterday was steady and of a most sanguinary character. Weighty reinforcements came up from Antwerp to strengthen the German wedge directed at Nieuport, held by the Belgians. From there to Dixmude, defended by British and French forces, the German assault was of a most bitter nature. At the latter point heavy artillery was brought into action by the invaders, and the losses on both sides were great. In the end the Germans were compelled to fall back to their second line of trenches.

The German right wing is wavering all along its tortuous length from the force of blows delivered by the allies. Lille is a seething vortex, and both sides seem bent on holding the town, now occupied by the Germans. The French and British troops are gradually closing in on the position, in the face of perhaps the most stubborn resistance which they have yet encountered. Every few yards German trenches and barbed wire entanglements render attacks extremely difficult. These latter have caused the most serious trouble, the time occupied in their destruction exposing assaulting forces to a withering fire from the German trenches.

Just as the Germans have been unable to make good their advance along the channel, so have the allies failed to cut the line of communication between the Germans in France and those coming from Belgium. All efforts to hack through the Kaiser's lines have met with repulse, and the allied commanders are loathe to make the sacrifice of life which accompanies frontal attacks on a scale sufficient to accomplish this purpose. The flanking operations of Gen. Joffre have proved the most effective in dealing with the invaders, and both the French and British are proving adept in whip-saw manoeuvres, which are marked by a demonstration in force at one point, and sudden, daredevil drives a few miles away. With these tactics the centre of the German line between the two points attacked nearly always give ground, and a few more miles, even yards, are gained.

It is declared by correspondents at widely-scattered points that the stand of the allies and the steady receding movement of the Kaiser's army at many points has caused the gravest anxiety among German officers, and something akin to alarm among the German people.

Both began to fear that the Kaiser's prediction that all of his troops will be in Germany before Christmas may be fulfilled in a way he had not anticipated. Indications of this anxiety are shown in the orders countermanding a big feast which was to have been held at Ghent, where as many officers as could be spared were to celebrate the victory of German arms.

In the neighborhood of St. Mihiel, the German crown prince continues to face a steadily tightening line of the republic's troops. His front here resembles a peninsular running into territory held by his enemies, and which, to complete the simile, may be cut by a tidal wave advance at a point behind St. Mihiel.

Reports are persistent that the Germans are hurrying work on a new line of fortifications from Metz to Namur, and thence northwestward in the general direction of Antwerp. This is believed to be the next bulwark behind which the victors of a few weeks ago will attempt to stem the oncoming allies.

Rising In Portugal Suppressed.

LISBON, Portugal, Oct. 22.—(Via London.)—A revolutionary outbreak in the cities of Braganza and Mafra, under the leadership of Adriano Beca, a former colonel, has been promptly put down, according to official announcement made yesterday.

Beca has been arrested and a band of the revolutionists who went out from Mafra are being pursued by troops. Beyond the cutting of telegraph wires, and the stopping of trains, nothing seems to have been accomplished.

QUOTATIONS ALLOTED

Details of Requirements For New Contingent Are Given Out—Spreads Over Our Regiments

SECOND DIVISION

TORONTO, Oct. 22. — Orders detailing the composition of the quota from the Second Military Division for Canada's second overseas force, which have been eagerly awaited since the announcement that a second contingent would be sent to the war, arrived at military headquarters last night. Though the individual contributions are small, it will be seen that the new force has been spread without discrimination over practically all the regiments in the division.

The quota consists of two battalions consisting of sixty-nine officers and 2,130 N. C. SERVIANS SUCCESSFUL.

All Austrian Attacks Have Been Repulsed With Heavy Loss.

"On the night of Oct. 17-19 attacks by the enemy were repulsed near the Losnitza customs house and the principal positions on the Drina river to the south of that town. On the same night the enemy bombarded Banovia from the Bejania heights and also Topchidelsko, the Bardo bridge across the Save and the two Singanli Islands. None of these operations met with success.

"On Oct. 18 fighting took place along the whole front occupied by our troops in Bosnia, and all the attacks made upon them were repulsed with heavy losses to the enemy.

"On the same day the enemy directed an attack against our right wing in the direction of Montcheve and against Ernimova. Both these attempts were repulsed, as well as one against the Servians near Belgrade, on the left bank of the Save. On the remainder of the front there is nothing of importance to report."

ALDERSON TAKES HOLD.

Canadian Contingent's Commander Inspects Part of Troops.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—Gen. Alderson held an informal inspection of a large portion of the Canadian contingent yesterday, the parade including the Princess Patricia Light Infantry. Most of the brigades are still one or two battalions short.

The greater part of the artillery did the journey from Plymouth yesterday, and by to-day the contingent will be pretty fully established on the plains.

Some heavy marches have already been undertaken by the earlier arrivals.

Three days' leave passes have been fairly generously granted.

No rain has fallen since the camp has been established. The health and spirits of the entire contingent continue at the highest pitch.

Canada Proud of Tie.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22. — Canada's pride in being a part of Great Britain, a nation which "keeps sacred its covenants and maintains its plighted word," was asserted last night by Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, Chief Justice of Canada, in an address here before the American Bar Association on "The Constitution of Canada."

Recruiting Is Excellent.

OTTAWA, Oct. 22.—Reports to headquarters from the various divisional centres indicate that already the greater portion of the 16,000 infantry required for the next contingent have been recruited. The response at Toronto and other Ontario and Quebec centres has been particularly good.

"DARKNESS AND DAWN"

By Geo. Allan England

He fashioned, out of the tenacious clay of an earth-bank about half a mile down stream, two large water-jars, and baked them for some hours in a huge fire on the terrace in front of the cave.

When properly hardened he scoured them carefully with river-sand, and filled them one at a time, struggling up the hard ascent, with a stout heart—for all this toil meant safety for the girl; it was all another step on the hard pathway toward the goal.

In her sleep that night he bent above her, kissed her tenderly, and realized how impossibly dear she was to him.

The thought: "To-morrow I must leave her!" weighed heavy on him. And for a long time he could not sleep, but lay listening to the night sounds of the forest and the brawling stream. Once a deep, booming roar echoed throughout the canon, and thereto, hollow blows.

But Allan could not think their meaning. Only he knew the wild was full of perils; and in his mind he reviewed the precautions he had taken for her welfare. Bit by bit he analyzed them. He knew that he could do no more. Now Fate must solve the rest.

He slept at length, not to waken till morning with its garish eyepeeped in around the crevices of the rock doorway. Returning from his swim in the pool, he found Beatrice already making breakfast. They ate in silence, overborne with sad and bodeful thoughts.

But now the decision had been made, nothing remained save to execute it. Such a contingency as backing out of an undertaking once begun lay far outside their scheme of things.

The leave-taking was not delayed. They both realized that an early start was necessary if he were to reach the village of the Folk before sleep should assail him. Still more, they dreaded the departure less than the suspense.

Together they provisioned the Pauillac, back there on the rocky barren, and made sure everything was in order. Allan assured himself especially that he had fuel enough to last four or five hours.

"In that time," he told the girl, "I can easily reach the rim of the Abyss. You see, I needn't fly northward to the point where we emerged. That would be only an unnecessary waste of time and energy. I'm positive the chasm extends all the way up and down what was once the Mississippi Valley; and that the Great Central Sea is fed by that and other rivers. In that case, by striking almost due west, I can reach the rim. After that I can volplane easily till I sight the water."

"And then?"

"Then the power goes on again and I scout for the west shore and the village. The sustaining power of that lower-level air is simply miraculous. I realize perfectly well it's no child's play, but I can do it, Beta. I can find the place again. You see, I'm perfectly familiar with conditions down there now. The first time it was all new and strange. This time, after all those months in the Abyss, why, it will be almost like getting back home again. It'll be quite a triumph—a return, won't it? The chief getting back to his tribe, eh?"

He tried to speak lightly, but his lips refused to smile. She frankly wept.

"There, there, little girl," he soothed her. "Now, let's go back to the cave and see that you're all right and safe. Then I'll be going. Remember on the third night to kindle the big fire we've agreed on just outside your door on the terrace—the beacon-fire, you know. I'll have to reckon by the chronometer, so as to make the return by night. The risk of bringing any of the Folk into daylight is prohibitive. And the fire will be tremendously important. I can sight it a long way off. It will guide me home—to you!"

She nodded silently, for she did not trust herself to speak. Hand in hand they retured along the path they had beaten through the rank half-tropic growth.

One last inspection he gave to all things necessary for her comfort. Then, standing in the warm, bright sunlight on the ledge before the new home, he took her in his arms.

A long embrace, a parting kiss that clung; then he was gone.

Not long after the girl, still standing there upon the wind-swept terrace overlooking New Hope River, heard the rapid chatter of the engine high in air and rapidly approaching.

A swift black shadow leaped the canon and swept away across the plain. Far aloft she was skimming Pauillac, very small and black against the dazzling blue.

Impossible to tell. Her ears, confused by the roaring of the rapids, her eyes dazzled by the shimmer of the morning heavens, and dimned by burning tears, refused to serve her.

But bravely she waved her cloak on high. Bravely she strove to watch the arrow-flight of the swift bird-man till the tiny machine dwindled to a moving blur, a point, a mere speck on the far horizon, then vanished in the blue.

Choked with anguish, against which all her courage, all her philosophy could not make way, Beatrice sank down upon the rocky ledge and abandoned herself to grief.

Allan was gone at last! Gone—ever to return?

At last she was alone in the unbroken wilderness!

CHAPTER XI.
"Hail to the Master"

Eleven hours of incessant labour, care, watchfulness and fatigue, three hours of flight and eight of coasting into the terrific depths, brought Allan once more through the fogs, the dark, the heat, to sight of the vast sunken sea, five hundred miles below the surface.

Throughout the whole stupendous labour he thanked Heaven the girl was safely left behind, nor forced to share this travail and exhaustion. Myriad anxieties and fears assailed him—fears he had taken good care not to let her know or dream of.

Always existed the chance that something might go wrong about the machine and it be hurled, with him, into that black and steaming sea; the possibility of landing not among the Folk, but in some settlement of the Lanskaarn on the rumoured islands he had never seen; the menace of the Great Vortex, of which he knew nothing save the little that the patriarch had told him.

All these and many other perils sought to force themselves upon his mind. But Allan put them resolutely back and, guided by his instruments, his reason and that marvellous sixth sense of location, which his long months of battling with the wilderness had brought to birth in him, swiftly yet carefully slid in vast spirals down the purple, then the black and terrifying void that yawned interminably below.

The beam of his underslung searchlight, shifting at his will, shot its white ray in a long, fading pencil downward as he coasted. And hour after hour it found nothing whereon to rest. It, too, seemed lost for ever in the welter of upflushing, choking vapours from the pit.

"Ah! At last!"

The cry, dull in that compressed air, burst triumphantly from his lips as the light-ray, suddenly piercing a rift of cloud, sparkled dimly on a surface shiny-black as newly cleft anthracite.

Allan threw in the motor once more and quickly got the Pauillac under control. In a long downward slant he rushed, like some vast swallow skimming a pool, over the mysterious plain of steaming waters. And ever, peering eagerly ahead, he sought a twinkle of the fishermen's oil-flares wimpling across the sunken sea.

Moment by moment he consulted his instruments and the chart he had stretched before him under the gleam of the hooded bulbs.

"Inside of half an hour now," said he, "I ought to sight the first flash of the flares upon the parapet—the glow of the flaming well!"

And a singular eagerness all at once possessed him, a strange yearning to behold once more the strange, fog-shrouded, reeking City of the Lost People, almost as though it had been home, as though these white barbarians had ben his own people.

Men! To see men once more! The idea leaped up and gripped him with a powerful fascination.

So it was that when in reality the first faint twinkle of the fishing boats peeped through the mist—and beyond, a tiny necklace of gleaming points that he knew marked the walls of the town—his heart throbbed hotly and a cry of eager greeting welled from his soul.

Quickly the Pauillac swept him onward. Manoeuvring cautiously, jockeying the great machine with that consummate skill he had acquired from long practice, he soon beheld the dim outlines of the vast cliff, the long walls, the dull reflections of the fire-plume, the slanting of beach.

And with keen exultation, thrilled with his triumph and his greeting to the Folk he came to rescue, he landed with a whir upon the recking slope.

To him, even before he had been able to free his cramped body from the saddle, came swarming the people, with loud cries of welcome and rejoicing. Powerfully the automatics he and Beatrice had used in the Battle of the Walls had impressed their simple minds with almost superstitious reverence. More powerfully still his terrible fight with Kamrou, ending with the death of the great chief in the boiling vat. And now, acknowledging him their overlord and ruler, whom they had feared to lose for ever, they trooped in wild, disordered throngs to do him reverence.

In from the sea, summoned by waving flares, the fishing boats came ploughing mightily, driven by many paddles in the hands of the strange, white-haired men.

Along the beach the townsfolk thronged, and down the causeway, beneath the vast monolithic plinth of the fortified gate, jostled and pushed an ever-growing multitude.

Cries of "Kromno h'viat! Tai-Kromno!" re-echoed — "The chief has come back! The great master!" —and the confusion swelled to a mighty roar, close-pent under the heavy mists blued by the naphtha-torches.

But stern noticed, and rejoiced to see it, that none prostrated themselves. None fell to earth or grovelled in his presence. Disorderly and wild the greeting was, but it was the greeting of men, not slaves.

"Thank God, I've got a race of real men to deal with here!" thought he, surveying the pressing throng. "Hard they may be to rule, and even turbulent, but they're not servile. Rude, brave, bold—what better stock could I have hoped for in this great adventuring?"

There is no better safeguard against disease and suffering than a good cathartic medicine. In the great majority of homes Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are constantly kept at hand, because they quickly awaken the action of liver, kidneys and bowels, and cure the most common ills of life.

Mrs. Thos. Smith, Jamestown, Ont., writes:—"Dr. Chase is no stranger in our home, for we have two of his Receipt Books in the house. My father and my husband's father each had one, and I have been familiar with it ever since I can remember. It was only natural that we should use the Kidney-Liver Pills, and we found them so satisfactory in regulating the digestive system and curing the common ills of life that we always keep them on hand. Many a time these pills have saved me much suffering and prevented serious disease. We also keep the Ointment in the house all the time."

CAUGHT AFTER LONG CHASE.

Police Charge Dr. R. C. Flower With Gigantic Flotation Swindles.

TORONTO, Oct. 22.—After a chase which has extended over the whole North American and part of the South American continents for the past fifteen years, Dr. R. C. Flower, alias Oxford, alias Montgomery, was arrested last night as he was about to enter his home at 1,542 King street west. Detective Armstrong of the local police was accompanied by Supt. Fuller of the local branch of the Pinkerton Agency and Lieutenant of Police McConville of New York City. Flower was held an an indictment returned against him in the fall of 1899 in New York City. He is alleged to have swindled New Yorkers and others out of $1,000,000 by means of a mine which was not even a prospect.

Flower is now nearly seventy years of age and in a bad condition physically. His health is such that he is now compelled to use drugs to keep up his apparent vigor and nerve.

Priest Killed Station Agent.

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—Father J. J. Mullen, pastor of Holy Rosary Church, stabbed and killed Thomas W. Patterson, the station agent at Hillside, a suburb, Tuesday night, after a quarrel in which Patterson had no part. The priest then stood on the right-of-way of the Illinois Central Railroad, stopped a train, and, threatening passengers and the train crew with a knife, boarded it. He was overpowered after a struggle and locked up at Hillside.

Father Mullen has been pastor of Holy Rosary Church for 12 years, ever since his arrival here from Rome.

SHOT BY ORIENTAL

Vancouver Official Is Murdered By Sikh In Court House.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Oct. 22.—William C. Hopkinson, chief assistant to the immigration inspector here, was shot and instantly killed in the court house on Georgia street yesterday afternoon by a Hindu. The assassin was immediately arrested.

Hopkinson was standing in the main corridor of the court house when a party of Hindus passed by. Mewa Singh is believed to have done the shooting.

Mewa Singh and eighteen other Hindus were in the party which filed along the court house corridor. Mewa suddenly pulled his hands from under his overcoat, a revolver in each hand. He fired the first shot into Hopkinson's breast. Hopkinson grappled with the man, but the Hindu fired again, and this bullet penetrated Hopkinson's heart. Mewa continued to shoot into the body until five shots in all were fired. Then he turned to flee.

James McCann, the courthouse janitor, seized him. Mewa struggled and tried to shoot McCann, but several police officers disarmed him.

Immediately the shooting began there was a great scattering of the Hindus who had been standing in the hall. Eight of them fled towards the front door, but all were stopped by policemen. They were locked up in the cells of the provincial police at the court house.

Hopkinson was threatened at the time of the Komagata Maru's visit to Vancouver, but his assassination yesterday morning probably arises from a trial now pending at the assize. He was to have been a witness yesterday in the case of Bela Singh. Ram Singh, another Hindu, was acquitted on a charge of murder Tuesday. Hopkinson gave testimony favorable to Ram Singh, who was an enemy of Mewa Singh.

French War Office Statement Announces Big Battle Raging.

"On our left wing from the North Sea as far as La Bassee, on the several fronts from Nieuport to Dixmude, from Ypres to Menin, and from Warneton to La Bassee a violent battle has been fought during the whole day.

"According to the latest advices the allied forces were holding their ground everywhere.

"There is nothing to report regarding the centre or the right wing.

"Russia—The German army which had advanced on Warsaw was forced yesterday (Tuesday) to beat a precipitate retreat, the enemy abandoning the positions which he had established for defence. The Russians are in pursuit and have captured a number of prisoners."

The official communique, issued yesterday afternoon, was notably laconic:

"During the day (Tuesday) the attacks of the enemy were particularly violent at Nieuport, Dixmude and La Bassee. They were all repulsed by the allied armies with great energy.

"At all other points the situation is without any notable change."

TO PREVENT RETURN.

Britain Takes Steps Against Austrians and Germans in England.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—Austrian and German subjects of military age who, since the beginning of the war, have been allowed their liberty in England unless they rested under some suspicion, are to be interned in detention camps.

The police during the last few days have been arresting hundreds of men between the ages of 17 and 65 years, and sending them to camps in different parts of the country. More than 200 were arrested yesterday in London, 100 were arrested in Manchester and similar numbers were taken in all the large cities.

This action of the Government is necessitated, it is said, because of the facilities offered German spies to enter with Belgium refugees on the pretence of being Belgians.

Winston Churchill Thanks Japan.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—The following message of thanks has been sent to the Minister of Marine at Tokio by Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty:

"The great object is the extermination of the main German base in the Pacific. The Japanese squadrons are giving invaluable help to the protection of trade, the search of the enemy's ships and the convoy of troops to this decisive theatre of conflict."

Refugees Advised To Return.

THE HAGUE, Oct. 22.—(Via London.)—Cardinal Mercier, Archbishop of Malines, who took refuge in Holland some weeks ago, has now returned to his native city. He has advised all Catholic refugees to follow his example. The Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant declares that 20,000 Belgian refugees passed through Roosendaal on their way home during the past two days.

Germans Are Forces Says Expert.

PARIS, Oct. 22.—Col. Rousset, the military critic, declares that the German system of fortifications is excellent and furnishes a protecting curtain for heavy artillery and the insidious machine gun. "It is not chivalrous warfare," he writes, "but it is practical. Our enemy fights not after the fashion of the lion, but like the fox, and we should make use of some of these ideas."

IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys and Neutralize Irritating Acids

Kidney and Bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in voiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast; continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

WARSHIPS AID ARMY.

British Fleet Shells Germans Ashore Amid Blaze of Searchlights.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—In despatches from various newspaper correspondents to-day the reports of the fighting in Belgium and northern France graphically recount the stirring events of the past two days. One correspondent from an unnamed place on the French coast states that under the glare of searchlights the British navy joins in the battle still raging. The entire Channel is ablaze with vivid gleams from the English coast to Calais.

The London Times' correspondent in France says: "The news from the front is entirely satisfactory, and there are unconfirmed reports of successes in the interior, which, if true, point to a German retreat on a larger scale than anticipated.

"Uhlans for the moment have ceased troubling the peaceful villagers. The enemy's rush for the narrow seas has landed him in difficulties which will require all the strategy of the German General Staff to surmount. Meantime the battle of Aisne still drags on its weary course, although serious fighting has practically ceased."

In The London Chronicle Martin H. Donohoe, telegraphing from northern France, says: The Germans, advancing along the coast, made a desperate attempt to break through Dunkirk to Calais and the Straits of Dover. The fighting was exceptionally severe. The Germans returned to the attack three times, and ultimately were driven back along the whole line.

Another correspondent, after deleted details, tells of the Germans being driven back towards the coast, and of heavy British losses. The Germans fire on the white flag and Red Cross indiscriminately.

ROTTERDAM, Oct. 22. — The Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant states that on Monday a floating mine, which was washed ashore at Deyst, exploded and killed three children. Another mine came ashore at Knocke. Four drifted into Zeebrugge, where they were dealt with by Germans. If, as reported from Harwich, a Holland-American liner had run on a mine in the North Sea and been damaged, the vessel is probably the Ryndam. The Potsdam is lying at Rotterdam.

Farm and Dairy Market Report

Toronto, Monday, Oct. 19.—A war correspondent connected with a New York paper has unconsciously given out some information that may be a forecast of great things for the dairy industry of Canada. He states that in the exclusive cafes of Paris, milk and cream are not to be had. The explanation is that the dairy herds of the country have all been commandeered to feed the army. If similar conditions rule in the other European countries at war it will mean that peace will find Europe without the means of supplying itself with dairy products. They will then have to turn to America for both dairy produce and foundation stock for new herds.

The weakest point in this week's market has been cattle, which are selling fully 25c lower than they were a week ago. In other lines of live stock prices are fairly steady, with a tendency to weakness in hogs. Produce is steady and firm.

WHEAT

Small advances have been made in wheat quotations during the week, but these increases have been due altogether to unfavorable war news, indicating a prolongation of hostilities. There have been no advances in bids from the other side. No. 1 Northern is now quoted $1.23; No. 2, $1.17½; new crop, 2c less. Ontario wheat is in slow demand at $1.04 to $1.06.

COARSE GRAINS

The advance in oats is attributed to the same cause as the advance in wheat, unfavorable war news. Quotations are: Oats, C.W. No. 2, 56c. No. 3, 55c; Ontario oats, 45c to 46c; corn, 76½ to 77½c; peas, $1.15 to $1.25; rye, 83c to 84c; barley, malting, 65c to 66c; feed, 63c to 65c; buckwheat, 66c to 68c. Montreal dealers quote: Oats, C.W. No. 2, 56c to 58½c; No. 3, 55½c; local oats, 50½c to 51c; No. 3, 49c; corn, 83c; peas, $2 to $2.30; barley, malting, 72c to 74c; feed, 66c; buckwheat, 73c to 74c; rye, 80c to 85c.

HAY AND STRAW

The easier feeling mentioned last week has developed into a 50c drop in hay. No. 1 baled hay now being quoted $15 to $16; No. 2, $13.50 to $14; No. 3, $11 to $12; baled straw, $8 to $8.50. At Montreal too there have been reductions: No. 1, $19.50; No. 2, $17.50 to $18.50; No. 3, $16.

DAIRY PRODUCE

The butter market is decidedly brighter since our last report prices at Montreal have moved up 1c to 1½c a lb. and finest creamery has sold at 32½c to 33c. The statistical position is such as warrant an improvement. The Trade Bulletin of Montreal estimates that at the close of last week the total receipts for the season showed a shrinkage of 43,700 packages as compared with the corresponding period last year. When the shortage in stocks to be taken into consideration the deficit increases to 85,617 packages. Another feature is a sharp advance in prices on the English market. New Zealand shipments are reported at the coast.

Cheese, too, occupies a stronger position than a week ago, and at Montreal finest Western cheese have brought 15½c to 15¾c. The strength is due to firmer markets on the other side, with more ocean space available for shipment. The making season is about reaching an end, with supplies keeping up well, due to a fine open fall.

LIVE STOCK

At the conclusion of last week's markets the Canadian Live Stock News summarized the situation here as follows: "Choice fat cattle steady; medium and inbetweens weak and extremely hard to move; stockers and feeders steady for the qualified offerings, weak for the other grades with some chances of eastern stuff off to cents and more; lambs firm and higher for light weights, weak and lower for heavy kinds; sheep the same; calves strong for good veolers, weak and hard to clear for common grass kinds. As at Toronto cattle receipts at the leading United States market centres have been too heavy and prices have been weak for everything but tops. For western markets the first two days of the week had 128,000 head arrainst 124,000 a week ago and 116,000 a year ago."

It would seem that farmers are anxious to get rid of surplus stock before cold weather sets in, and hence are marketing freely. At the same time, consumptive demand has fallen off to such an extent that the killers hold a whip hand and have superseded in reducing quotations about 10c. Quotations are as follows: Choice heavy steers, $8.25 to $8.50; choice handy steers, $8 to $8.25; butcher steers, good, $7.75 to $8.15; com. to med., $6.75 to $7.75; heifers, $7 to $8.40; choice cows, $6.75 to $7.25; com. to good, $4 to $6.75; butcher bulls, $4 to $7.25; feeders, $6 to $7.50; stockers, $5.50 to $7.25; canners and cutters, $4.50 to $4.65.

The demand for milk cattle of a good kind has been active and some orders, notably one from Ohio, have not been filled. Choice cows are $75 to $95 and down to $40 for common stuff. Springers bring $50 to $95. Calves are in good demand at $5 to $10.50.

Mutton is steady. Spring lambs, $6 to $7.65; yearling, $7 to $7.50; buck lambs, $6.25 to $6.75; light ewes, $6.25 to $6.50; heavy sheep and bucks, $4 to $5.25; culls, $3 to $4.

Hogs continue weak, with receipts liberal. Packers quoted $7.75 to $7.90 f.o.b. and predict even lower prices for this week.

The Montreal market too is on the down grade, with good cattle lacking. A few of the best sold at $7.50 to $7.75 and good stuff brought $6.25; common stock, $4 to $5.25; canners, $3.50. In small meats calves sold at $4.50 to $8.50; lambs, $7 to $7.75; sheep, $4.75 to $5.25; hogs, $8.75 off cars.

Injured In An Auto Collision

Mr. and Mrs. Gould, of Colborne, Were Returning From a Visit at Hastings

Special to The Examiner.

HASTINGS, Oct. 20.—The remains of the late Mr. Brady, who has been for some time residing in the United States, were brought here on Friday last. The friends met the body at the G.T.R. station and had it conveyed to the R. C. Cemetery, where interment was made.

Horse buyers have been making a tour of this district picking up animals suitable to be sent to the war. Quite a number were procured.

Some farmers are engaged in digging their potatoes and a very large yield is reported. Rumours have come to our ears of one farmer who found a tuber that had reached such enormous proportions as to tip the scales at four lbs. It is said that the potato crop has not been so good for a number of years. The low price at present prevailing is, no doubt, due to this fact.

A large representation of our citizens went to Norwood on Wednesday last to attend the Exhibition, and all are agreed that Norwood Fair of 1914 was one of the best on record.

Mr Winters of Campbellford, occupied the pulpit in the Methodist church on Sunday morning and gave a concise account of the doings of the General Conference recently convened in the city of Ottawa, to which he was sent as a lay delegate.

Mrs. Fred McKee has been visiting friends in Peterborough.

Miss Ellen Beavis of Peterborough, spent the past week with friends in the vicinity of Hastings.

Mr. German of Western Canada, is the guest of his nephew, Mr. Victor German.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Wilson of Toronto, are guests of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Wilson.

The many friends here of Mr. and Mrs. Gould regret to learn of the serious accident that has befallen them, when the car in which they were riding collided with another one, causing considerable damage to the cars, as well as to the occupants, who were severely hurt, but who are grateful to escape without loss of life. Mr. and Mrs. Gould had just returned from a visit with their son in Hastings.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Best of Toronto, are visiting the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. Tyler, town.

We are sorry to learn that Mrs. G. Buchanan of Trent Bridge, is ill at her mother's home here. Her many friends wish for her a speedy recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. English have moved into their new home on Front Street, and are busy settling.

Miss Ethel Collins visited her brother, Mr. R. Collins, on Sunday.

The shooting season for partridge has opened and lovers of that delicious bird are on the lookout for some sport, as well as for a toothsome "bite."

Miss Gladys Stevenson spent Sunday with her grandmother, Mrs. J. Beavis.

Mr. John Lynch and daughter, Irene, of Asphodel, have taken up residence in Hastings. We welcome them as citizens.

The moving picture show, in the Town Hall, on Friday night, was fairly well attended. This is the beginning of a series of pictures of the war.

A patriotic concert will be given here in the near future, practice being already well under way.

WHOOPING COUGH

Mrs Charles Lovell, Agassiz B.C., writes: "Seven of our nine children had whooping cough the same winter and we attribute their cure to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. We always have it in the house, and recommend it as the king of all medicines. I was formerly completely cured of protruding piles by using Dr. Chase's Ointment."

Health and Beauty Helps

Sue L: I always recommend quinsoin to put vitality and luxuriance into anyones' hair. It will promptly remedy the dandruff and itching scalp; it costs little and you can prepare it at home. From your druggist get one ounce of quinsoin and one-half pint of alcohol. Mix and add one-half pint cold water. This makes enough tonic to last a long time. Apply to your scalp twice a week. This is fine to prevent falling of the hair and premature loss of colour.

Daisy: Don't worry about being too "plump" when there is such a simple easy way to reduce flesh without dieting or any strenuous exercise. Get four ounces of parmoids from your druggist and mix it in one and one-half pints hot water. Take a tablespoonful before meals. This is harmless and inexpensive and I think you will find a beneficial change within a week.

Leonora: There is no virtue in an egg shampoo. The slimy animal matter clings to the strands and clogs the pores of the scalp. Try this simple shampoo: Get some canthrox from your druggist and dissolve a level teaspoonful in a cup of hot water. It leaves the scalp stimulated and cleansed, and the hair beautiful, soft and fluffy.

Polly: You do not need to send abroad for the new, perfect substitute for face powder. Make it yourself at home, by dissolving four ounces spurmax in one-half pint hot water. This is the simplest, purest lotion for making the skin soft and naturally fair. It stays on closely, and gives a youthful freshness. When on it escapes part of the skin and cannot be detected as can the old-style face powder.

Caroline: Yes, if the tissues of your face are inclined to sag, beware or you will soon have wrinkles. Here is a good massage cream which tones and braces the tissues, while also beautifying the complexion: Mix an ounce of almosoin (from your druggist) in one-half pint cold water. Add two teaspoonfuls glycerine. Apply freshly. At the first application you will feel the skin contract and you will soon get back the firm contour and a velvety skin. For a good blood-purifier see answer to Maurice.

Maurice: The skin eruptions of which you speak are caused by impure blood and you must eliminate the poisons from the system before you can hope to enjoy complete health. Into one-half pint alcohol (whisky must not be used), pour one ounce hardeon, then add one-half cupful sugar and hot water to make quart. Take one tablespoonful of this old-fashioned blood cleanser and tonic before each meal. This is splendid for that weak, worn feeling and restores the vital organs to a healthy condition, and its timely use will save much serious sickness.

Faschon: Certainly eyes are harmed by belladona, but this home-made tonic will clear and make them brilliant while it is strengthening and resting. Anyone can prepare it by dissolving an ounce of eyetone (obtainable at any druggist's) in one-half pint of clear water. Use eye cup or put a few drops in each eye at least once a day. Its brightening effect is immediate.

'The Women Are Splendid!' Is the Cry from Bordeaux

Both French and British Join in "Scrubbing Floors and Men" in Hospitals of Temporary Capital, Where 25,000 Wounded Have Been Taken.

By CHARLES T. KING.

BORDEAUX, October 17.

This is about women. There was a famous official phrase in the days of the South African War:—"The men are splendid!" Thus they were "mentioned in despatches". Travelling about for the Daily Express in Belgium and down here in the lush valley of the Garonne I have seen what leads me to exclaim, "The women are splendid!"

Not theirs the wild intoxication of the charge, the thrilling joy of riding full dash at rows of the enemy, of "sabring the gunners there" or of swinging pennoned lance to still the Kaiser's fine Uhlans and stem the tide of oppression and win glory or death in a race nerve braced with joy.

Tender, gently nurtured women, French and English, down here in the valley of the Garonne are soothing the anguish of the twenty-five thousand wounded French and German soldiers, privates and officers, who have been brought to the region of the new capital of France.

Scrub Floors and Men.

There is a notable British colony here in Bordeaux. It was founded a century or two ago. Some of its members have been long in the wine industry in this mellow valley, where the red juice ripens into clarets of price and where a place called Cognac gives spirit to the world. Some of the women are rich, of culture and leisure. Now that wounded are being gathered, a harvest of pain from the terrific battlefields of the Marne and the Aisne and from districts hard by, where these cultured women have set themselves to work scrubbing floors and scrubbing men.

"Ardennes waves above them her green leaves, Dewy with Nature's teardrops, as they pass,"

When you have been fighting like fury, driving or being driven, day after day, you have had no time for baths and rose water. Some of the soldiers—Kaiser's men and freedom's men—have been brought here covered with blood, sweat, dust and dirt. I have been watching them to-day coming in on the floors of trains on beds of soft hay, friend and foe. Tender women, seeing that the great thing needed was scrubbing, scrubbed.

The Daily Express nurses have learned in the practical London nursing classes that the nurse's duty does not begin and end with the holding of a man's hand, the cooing of soft words into his languid ear, the holding of a cool cup to his parched, grateful lips. It includes this—and more. So women of the British colony in the French capital, and women of France, are scrubbing floors and men.

Women Are Ready and Calm.

Bordeaux, truly French, has glorified women for generations in her big public squares, streets and gardens, in bronze and stone. In the lavish, exultant statuary woman is clothed only in beauty. In the countless hospitals where she is tending the wounded and nurturing men back to strength and the battlefield, she is clothed sweetly in white, with the small red cross on breast or arm. There is nothing voluble, excitable, mercurial about her. She is ready and calm.

The French women hereabouts are thinking of copying the British example of not wearing the "customary black" of mourning for their husbands, brothers, cousins, killed in the war. Some are in favor of a tiny pendant of white, small, modest, to be worn at the throat—simple symbol that their men have died for freedom and for France.

At one of the little tables of a typical French restaurant sits a cultured woman. Fortune has been good to her in grace and wealth. Quietly she takes her dinner. Then she steals away. It is seven or eight in the evening. She is off to work. She has had a sleep in the day. Now she is going to her voluntary night duty, to tend the wounded in the dark hours.

Arouses Chaplain's Humor.

There is substantial hope in her work.

"Excuse my English, parson, but these damn Germans can't shoot for nuts," was the remark of one of the very few British wounded here to the Rev. William Holding, the devoted English chaplain who is slaving in Bordeaux.

"Humph! they seem to have managed to hit you," answered the clergyman with a smile.

"Yes, but it was only a bit of shrapnel—not much marksmanship about it."

What the nurses and doctors find is that most of the wounds are in the arms and legs, and of the twenty-five thousand wounded here scarcely any have died.

When some of the men working the tramcars in this fine city, where you go miles for a penny, were called up for the war, women stepped on the footboard and filled their places.

Act as Tram Conductors.

Here they are, acting as tram conductors, giving the tickets and taking the money, and expediting the getting in and out at the crowded times with gentle pressure of the hand, as calm and serious about it as though they had been at it all their lives. Thus the women are helping to keep "business as usual" and earning money toward the maintaining of the children of the men in red and blue and khaki ordered north.

So, by the side of the incoming train-load of men stretched on the floors of railway wagons or away in the scores of hospitals, among the rows of wounded getting better by their help, or amid the smiles and garlands that make it easier for the men to leave their homes and dear ones for the stricken field, or in the jostle of the tramcar crowds, keeping things going with a brave heart, "the women are splendid."

ENGLAND IS FORCED TO RELY ON OWN PRODUCTS

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, October 17.

Uniforms are needed for a million men. These uniforms are being turned out now at the rate of more than 20,000 a day. Shoes are needed, and heavy, well constructed shoes at that. The government is about to place an order for 1,000,000 pairs.

All the resources of the empire are being taxed to get for the soldiers warm underclothing and other heavy garments, because the fighting is going to continue all winter long, possibly in the upland country of France, Germany, Austria and Russia. These men have also all got to be armed. They must not only have rifles, but horses, artillery, automobile transports, motorcycle machine guns, aeroplanes, and the thousand and one things that go to make up a complete army must be provided for each brigade before it is ready to go to the front.

England has never before made a complete automobile engine. Most of the parts have heretofore come from Germany. But England has got to make them now. Essex and is one great armory and drill grounds.

Lord Kitchener, with Bit in His Teeth, Dominates Great Britain, and King George Is Using Influence to Prevent Interference by Cabinet in 'K. of K.'s" Work—The Newspapers of England Publish Nothing But War News.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, October 17.

How difficult it is to write of the war without dealing in superlatives! The greatest war the world has ever known! The vastest armies ever assembled! The most terrible battles ever fought! The most shocking atrocities ever committed on a battlefield! The most splendid valor known since the days of Thermopylae!

It is common to record operations along a battle front extending a hundred miles. It astonishes no one to read of an Austrian army of 600,000 opposing a Russian army of 900,000. One declaration of war on July 28 by Austria against Servia has set the sowing of dragon's teeth until to-day the sun never sets on the sound of guns. This is literally true. The British boast for years has been that the sun never sets on the British emblem. So, too, the sun never sets on British strife.

They have been at it in South Africa, in East Africa, in West Africa, on the land. They have been at it in Zanzibar, the Bay of Bengal, in New Guinea, and in countless places in the Pacific. Way over in Tsingtao Briton's allies, the Japanese, are closing in on the German colonies, and on the fighting line in France are the regular troops from India, supplemented by the native troops, a gallant, swarthy array, 70,000 in all.

Battles are raging along the Adriatic and in the Western Balkans, where the Servians and Montenegrins are forcing the fighting on Austria, doing their best to tear to pieces what Mr. Lloyd George the other day described as a "ramshackle empire." In Galicia a great Russian army is preparing to give what the Russian General Staff declares will be the finishing stroke to Austrian military strength. Further north along the easternmost shores of the Baltic another great Russian army is at work in sufficient force to occupy the attention of eight or ten German army corps. Nearer home little Belgium, devastated but not prostrate, is the scene of a dozen battles a day. Nearer home still the great English fleet waits night and day in the North Sea eager to give battle and test the Kaiser's naval strength.

London Lives in War Atmosphere.

The most extravagant imagination never depicted such a world wide war. Just as one turns sick from the horrors of the battlefield one is prone to turn dismayed from consideration of the problem of bringing about peace and settling the bill.

The greatest of wars has made the gayest and proudest of capitals the saddest and dullest of cities. Berlin has felt the shock hardest and Paris next. Here in London, it has been felt hard enough. Trains bearing the wounded arrive daily. The hospitals of England, Scotland and Ireland are crowded with the maimed in battle. Memorial services are held almost daily for some gallant officer who went smiling to the front only a few weeks ago. London is living in an atmosphere of war. You take up a London newspaper. It is war from the first page to the last. The very advertisements reflect the all pervading, all consuming subject.

I am reading the personal column of the Times. The first notice is:—

"Pictorial history of the war. Part five. Price 7 pence. How can sale."

Though nature study at this time is here reflected. I will quote a few of the notices:—

"Brussels.—Will any one returning to Brussels deliver a message from a Belgian girl to mother?"

"Any information regarding Captain Rose E. Sidebottom, Second Lancers, Dunliers, reported wounded, would be most gratefully received by his brother, R. P. Sidebottom."

"Belgian refugee escaped from German captivity, ruined, is open to give stirring lectures on war. French or English."

"Seaforth Highlanders.—Major General R. H. Murray, Colonel Seaforth Highlanders, invites all friends of the regiment to contribute gifts for the two battalions now on service with the expeditionary force. Shirts, socks, Balaclava caps, mittens, cardigans, tobacco, cigarettes or money will be gratefully received by the secretary."

"Forty-ninth Battery Royal Field Artillery.—Will any one who is able to give any information about Major J. F. Maidlow (wounded before September 14) kindly communicate with Mrs. J. F. Maidlow?"

"H. M. S., London.—Mrs. Armstrong, No. 57 Redington road, N. W., would be glad of woollen cuffs, gloves, Balaclava helmets, magazines (new and old), for ship's company."

"Enlist in the Sportsman's Battalion. A special battalion for active service, sanctioned by Lord Kitchener, is now being recruited from sportsmen up to forty-five years of age. Only those used to shooting, hunting and outdoor sport, who are thoroughly sound and fit, need apply."

There is a story of absorbing interest in each of these small paid notices. An irate Englishman paid six shillings to have this inserted:—

"To the conscienceless despoilers of Rheims and Louvain—'Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord.'—Romans, xii., 19."

This is from the "personal" column of the Times of September 22:—

"Gentleman unable to go to the front himself has a service revolver which he will give to any officer who will promise to send him in exchange a German helmet."

And this is from the same column, September 24:—

"Proprietor of service revolver who advertised it in this column on Tuesday in exchange for a German helmet regrets that overwhelming number of offers renders it impossible for him to reply individually."

"German helmet kindly promised in exchange for revolver offered in this column last Tuesday.—X., officers' mess, Sixth London Brigade, R. F. A., Hemel, Hempstead."

I now turn to the Morning Post.

"Where is Major W. R. Chichester, Third Worcestershire regiment, reported by War Office seriously wounded? Can any officer or soldier give information to Miss Chichester, Calverleigh Court, Tiverton, N. Devon?"

"Lady Esher will be glad to hear by letter from any relations of the London County Territorials who, owing to change of circumstances, may be in any difficulty. All letters will be read by Lady Esher personally."

"Lady Wolseley will be very glad to receive any golf sticks, crutches, invalid chairs, easy chairs or air cushions for the convalescent wounded discharged from the hospitals."

"Mrs. Robinson Embury would be glad to receive scarves, handkerchiefs, pipes (new), tobacco, chocolate, or money to buy same, for Royal Engineers."

"For Sale, in aid of Belgian Relief Fund, Brussels Griffon dog puppy (black); price £5. Also younger puppies. Apply by letter Mrs. Charteris, Grosvenor Hotel, London."

New York Crowds Out War News.

Here is a copy of the Evening Star. In its four pages it has but one item that does not deal with war. This is a Reuter despatch from New York which says that Miss Nell Kenny, an Australian swimmer, swam from the Battery to Sandy Hook in nine hours and twenty-five minutes and "she is the first lady to accomplish the feat." I very much doubt if Miss Nell Kenny would have had her name in the newspaper were she not an Australian.

The Pall Mall Gazette has on one of its back pages a heading "General News," but I have yet to discover a paragraph under that heading that does not in some way relate to the war. Staring at you from the centre of the main news page of any London daily you will find a notice something like this:—

> "The —— will be glad to receive and acknowledge gifts of blankets for the army and to forward them to the proper quarter."

There are tobacco funds, blanket funds, the Red Cross fund, the Belgian Relief fund, the Nurses' fund, the cologne fund, and, of course, towering above all, the Prince of Wales fund, which now reaches the enormous total of nearly fifteen million dollars.

In the columns of display advertisements you read about Bacon's war maps, the Waverley history of the great war, Jelks' in War Time (Jelks being a dealer in high grade second hand furniture), while all the shoe dealers, tailors and haberdashers offer special rates to soldiers going to the front.

The theatres have the war spirit and patriotic, catchy songs are given in all the music halls. The motion picture theatres have no attraction for the masses unless they can produce some drama on the film that will satisfy the patriotic ardor. In short, all England, like the rest of Europe, is literally given up to war. War is their business, war is their life. We think war, we see war, we smell war, we taste war, we dream war, we LIVE war.

King George Puts on Khaki.

Even the King to-day appeared in khaki. In a field uniform he proceeded in a special train to his daily review of the troops who are getting ready to move toward France. The King has been behaving with great dignity. Many have criticised George V. for not amounting to much. The King has really shown considerable greatness. He has realized that the right man has been found for the War Office in Lord Kitchener and he is using his influence to prevent any Cabinet interfering with Lord Kitchener's arrangements.

Kitchener takes the bit in his teeth. He is actually making over war as it has been known in England and on the Continent for a hundred years. He sped a little army of 120,000 on its way to France and so infused it with his spirit that it has constantly kept a German force of 350,000 at bay every time the German force of 250,000 has been opposed to it, and that has been nearly every hour of the twenty-four for many days.

Kitchener in his calm self-assertion is magnificent. A great and daring thing is necessary to be done in connection with the War Department or in connection with our co-operation with France. Perhaps a great personage is to be taught his place or a great and friendly nation is to be told the plain, blunt truth. Kitchener walks into the Cabinet meeting and says:—"Gentlemen, I have written and sent this letter." The Cabinet gasps, but the room does not suddenly become darkened nor does the ceiling fall. Everybody realises that something exceedingly extreme and audacious has been done. It is too late for protest, it is too late for opposition, it is too late even for comment. It is done, and that ends it.

How Declaration of War Affected Koenigsberg

American Woman in Northern Germany at Outbreak of Hostilities Describes Quiet Abandonment of Commercial Pursuits at Call to Arms.

(Special Dispatch.)

BERLIN, October 17.

Mrs. Putnam Griswold has returned to Berlin from Königsberg, she and her daughter, Mrs. Samuel Powers, being among the last women to leave this historic old stronghold when by order of the Governor the city has cleared for military action.

Mrs. Griswold, who was persuaded to give your reporter an account of her experience, says that notwithstanding the danger there would have been in remaining she left Königsberg with the greatest reluctance.

"Nothing will ever eradicate the impression of the thrilling historic moments in which I was permitted to participate," she said. "At sunset on August 1, while the sky was aglow with the almost supernatural light of the northern Aurora Borealis, the pealing of all the church bells in the city broke on the expectant silence and announced that the decisive moment had arrived! Germany had declared war with Russia! Although the population for days had been longing for this news, there was no impetuous outbreak, but rather a solemn silence fell over the crowds far more eloquent than articulate speech.

"As the bells pealed forth their message every able-bodied man in the city quietly laid down the symbols of everyday occupation and repaired to the appointed temporary rendezvous. No uncertainty, no hesitation, only a blind faith in the arbiters of a nation's destiny—in God and the Vaterland! The uncanny atmospheric effect, the iron clanging of the bells, the stern set faces of the men, all combined to create a never to be forgotten picture!

Women Took Men's Places.

"By the next day Germany's remarkable system of mobilization was working to the smallest detail, and no foreigner can escape from a feeling of awed admiration at the stupendous organism, the manifold parts of which dovetail into each other with the precision and regularity of clockwork.

"Königsberg was bereft of its male population, but the women offered themselves heroically for the meanest task. I saw wives and daughters of officers engaged in sweeping the streets, and bands of these tireless workers met every train which throughout the nights that followed rolled into Königsberg, bringing fresh detachments of troops to hurl against the eastern frontier. Searchlights swept the horizon for signs of an approaching foe, and at midnight a strange whirring and booming told us that a Zeppelin was starting out on a nocturnal scouting expedition."

"At the first call to arms twenty-four men walked into my office to bid me good-by. It was a supremely touching moment," he said. "The next day I received notice that a shed outside the walls in which we kept our reserve supply was needed for quartering the soldiers, and must be ready for occupancy within twelve hours. With the assistance of only one office boy I repaired to the place, and luckily found sufficient petrol in one of our traction engines to draw the train of motor ploughs and other machines out into the open yards."

Postal System at Work.

As an instance of the striking manner in which Germany controlled the situation Mr. Powers further said that previous to the declaration of war his house had filled a large number of orders for repair parts of their machines. Without exception notices were received from the postal authorities as to the whereabouts of these various consignments and smaller packages sent by parcel post were invariably returned.

Königsberg is the second capital of Prussia, the "Coronation City," as it is called, as it was in the court chapel that the first King of Prussia, Frederick I., was crowned. It is the seat of the provincial government and headquarters of the First Corps d'Arme. It is situated on the River Pregel and is the export port for the corn growing districts of the interior. Königsberg is an important fortress with a girdle of twelve outlying forts. This province of Prussia is the cradle of the "Landwehr," and the city itself was once the fortress of the Knights of the Teutonic Order.

Weds Soldier in Hospital.

One of the many pathetic stories with which the month's war calendar has already been punctuated has as its heroine a young Berlin girl whose sweetheart belonged to one of the first regiments called to the colors. At the close of a fortnight she received news that he was lying in a Berlin hospital "slightly wounded." She was permitted to see him and found the "slight wound" to be a lost arm. The following day she received a letter in which the wounded soldier confessed that he had not had the courage to tell her the entire truth, which was that one of his legs had also been shot off. After seeing her in all her vitality and youth he could not ask her to sacrifice herself to such a physical wreck as himself and was therefore writing to release her from her vows. The young woman's answer was to appear the next morning at the hospital with a registrar, and so effectively did she plead her cause that the civil ceremony was performed without further delay.

General to Sell Decorations.

General von Moltke has placed his entire collection of Russian, French and English orders at the disposal of the Red Cross Society. As many of these orders are set with precious stones, the sale of them will realize a considerable sum for the relief fund. Other prominent Germans are following General von Moltke's example. On the day that Japan delivered her ultimatum to Germany several decorations conferred by the Japanese Emperor upon German men of science were returned to the Japanese Ambassador in Berlin.

By a curious coincidence the two English diplomatists upon whom devolved the duty of delivering to the German and Austrian Foreign Offices Great Britain's declaration of war against these countries were both men of German ancestry. Sir Edward Goschen, late British Ambassador to Germany, is a great-grandson of a well known Leipzig publisher. Later members of the family emigrated to Kingland and engaged in the banking business and also entered the diplomatic service.

The grandfather of Mr Maurice de Bunsen, who represented his country at the Austrian court at the outbreak of the war, was also a German, an intimate friend of King Frederick William IV. and served as Prussian Minister in London. Through his wife, who was an English woman, one of his sons became English citizens, and it is now an offspring of the second generation whose official duties compelled him to deliver to Austria his country's declaration of war. German genealogists also call attention to the fact that King Albert of Belgium is the son of a Hohenzollern princess, the Countess Hatzfeldt, a granddaughter of a Prussian princess and a great-grandson of a Prussian princess royal, while the Countess is a born German.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A SLEEK, SLICK MAN

By M. QUAD

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

On the passenger list of the Ocean Queen as she sailed from Melbourne for London on the 16th of August, 1851, was the name of James Melvill, an Englishman, and if there ever was a sleeker, slicker man got into port I have not read of him.

No one seemed to know Jimmy, as he asked us to call him, beyond knowing that he lived up the country on a big horse farm and was worth half a million dollars.

When we came to shake ourselves down aboard I noticed that there was a lot of rather tough looking men among the steerage passengers. It was explained that they were going to the Cape to work on a new railroad. As near as I could size them up they were all colonials and men more used to horses than picks and shovels. I think the sleek Jimmy must have caught me watching the steerage passengers, for he took occasion one day to observe:

"There seems to be a fine lot of men going out to the Cape with us."

"As far as bone and muscle go," I replied.

Then he extended his cigar case, proposed a game of euchre and the subject was dropped. I don't claim that I was suspicious of Jimmy or that I was disturbed by the gang in the steerage. On the contrary, I was perfectly easy in my mind in all respects. I had in the Australian papers read that the Ocean Queen was carrying home more than a million dollars in gold. In fact, I had seen most of the boxes brought and taken down to the strong room. All other passengers must have been aware of the treasure, but there was little or no talk about it.

It is a wide expanse of ocean between the Cape and Australia, and at the end of a week we had all settled down into grooves and fallen into a monotonous routine. Early one morning a sail was sighted dead ahead, and almost as soon as she had been made out it was seen that she had a distress flag flying. We ran down to within a half mile of her before our engines were stopped. Only three men were visible on her deck, and she hadn't a boat in sight. The trio beckoned and motioned that we should send a boat, and the captain gave orders that one should be lowered.

The boat had pulled half the distance to the brig when we had something nearer home to attract attention. The sleek, slick little Jimmy suddenly held a cocked revolver to the captain's ear and marched him into his stateroom. Fourteen of the men from the steerage, each armed with a pistol and knife, suddenly appeared among us, and it wasn't three minutes before the whole crowd of us were in the cabin and a guard over us. The engine room was taken possession of at the same time, and the Ocean Queen had been taken without a shot being fired. The brig was lying broadside to us. She had two boats down on the far side, with fifteen men in each boat, and as soon as they had pulled around and captured our yawl one boat load of the rascals came aboard the Queen and the steamer was worked down alongside the brig. The sea was smooth, and the fellows could lash the craft together without fear of disaster.

We had been taken completely by surprise and had no show. They had the gold out and transferred within an hour. It is to the credit of the rascally gang to say that they were under good control and insulted no one. After the gold was disposed of they robbed the ship of a lot of bedding and provisions, and at the last the sleek, slick man came down into the cabin to say a few words.

"My dear friends," he said, "I do not wish to search you one by one, like a footpad or a bushranger, but I will trust to your honesty to hand over your money and jewels. I have figured on about the amount I should get. If I get it no one will be further disturbed. If I don't get it there will be room aboard the brig for most of the ladies."

I gave half my possessions, and I presume the other passengers retained a share as well, but the money, watches, rings, brooches, etc., laid on the table before the pirate had a good round value and seemed to satisfy him. He swept everything into a sack, bade us a fond adieu and within ten minutes was sailing away in the brig. The engines were disabled before they left and the crew of the mate's boat was sent back to us, and as no one had been killed, we were fain to think we had come off fairly well. We lay rolling in midocean for four days before the engineer had made repairs, and by that time the brig was several hundred miles away. Even had we known her course and position it would have availed nothing. We made a slow run for the remainder of the voyage, and it was three weeks before a man-of-war started out to look for the pirate craft. It had been a job put up in Australia, and it had worked to perfection. It may be that the brig divided the swag, but as she had a dozen different places to choose from, she had no fear of capture. So far as I had been able to learn she was never heard from, though the search was kept up for a year or more. There was enough plunder to set each one up handsomely, and I have always thought of Jimmy, the slick one, as touring about in the finest raiment, drinking the rarest wines and making himself a favorite wherever he stopped for a week.

GERMANY'S CASUALTY LISTS TOO LONG FOR NEWSPAPERS

Inquirers, Mostly Wives and Mothers Torn With Anxiety, Daily Seek the News They Fear to Hear at the "Casualty Office."

BERLIN, Sept. 25.—As I am writing this the twenty-seventh official casualty list has just been published in Germany. These lists, which appear every other day or so, generally contain from 300 to 500 names. In addition to these casualty lists many of the newspapers carry advertising pages completely filled with death notices, each in a heavy black border. Among the names here recorded one can find those of some of the foremost families of the ancient German nobility, of high Government officials who were serving as volunteers or reserves, of college professors, authors, scientists, newspaper men, artists, arhhitehts, engineers, actors, musical virtuosi, sportsmen and other prominent men of business or public life.

Only the other day the Socialistic press of Germany teemed with obituaries of Dr. Ludwig Frank, a Social Democratic leader of the Reichstag and one of the foremost orators of Germany. On the following day came the announcement of the death of a noted musician, the leader of the royal orchestra of Saxony, while to-day's casualty list tells of the death of Count von Wedel, bosom friend of the German Crown Prince and one of the most prominent steeplechase riders of the German turf. And so it goes, day after day.

And yet, while thousands of people are oppressed with grief for beloved relatives and friends, that are lying buried in distant, foreign graves, for none of the dead are brought back to Germany, and while black robes of mourning are becoming an all too common sight on the streets, the people as a whole give no outward signs of sorrow or dejection.

It was even proposed by several newspapers at the capital and elsewhere that the women of Germany should not give encouragement to the enemies of the fatherland by going into mourning. For the same reason, perhaps, the losses of the Germans in killed and wounded are no longer being published in the German newspapers in detail. This is because, after the middle of August, the battles in France, East Prussia and Russia became so gigantic that the number of casualties grew too large for the official recorders.

In Berlin, since the first week of September the "Casualty Office" of the Military Academy on Dorotheenstrasse has become the place to which innumerable women with pale and anxious faces have had to direct their steps for inquiries.

There, under the sign of the Red Cross, the so-called Central Inquiry Office answers all questions concerning casualties in the field. Written and verbal information is given, either from the official lists of casualties or from the reports of the military hospitals, or sometimes also from the preliminary reports of the regiment, and battalions still in the field. In any case, it always takes some time before the sad facts reach home.

Where Anxious Inquirers Seek the News.

Owing to the astonishingly rapid advance of the German allies into the heart of France, it has become a very difficult matter quickly to ascertain the losses, and still more difficult to send special notices to the homes of the fallen soldiers. Many a husband, son or lover, when leaving for the front, promised surely to send some sign of life every other day at least. In the beginning their field post-cards were received regularly. But then, perhaps, they suddenly failed to come. One or two weeks passed without a sign. The uncertainty and dreadfully painful anxiety arising therefrom are sure to drive the wife or mother to the Casualty Office. There the latest lists of casualties of the "Reichsanzeiger" are posted on a slab of polished granite. Always there is a throng crowding around it. Yet how long a time after each battle these notices are published.

With a shudder the anxious inquirers enter the high columned hall where the stern statue of Count von Moltke looks down upon them. Inside, dignified, middle-aged gentlemen are seated behind long rows of tables with a serious yet pitiful expression in their eyes. They are shrouded with tragedy. Across the table from each gentleman are vacant chairs, and against the back wall of the hall are additional rows of chairs for those waiting their turn. Whoever has happened to sit here waiting his turn for an hour or so, while studying the faces of those that come and go, will not want to witness again all this grief and pain.

In the majority of cases the anxious inquirers only learn that the name trembling on their lips has not yet appeared in the lists or that the particular regiment or battalion referred to has not yet sent any list of casualties, either because it has not yet come under fire or perhaps, as has happened to some regiments, because its members were almost entirely wiped out.

But how much worse even than this prolongation of uncertainty is it when such information as the following is forthcoming: "Missing," "seriously wounded," "dead."

The information is given in such a low, sympathetic tone of voice that even those most stricken involuntarily try to keep down their immense sorrow like a sacred relic enshrined in their innermost soul.

It is here that you can learn volumes concerning the heroism of German women, for screams or wailings are scarcely ever heard in this place. An attractive looking lady in a white dress, leading her three-year-old boy by the hand, is slowly coming downstairs with death in her heart and wide staring, dull eyes. Yet, she steadfastly answers her little boy's questions about his "daddy."

A slender lady, stately like a young Valkyrie, enters hesitatingly, a new ring marks her as "Kriegsgetraute," a girl who married just as her betrothed was leaving for the front. When she hears her terrible news, she leaps to her feet, her spiritual face raised aloft, and thus she turns to go, while her chair is swept down by the impetuous sweep of her skirt, and so she walks away proudly, serenely.

8 BOXES CURED PSORIASIS

Mrs. Nettie Massey, Cannonsq, Ont. writes: "Three doctors prescribed my trouble as psoriasis and one said I could never be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head, and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment and am entirely cured—not a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise this Ointment enough."

LANSDOWNE LODGE PURCHASES BLOCK OF CITY'S BONDS

At the regular meeting on Monday night Lansdowne Lodge, S. O. E., decided to buy $1,000 worth of short-term debentures. The meeting was an interesting one. The City's plan to sell its new debentures in Peterborough appealed to the members of th Lodge, who recognized the opportunity of assisting the City through this investment. Reference was made to the eleven members of the Lodge, who left with the first contingent, and to the probability of others joining the new contingent now in formation.

RICH AND POOR ENLISTING

Thousands Rush to Take Up Arms in Britain—Officials' Sons Stand in Line—"Nuts" Are Drudging Though Accustomed to Ease.

LONDON, Oct. 23—The rich and the poor of Great Britain alike are enlisting for the war against Germany, writes T. P. O'Connor.

That Germany will be beaten nobody in England admits the slightest doubt. Earl Kitchener, who speaks with the caution and frigidity of a soldier, and Winston Churchill, who has had some anxious moments, he avows, during the last few weeks, are equally emphatic in expressing the opinion that the final result of the war cannot be doubted by any reasonable man.

Arthur Henderson, who for the moment, fills the place that Mr. Macdonald has left vacant as the leader of the Labour party, has sent his three sons to the war. Other political leaders are doing the same thing.

David Lloyd-George, Chancellor of the Exechequor, has sent two sons to the war, so has Andrew Bonar Law, the Tory leader in the House of Commons.

Fever for Defence.

The peculiarity of this gigantic rush to the army is that it did not begin till the list of casualities began to appear in the papers. The slight pause there was when Lord Kitchener asked for his 100,000 men disappeared then and forever. As many men joined on the single day, Sept. 3rd, as usually enlist in the course of a whole year; in ten days 300,000 men joined.

If you examine the lists and if you speak to the families of the recruits you find, too, astonishing examples of how this fever for the defence of the British Empire works upon every mind.

You see the recruits passing everywhere, through the streets, in the parks, sometimes in quiet nooks that never saw a sodjer drilling before. These recruits are of an entirely different sort from those of ordinary times.

Ordinarily men join a voluntary army from love of adventure and from the hard necessities of their lives. The rural districts, with their narrow horizon and their joyless lives, naturally send their young men of spirit and adventure into the ranks.

Gives up Great Income.

The new armies which Great Britain is bringing into the field, though are taken from all classes. Clerks have left their desks by the tens of thousands. Young gentlemen of wealth try to become officers, and, when they cannot succeed in this, enlist in the ranks.

At a great non-partisan meeting in Liverpool at which Winston Churchill, F. E. Smith, and myself, spoke to 14,000 inside a great hall, there being triple that number outside camouring for admission Mr. Churchill announced that F. E. Smith was going to the front.

Now F. E. Smith, at forty years of age is earning the biggest income at the bar of any man of his years. It is put down at $75,000 a year; sometimes it is as much as $5,000 in a single day. He has a wife he married for love when he hadn't a penny; and he will certainly be a Cabinet Minister of high rank whenever his party comes into power.

Nevertheless he goes to the front.

From Ease to Drudgery.

I have heard of other instances in which men with ample fortune, inherited from industrious fathers, have found an entire change of heart. Devoted up to the war to the laborious but easy occupation of finding enjoyment in the usual way, motoring, flirting, playing polo, they have thrown all these things away, and have gone to the front or to the drudgery of the drill ground.

You may have one view or the other of this war and of Great Britain's share in it but no man who knows anything of the British Empire can doubt that there has never been a war which has made so powerful and irresistible an appeal to the imagination and to the patriotism of the British people.

AN APPEAL TO U. S. TO PROTEST AGAINST A ZEPPELIN ATTACK

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—"Unless the United States intervenes at once London and Paris will be attacked and fired by a fleet of German Zeppelins. The attack is not far off and the only power that can stay the hand of the unscrupulous German is the United States."

This statement was made last night on board the White Star Liner Olympic by F. Hopkinson-Smith, the author and painter, who returned from Glasgow after a trip of five months abroad.

As soon as the Olympic docked Mr. Smith mailed to President Wilson a set of resolutions protesting against the use of bombs dropped from aeroplants and Zeppelins upon women and children. It was signed by two hundred prominent passengers on the Olympic and with it, Mr. Smith sent the following personal letter to the President:

Request for Interference.

"I have the honour to forward to you the enclosed memorandum, which explains itself. We earnestly beg that some steps may be taken to forestall, before it is too late, the setting free of the fleet of Zeppelins and aeroplanes which are now preparing for this deadly work. We feel it is not a question of neutrality, but a question of humanity, and that any power refusing to heed your wise and humane counsel would forfeit the sympathy of the world."

The meeting, which was held on board the Olympic on Thursday night in aid of the redress, authorized the following resolutions:

The Resolutions.

"That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the President of the United States, accompanied by a personal letter, begging him in the interests of humanity to protest, as far as lay within his power against the continuance of this practice.

"First—Because it is contrary to the instincts of all-self-respecting nations.

"Second—As being sure to alienate every particle of sympathy from those endorsing such outrages, and

"Third—As not only brutal and cruel in the last degree, but without any other military advantage than the terrorizing, maiming and killing of innocent non-combatants who are helpless against such attacks."

Predicts Slaughter.

Mr. Smith said that few in this country realize what a menace threatens London. He predicted that there would be many innocent women and children killed in their beds and in the streets if the United States did not step in and warn Germany.

"London is helpless against this Zeppelin attack," he said, "and it is coming as sure as fate. The Germans are rushing their work on the air fleet, and I hope sincerely that the United States will advise them to abandon it before it is too late. I am confident that Germany would heed a warning from this Government.

"I am a disciple of neutrality. I believe firmly in the President's ideas on neutrality. It has to do with legitimate warfare, but the dropping of bombs on unfortified cities by stealth in the middle of the night when no one can defend himself, is not warfare. It is brutal treachery and in the name of humanity it should be stopped."

Threatan Fire.

He said that Germans are openly boasting that they have no desire to take Paris. They say they will set it on fire, and that they will burn London, so that Berlin the only city worth while in all the world, may be prosperous and grow.

"When I left London the city was in darkness every night. By darkness, I mean that every light is out. A wealthy friend of mine told me that he had a certain light to look out for. He had assumed the responsibility for the putting out of that street light at the proper hour each night and seeing that it was kept out. It is the same everywhere.

"London knows this Zeppelin raid is coming, but the city is calmly and stoically awaiting it.

Defiance to Civilization.

"Germany has defied the civilized world. She has gone into a fight against civilization and challenged the right of any one but Germans to live and prosper."

Mr. Smith said that Germany was not fighting fair, and that unless some power like the United States took cognizance of her tactics she would continue to fight foul.

As a Spy Puts It.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—A London cable printed in the American says: A British journalist gives an account of a chat he had with a German spy, who said, among other things:

"We know of every one who goes in or out of England; we know London is in darkness for fear of Zeppelins, that the King and Royal family have left Buckingham Palace for a small private house, afraid of bomb dropping.

"It really is very childish of the British authorities to think we shall send a lone airship to drop a few bombs in London. They would not do much harm and would produce a panic, with the result that Kitchener would perhaps get on better with his recruiting. We know perfectly the Englishmen and their quiet nature. They are still asleep, and it would be very foolish for us to wake them up."

HOW TO GET RID OF DYSPEPSIA

Don't Rely on Medicine; Don't Go on Freak Diet; Common Sense and an Antacid Usually All That Are Needed

"If you have dyspepsia, indigestion, sour stomach, belching, distress after eating, heartburn or any other stomach trouble due to hyperacidity (the usual cause of stomach troubles), you should take no medicine to act upon the stomach itself. That is positively not the way to cure the trouble. Again, you should not half starve ourself by going without the nutritious food that you need to rebuild waste tissue. Some foods are not good for people even when in perfect health—very rich, sweet, highly seasoned dishes. Avoid these, but eat fairly substantial meals of plain foods. Eat slowly. Even if you drink nothing but water, you should not drink with meals. Drink before and after eating. Do not take pepsin or other artificial digestants. If you follow the foregoing simple instructions it is probable that you will not need any medicine at all except, if you want to call it medicine, a little antacid after meals. The best antacid is ordinary bisurated magnesia, which can be purchased at any drug store. This is not to act upon the stomach but on the contents of the stomach. The antacid, as you can learn by consulting your dictionary or encyclopedia, is merely to neutralize or counteract the excess acid so the stomach can digest the food normally. Take a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia in a little cold or hot water after each meal. You should get immediate relief, even if your case is severe. Careful, moderate eating and the use of bisurated magnesia should put your stomach in normal condition in a short time; if you have not allowed dyspepsia to advance to the extreme stage of developing stomach ulcers.

FALLING HAIR MEANS DANDRUFF IS ACTIVE

Save your hair! Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine right now

Thin, brittle, colourless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which, if not smallied, causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine to-night—now—anytime—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and after the first application your hair will take on that life, lustre and luxuriance which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have the appearance of abundance; an incomparable gloss and softness but what will please you most will be after just a few weeks' use, when you will actually see a lot of fine, downy hair—new hair—growing all over the scalp.

War Reveals Waste of Food

Apprehensive over food shortage, the London press is advising the English people to save and utilize every article of food value, including the bran coating of grain.

Why? The outer coat of grain holds the precious mineral elements which means so much in vital building and up-keep of body, brain and nerves. And yet the modern miller throws out about four-fifths of these priceless food elements just to make the flour look white and pretty!

Isn't it astounding that it took war to wake people up to such a fearful waste!

Nearly twenty years ago the crying need of a food which would fill the lack caused by demineralized white flour products led to the making of

Grape-Nuts

—a wonderfully nourishing and appetizing food containing all the nutriment of wheat and barley, including the vital mineral elements, just as nature designed them for our use.

A daily ration of this crisp, wholesome, ready-to-eat food along with other food will soon prove

GERMANS ARE IN FULL RETREAT

LOSE THOUSANDS IN BATTLE WITH RUSSIANS

ALLIES IN FRANCE ARE ADVANCING

RUSSIANS TRICKED GERMANS AND ENEMY ARE IN FULL FLIGHT

Siberian Corps Were Sent to the North West and Attacked Germans on the Flank While at the Same Time the Main Body Made Frontal Attacking---German Army Corps Loses Two Thirds of its Strength

THOUSANDS OF CASUALTIES IN FLIGHT

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, October 22.—It was officially announced to-day that the Germans are in full retreat all along the battle line lying 80 miles west of Warsaw, pursued by a fresh Siberian army corps which has been been pushed westward from Warsaw.

The German 21st army corps has lost nearly two-thirds of its effective strength in its efforts to cover the retreat of the main German army. Emperor William is reported to have been personally in command of the operations against Warsaw, coming to the front when his troops had reached within seven miles of the outer Warsaw defences.

The Russians are declared to have completely outgeneraled the Germans. They retired along the German front by arangement. At the same time a strong Russian force was sent north west from Warsaw, and apparently the Germans had no knowledge of their presence. When the selected battle field was reached, the Russians made a determined stand and attacked the enemy both from the front and flank.

The Germans fought desperately but were trapped, and lost an enormous number of men in extricating themselves, and are losing thousands daily in the retirement.

KAISER IN A WIRE CAGE!

LONDON, October 21.—Frederick Rennet, the Daily News correspondent at Petrograd, telegraphs:

"Statements from several sources concur in the arrival of the Kaiser at Czenstochow. The grounds of the club where he and his suite are staying are enclosed with a high barbed wire fence and roofed with wire with a high barbed wire fence and roofed with wire Uhlans and aeroplane squadron are quartered outside.

"The most notable feature of the battle now raging all along the Russian front is the continued pouring forward of Austrian regiments southward of Przemysl to meet the unbroken succession of defeats. Yesterday an entire battalion with officers and machine guns surrendered intact.

"This hopeless procedure in a scheme evidently intended to outflank Russia's extreme left, is having a paralyzing effect on the German movements in central Poland, where the fighting continues between separate forces at three points, about 60 miles apart westward, and considerably south of Warsaw."

HONOLULU, October 22.—Standing just outside the three mile limit, her searchlights constantly illuminating the entrance to Honolulu harbour, the Japanese cruiser Hizen kept patrol all last night, while anchored in the roads the German gunboat Geier awaited the verdict of the port officials as to how long she may remain in the harbour for repairs. The Hizen has chased the Geier for hundreds of miles and her capture or internment is certain.

LONDON, October 22.—The British Foreign Office to-day sent a note to all the foreign powers formally notifying them of the government's intention to remove from the Suez Canal all German and Austrian ships which have taken refuge there, and which have not already been detained on account of hostile acts.

TO STOP THE SPIES

All Germans and Austrians in England Are Being Arrested—Women Will be Sent Home

MEASURE OF PRECAUTION

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Oct. 22.—Drastic measures are being insisted on by the authorities to end the reported effort of German espionage in England.

The home office issued a statement in which it characterized practically the entire east and south coasts of England as prohibited areas for any one regardless of sex, of Austrian or German birth.

The rounding up of all Germans and Austrians continues, and males of military age will be sent to detention camps as prisoners of war, while the women and every young and the very old men will be sent back to Germany as speedily as possible.

While no official details of the operations were made public to-day, it was stated that the situation generally is much improved.

THE STANARD OF RECRUITS

To the Editor of The Examiner."

Dear Sir,—I would like to call your attention to a rather misleading statement that appeared in The Examiner last evening, in an Ottawa despatch, under the heading "Information for Recruits," to the effect that "No change had so far been made in the physical requirements which the recruit must possess . . . "although in the Old Country the standard has already been lowered."

The statement is right in that the standard has ben lowered but it was lowered from 5 feet, 6 inches, to 5 feet, 4 inches, which is the regular minimum standard, and from which it was raised to enable the recruiting officers to cope with the first rush of recruits when the populace over there realised how serious the situation really was.

At the present time the physical requirements for height and chest measurement are the minimum of 5 feet, 4 inches high, and 33 inches, chest; and I believe the requirements are the same for the Territorials. You will note that the requirements are of a higher standard, by one inch for height, than are required in our Canadian militia.

Hoping you will publish these facts I am,

Yours, etc.,
Observer.

MORE RECRUITS FOR PETERBORO'S QUOTA TO SECOND CONTINGENT

Many Applications at Armouries Last Night But Rigid Medical Examination Turns Number Away---Seven Recruits Were Passed by the Medical Examiner

Recruiting for Peterborough's quota of infantry for the second Canadian overseas continuent was continued at the armouries last night with a big crowd of recruits on hand to face the medical inspection. After a two hours' session in which Dr. Cameron tested many applicants, seven more recruits were accepted. This comparatively small number shows the drastic nature of the medical test.

There was nothing dramatic about the scene—no martial uniforms, no bugle calls—just a group of men in civilian garb waiting patiently outside a door that opened every now and then to admit one of the line. It was hard to realize that in a few short weeks some of these men would be drilling in England and not long afterwards facing Prussian infantry and German Uhlans in the world war.

All sizes and conditions of men were there— some near the danger mark of being too old, others hardly old enough. Native born Canadians, Britishers only a short time over, men who had never handled a gun, and old soldiers who had fought in Africa and India, waited their turn to face the medical examiners. Most of them appeared nervous as to their chances of getting through. Tuesday night's developments shewed that the test was a severe one—big, robust looking men had been rejected and knowing this, last night's applicants waited anxiously.

Every eye turned to the door of the doctor's room as it opened to allow the exit of a recruit who had faced the medical battery. The first glance was generally enough— the cheerful grin of the successful man showed just how he had fared.

"How is he; pretty severe?" would come from the waiting group.

"Say, what are the letters on that sight card," a recruit who was anxious about his eyes would demand amid a general laughter.

A well built member of the waiting squad was admitted into the doctor's presence.

"He'll get through all right" was he verdict

Out in a few minutes came the big fellow shaking his head.

"Nothing doing. Eye-sight" was his laconic comment.

For various causes of this kind a larg enumber of men have been refused.

There will be a further opportunity to-night for recruits to offer themselves at the armouries at 8 o'clock.

LACK OF MONEY LIKELY TO END WAR, ADMITS AUSTRIAN GENERAL

VENICE, Monday, via Paris, Tuesday, Oct. 20.— General Auffenberg, who was removed from the command of the Third Austrian army, has explained in an interview published in the Este Uisag, of Budapest, that he caught a severe cold, which was followed by intestinal trouble, and that as a consequence his command was given to another officer. Colonel Affenberg is now at home awaiting the final decision of the Emperor in his case.

He said it was impossible to tell when the war would end. He was certain, he said, that Austria-Hungary would not yield. Possibly the exhaustion of money might hasten the outcome, he added.

According to advices reaching Venice, the Austrian Ministry of Agriculture has given orders that no calves under six months be slaughtered without the consent of the local authorities. The measure is taken on account of the shortage in the beef supply.

As a result of the steady rise in Austria-Hungary of the price of flour the Minister of Commerce has recommended the baking of so-called war bread, which is composed of a mixture of meal from wheat, rye, barley or maize, together with a preparation made from potatoes.

Wm. Wedlock Is President Of Peterboro' Fuel And Transfer Co.

The organidation meeting of the Peterborough Fuel and Transfer Company, Limited, was held last evening and this new corporation has come into active existence among the other commercial organidations in this city. The company, as was noted some time ago, acquired the assets and business of The Peterborough Fuel & Cartage Co., which went into liquidation a few months ago. It is satisfactory to note that the new company contains many of the employees of the old company, and no doubt, with their practical knowledge of the business, the new company is assured of a successful business career, and the patronage of the former customers. The company has obtained a charter from the Ontario government, which gives them very extensive powers. The following officers were elected:

President—William Wedlock, Keene, Ont.

Vice-President — Michell Leveque, City.

Managing Director—S. T. Wedlock, City.

Secretary—Archibell Barbeau, City.

Auditor—W. R. Morris, C.A., City.

Solicitors—Messrs. Bennett & Goodwill, City.

The company is capitalized at $40,000 divided into 400 shares of $100 each. The charter provides for extensive activities, including general transportation, cartage, freight and express, dealing in coal and wood and other products, warehousing, etc. The company begins operations on a sound basis and should have a successful future in Peterborough.

BRITAIN PROTESTS

Calls Attention of Neutral Powers to the Use of Mines

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22—Germany has laid mines within fifty miles of the British Coast, so the British Foreign Office notified the United States and other neutral powers to-day. The communication says: "This practice has already resulted, since the commencement of the war, in the destruction of eight, neutral and seven British merchant and fishing vessels, with a loss of some sixty lives of neutral and non-combatant persons. The communication added that Britain protests against the illegitimate means of conducting warfare which has been resorted to by her adversaries."

GERMAN LOSSES IN ATTEMPTING TO BREAK LINES ARE ENORMOUS

Allies Are Pushing Enemy Back in the North---French Three Inch Guns And Rapid-Firers do Terrible Execution in the Closely Massed Ranks of the Germans

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, October 22.—The allies are rolling back the German line.

They have pushed a wedge through the invading forces, thirteen miles north of Lille, and for the first time since the series of battles in the north commenced they have pushed their forces east of Lille. The advantage gained is slight—two miles—but it is declared at the military headquarters here that it is extremely important. The allies are now in a position to envelop the German right wing and it is confidently expected here that they will be able to do so within the next week or ten days.

Officials at General Gallieni's headquarters, who are in touch with the situation, declare that the Germans have lost the chief move in strategical manoeuvring by their failure to maintain a perpendicular line extending from Lille to the coast, near Ostend. They declare the centre of the German right flank has been pierced, and that it is only a question of a short time when the German headquarters at Lille must move eastward or be lost. Every attempt of the Germans to break through this line has been repulsed, with severe loss, and it is declared that the Germans have left 10,000 dead and wounded on the field here.

Beginning at Ypres and extending nine and a half miles south east of Menin there is a second battle line. The Germans were forced back nearly three miles along this front last night, folowing a night attack in force, which was defeated. The Germans had mounted searchlights to command the territory, and after shelling the allied position with great vigour they essayed an assault in force. The Germans advanced in their usual massed formation, singing as they came, but were literally cut to pieces by the fire of the French three-inch guns and rapid-firers, which commanded the flat and marshy ground over which they were compelled to advance.

PARIS, October 22.—That the allies are maintaining their advance in the fighting in the north of France, was the claim made in the official communique issued at Bordeaux this afternoon. It was announced that fighting of the most severe character continues in the vicinity of Dixmude, Warneton, Armenticres, Radigen and Labassee, but that every attempt of the Germans to gain the ground previously lost has been repulsed.

The fighting is now general all along the battle line from Lorraine to the sea. The official statement says that the allies have made slight gains in the Argonne and Woevre districts. The enemy has failed in attempts to break through the allied entrenchment in the neighbourhood of Tricourt, west of Craonne and Soan, and south of Varennes. There has also been severe fighting at Malincourt, Champion and St. Mihiel.

WASHINGTON, October 22.—Great Britain to-day ordered the release of the Standard oil tanker John D. Rockefeller, seized off the Orkney Islands, according to a despatch to the British ambassador, transmitted to the White House to-day. This followed this government's protest. Great Britain's explanation stated merely that the vessel had ben seized because it was "Consigned to order."

THURSDAY, OCT. 22, 1914

THE WAR HELPS A LITTLE.

The purchasing agent of the British Government, now in Montreal, will place orders for a million sweater coats, a like number of grey worsted socks, a million suits of grey underwear and many other articles. The sweaters are for the British soldiers. Apparently the Germans won't need sweaters—according to the trend of this morning's news from the front the Germans will have it made so hot for them that they won't need anything else than Tommy Atkins in action to keep up their circulation. An order like this is one of the brighter spots in war. It will help to keep busy our woollen industries, which are none too prosperous in times of peace, and will give considerable of our greatest need, employment. In addition to this will be the increased employment given by the equipment of our own contingents—the order referred to above being only for the home British troops. This form of employment will, unfortunately last some time, for Kitchener will go on making armies till the fight is over. It may take a good many socks to carry the British soldiers to the gates of Berlin, for they won't stop fighting till this goal is reached.

BRITAIN STILL HOLDS FIRST PLACE.

Some fearful persons, thought that Great Britain would be nowhere in a war with Germany, but events show that Germany's military efficiency, great as it really is, has been overrated and there is ground for believing that, as compared with Britain the boasts of Germany's tremendous trade development are not quite justified. There are persons who say and believe that Germany has beaten Britain commercially. At any rate Germany's commerce at present is very much behind that of Britain, which has virtually suffered little from the war, while that of Germany is paralyzed. In the past Britain has achieved a strong commercial lead. In the eight years from 1905 to 1913, the exports of Germany grew from 1440 million of dollars to 2275 millions. In the same period the trade of the United Kingdom rose from 1650 million dollars to 2625 millions. It is, therefore, seen that Great Britain is holding her lead in commerce, as she is holding her advance place in keeping national faith and standing as the defender of world-wide freedom; as she will, in due time, hold first place as a victor—in the present war against the cruel and reactionary forces of systematised autocracy and ruthless militarism.

PETERBOROUGH DOES PRINTING.

Keep the dollar at home. This is sound commercial gospel, and it should be the slogan of the purchaser as well as the seller. There are agents of Toronto printing firms in the city, soliciting orders for printing. Don't give them any orders, if you want to be patriotic and loyal to home interests. Peterborough does printing; as good printing as can be done in Toronto, and at as reasonable rates. The dollar you pay for outside printing leaves the city and is lost; the dollar you pay for home printing, stays at home, continues at work and helps keep business moving. The printers deserve home patronage, because it is their right, a right that citizens loyal to the town will recognize. The newspapers are continuously—as a matter of habit and principle—urging citizens to patronize home merchants and home industries; working for the benefit of the whole community; and, as a matter of fairness, deserve some recognition. They do not ask for a medal; they simply wish to be done by as they do by others. The department stores of the city won't pay many dividends from the profits of the patronage the newspapers of Peterborough send them. The Peterborough business men or professional men, who give outside orders for printing that they can get done as well and as cheaply at home, by printing establishments, who stand by them and enjoin the citizens generally to stand by them, are not showing any slavish submission to the golden rule. Keep the dollar at home and you will help the community that you have to depend upon for the bulk of your business, and will thus be helping yourself in business as well as keeping your conscience in comfortable working order.

HEART NOT HEIGHT.

The military authorities are rather strict in enforcing the standard of height for recruits, the minimum standard in Great Britain being 5 ft. 4 in., and in Canada 5 ft. 3 in. It is fortunate that the standard of height was not made higher. In that event we should have been deprived of the services of the immortal "Bobs," Admiral Jellicoe and General French. These men are living evidence of the fact that brains and "bulk" are not necessarily associated. They are all small men, physically. Courage, and efficiency are not mere matters of inches. Experience has demonstrated that soldiers of medium height, can do more marching, come into the battle line after a hard march a good deal more fit than six-footers, and consequently can do better fighting than the stalwart guardsman, who expends his physical energy in transporting his carcase, with less reserve strength left for the work of fighting. As a rule small men have more courage as well as stamina than men of greater bulk. It is the spirit and the soul, not inches, that count in making an effective soldier. Col. Lowry, of the 17th Lancashire regular regiment that was stationed in Canada—in Toronto—in the early sixties, was an undersized man, but with the heart of a lion. He was in the Crimean war; and it is related of him that in an assault on the Russian earthworks, in which he led his regiment, he was, on reaching the wet-slippery clay earthworks, too short to mount them. His men boosted him up on top, and he pulled the soldiers up the bank by their rifles and they carried the position. Physical fitness is a great thing in a soldier; not that it adds directly to his ability to do the best work in battle—shooting straight—but because it keeps him fit under hardship and helps maintain his effectiveness—enables him to do better work in the trenches, than he could do in a hospital. Heart, not height, is the measure of a good soldier.

THE NEW MINISTERS.

In the Dominion Cabinet reconstruction, Hon. T. Chase Casgrain replaces Hon. L. P. Pelletier as Postmaster-General. The new minister may not be as valiant a ghost-master-general in providing political corpses of civil servants, but he is a man whose loyalty is above suspicion, who has no Nationalist entanglements and will no doubt, make an efficient administrator. Mr. Blondin, Deputy-Speaker, who becomes Minister of Inland Revenue, may make a good minister, and be acceptable to loyal Canadians. But this can only be on the asumption that he has recanted and renounced his Nationalism. Mr. Blondin was one of the sponsors of the disloyal cult of Nationalism which first saw the light in the Drummond-Athebaska bye-election in 1910, in which the first Nationalist was elected, to the slogan of Mr. Blondin that the French-Canadians "had to shoot holes through the British flag to breathe the air of liberty." Mr. Blondin may have got over all this—may have been cured by contact. He was as a party expedient made deputy-speaker and by sitting alongside Mr. Speaker Sproule may have absorbed enough loyalty to neutralize his Nationalism; for Mr. Speaker Sproule, as ex-grand master of the Orangemen, may be considered to have loyalty enough to spare a little to his "running mate." In the event of Mr. Blondin having ceased to be disloyal as a Nationalist, he will be tolerated by Canadians who take their loyalty seriously and do not believe in making it a sacrifice as a factor in party bargaining. The retiring ministers are to be rewarded for their self-sacrifice on the altar of public service, by substantial emolumentary positions. Mr. Pelletier is to be a member of the Railway Commission at $8,000 a year, and Mr. Nantel gets a judgeship at a similarly tidy figure. It is also stated that Hon. T. Crothers, Minister of Labour, whose replacement is reported, will be shifted to the bench. By the way, it would be interesting to be informed, why cabinet ministers qualify for important offices like judgeships by conspicuous inefficiency as administrators.

TRIBUTE TO RUSSIANS.

In this war, as we have said before it is each for all and all for each. A battle won in Poland is a blow struck in venegeance for the massacres in Belgian villages, and for the freeing of Belgium from the Teutonic hordes. The Russian peasant soldier, tireless, persistent, gallant, is fighting for the same great cause as the Belgian townsman, the French pion-pion and the British soldier and sailor. He is striking lustily and well for European freedom. We rejoice in his victories. We are proud of his valour.—London Express.

SOUTH AFRICA SAFE AND SOUND
HER HEART IN THE RIGHT PLACE

Advices from South Africa are to the effect that the uprising headed by Gen. Martiz is not likely to be anything more than a flash in the pan, and will be speedily squelched by the troops led by Gen. Botha.

Addressing an audience of more than 5,000 South African farmers, including a strong commando of burghers, General Botha two weeks ago declared that for South Africa to show hostility to England would mean ruination. This statement was wildly cheered again and again. A full report of the meeting printed in British papers shows that the enthusiasm which greeted the premier's declaration was so great that he was obviously touched; and he afterwards declared that the gathering was unprecedented in the country.

This is the real feeling in South Africa toward Great Britain, and the report of an uprising by a pro-German command should not be taken too seriously.

General Botha raised his audience to a high pitch of enthusiasm when he declared that any talk of South Africa remaining neutral was the greatest nonsense he had ever listened to. Neutrality for South Africa was an utter impossibility. If a German warship arrived at Durban and imposed a levy of £5,000,000 on them it would help them very little to say they were neutral. The report says:

He detailed his agreement with the Imperial government regarding the withdrawal of Imperial troops and the expedition to German Southwest Africa. Some people said the government should have asked the country's permission first of all. But what was the good of a government, he asked, scornfully, that was not prepared to accept responsibility? He wished them clearly to understand that there were only two courses open—one that of loyalty and help, and the other that of disloyalty and treason. There was no middle course. Which course did they intend taking? They must give him a straightforward answer. (Loud cries of "We want the loyal course; you have done the right thing.")

The fact of the matter was, General Botha declared amid tremendous cheers, that the Kaiser wanted to go down to posterity as a second Napoleon. Incidentally he wanted a place to which to send Germany's surplus population, and South Africa appealed to him as a suitable place. Surely the government was not there to shirk responsibility, but to take responsibility and give the people a lead. (Loud cheers.) The stain of treason had never touched South Africans and would not now. (Cheers). South Africa must prove to the British Empire, which had been watching them, that they were worthy and still more worthy of trust. By doing so they would create for themselves a greater future than would ever otherwise be possible. (Cheers.)

He wanted them to speak with no uncertain voice. Their decision would have great influence throughout South Africa and would go forth to the whole Empire. (Cries of "We support you.") They did not want lip-loyalists or fair-weather patriots. The people they wanted must be true patriots, men willing to do something, to make sacrifices. "The British government must be able to look straight into our eyes and be able to see what it is in our minds." (Great cheering, lasting several minutes.)

General Botha said the Union would want to have a voice in the final disposal of German Southwest Africa, but what say could the Union have if it sat with arms folded in neutrality. Emphasizing the closeness of co-operation between the Union and Imperial governments, he said the latter was helping South Africa in every possible manner so as to ensure absolute success. South Africa could have whatever guns, cannon and armaments she required. (Cheers.)

Manifestly British interests in South Africa are quite safe in the hands of Gen. Botha, who is supported in his pro-British ideas by the vast majority of the people. It would have been gratifying indeed, had the federation been entirely unanimous, but considering that the country was so recently at war with Great Britain, and that Germany has done so much to stir up antagonism to British interests, there is cause for pride in the condition of affairs which exists there. —Brantford Expositor.

A LITTLE ABOUT SERVIA,
THE EXCUSE FOR THIS WAR

We see but occasional reports of victories of the Servian people who are the innocent cause, or, rather, excuse, of this great war. G. M. Trevelyan, in a leaflet issued by the Victoria League, London, writes, showing what manner of people these simple, but plucky, Servians, are. Mr. Trevelyan's estimate is founded upon observation during his travels:

The Servians are an extremely democratic people, more so than the English, Americans or ay other people, among whom there are great distinctions of rank or of wealth. The Servians are a nation of peasant-proprietors, each man with his own piece of land; 86 per cent. of the population belongs to this class. The feudalism of Hungary, the junkerism of Prussia, the landlordism of England, all better or worse manifestations of the same system of holding land in large blocks, finds no analogy in Servia. The Turks during their occupation of the country destroyed the old fendal class of Servia, so that now that the Turks have gone it is the purest democracy. The typical Servian peasant or soldier (who are one and the same) is a fine, upstanding, type of humanity, who looks you in the face as an equal. They are also a very pleasant and kindly people, as indeed are most of the inhabitants of the Balkans when they are not engaged in racial war. The Servians have lightness and gaiety, and have been called "the French of the Balkans."

To such a people, thoroughly equalitarian in sentiment, and quite unaccustomed either to feudalism or Kaiserdom in any form, both the Russian and the Austrian systems of government are equally alien. If they win the great national war they are now waging it is a democratic state that they will form out of the Serb and Croat provinces which they intend to liberate from Austria.

The Servians, like everyone else, have the defects of the qualities. If they have the merit of equalitarianism, they lack leadership. They have very little in the way of an upper or even a middle class, the mercantile element being very slightly developed among them as yet. If they have the peasant's virtues, they have his limitation of outlook.

I saw a good deal of the army officers, and learnt to like them from conversations carried on in French, or a little English; they are not a "military caste," or even a class socially apart from their soldiers. They are many of them professional men, clerks, and better-to-do peasants. The army discipline is good, but they live on easy terms with their men. They can be seen dancing the kolo, the pretty national dance of interwoven steps, with their men hand-in-hand. In battle they say not "Forward, men!" but "Let us charge, my brothers," and they have not to say it twice; their army is truly a democracy in arms. They have French-made cannon and rifles, and have now in less than two years given a good account of themselves against Turk, Bulgarian, and Austrian.

GENEROUS GERMAN-CANADIANS.

A remarkable record has been made by the City of Berlin and the Town of Waterloo, in the County of Waterloo, Ontario, in their contributions to the Canadian Patriotic Fund. As is generally known, these towns are largely inhabitated by people of German birth or descent, and it might be expected that they would not be as generous in their contributions as other parts of the country where the predominant population is British. However, the records show that these two towns according to their population excel all other towns and cities in Canada in their generosity.

Berlin, a city of 10,000 or 12,000 contributed nearly $100,000, while Waterloo with about 5000 population, raised $50,000. Waterloo's contributions averaged $10 a head for its population.

It is gratifying to know that our German citizens are just as keen in doing their duty towards Canada and the Empire as those of the English speaking origin.—Lethbridge Herald.

NO NICKEL FOR THE ENEMY.

It is reported that the war caused a temporary depression in the nickel industry at Sudbury. If this meant the cutting off of the trade with Germany or those who supply Germany with nickel, it was not a cause for regret, but there is cause for anxiety in a report that the industry shows symptoms of revival. It is a pity there ever was such a trade with Germany, and it ought now to be cut off for good and all, during the war and afterwards. Germany ought not to get an ounce of Canadian nickel. The bulk of the nickel exported is for the protection of warships and the covering of shells, and Canada must not in the smallest degree furnish the materials of war for Germany, directly or indirectly.

The surest way to bring about the desired result is to forbid the export of the ore to any place outside the British Empire. If the nickel were refined in Canada it would be comparatively easy to control the export, allowing the nickel to go only to Great Britain, France, or Russia. As long as we export the unrefined ore the export should be confined to Great Britain or to places designated by the British authorities.

The effect of this prohibition upon the industry of getting out the ore is of comparatively small importance. The supreme object is to prevent a necessary munition of war from getting into the hands of the enemy. We might just as well send soldiers to enlist in the German army as nickel to be used for the navy. Canada controls all the nickel in the world except the mines owned by France, and Canada should help France to starve Germany out of this material.

The same remarks hold good as to asbestos. Canada produces 85 per cent. of the asbestos used in the world. Asbestos is a valuable war material, used for protective purposes. There are frequent and urgent demands from Germany for our asbestos, and care should be taken that not a particle of it goes to Germany. Canada does not want any industry to flourish through the supply of war material to the enemies of the British Empire. Stringent prohibitions should be made, and all protests should be disregarded. The country will heartily support the Government in the most drastic action that can be taken.—Toronto Star.

A GOOD ACTOR.

An actor in London seeing a sailor on the street noticed the suspicious circumstance that his handkerchief was incorrectly knotted. He called a policeman, the sailor was followed home and a magazine of German explosives was discovered. Evidently there is at least one good actor.

THE EGOIST.

(From the European Edition of the Herald.)

I have called my guns from the mines,
I have whistled my ships from the sea,
And a million men in battle lines,
Are fronting death for me.
I have schemed and bribed and lied,
I have wielded the scourge of pain
On a little nation, who defied—
And spit in my face again.

I have covered the smiling land
With the bloodshed harvest spoils,
I have littered the shingly strand
With the dead, caught in my toils.
The rivers have sought the flood,
With a sluggish load on their tide,
And the air of God reeks with the blood
Of the men slain by my pride.

I have walked alone and proud
On the grave of my better days,
And my cannon have thundered loud,
"To Paris!" Who recks the ways?
Yet—the end of the day is long,
And the winds of fate blow wide.
Can it be possible I am wrong,
And God on the other side?
—Laeta Marion Ramage.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

MANY PLAYERS MAY BE OUT OF A JOB

NEW YORK, Oct. 22—There is going to be a lot of surplus baseball talent on the market next season if peace is not declared. If the predictions of some of the club owners come true many of the major and minor leaguers who jumped to the Federals this year will be out of a job. On top of all the peace talk comes the tidings that all the major league clubs have reached an understanding to the effect that under no consideration will any of the contract jumpers be taken back into the ranks. The Feds will refuse to listen to peace overtures under these conditions.

President W. F. Baker of the Philadelphia Nationals, is one of the club owners who is decidedly set against taking back jumpers. His club was severely crippled by the Independent League and he stated emphatically that he would not consider taking back any of the men who desired him.

Did Nothing but Draw Salaries

All the Federal League Clubs carried a lot of extra ball players and paid big salaries to men who did nothing except warm the bench. If the Federal League opposes organized ball next season they will cut down their forces to a minimum after the past season's experience with extra players. It is stated that several of the Federal League clubs paid salaries from $1500 to $2,500 last season to men who did not take part in more than half a dozen games.

DUNN KNOWS NOTHING OF NEW YORK JOB

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—Despite the fact that he has been made manager of the New York Highlanders by general consent — New Yorkers appear to have taken the appointment for granted — Jack Dunn says he knows nothing about it.

"Nobody has ever discussed the subject with me," he said to a knot of friends, who had gathered to talk over the world's series. "And so far as I know I will go right ahead getting my International club for next season."

"Would you like to come to New York?" was asked him.

"Certainly I would like to come to New York—I always do—but coming here as manager of a big league club is another proposition. I wouldnt like to answer that because, in a business way, I have never been approached on the subject."

Frank Farrell confirms "Dunnie's" statement by saying that he has not taken up the question of the management of his team with anybody. "I will probably wait until late in the Winter before making up my mind," he said, "and anything you hear about me having decided on a manager is all rot."

In the meantime rumour comes from Philadelphia and from a rather reliable source that Dunn is to succeed Charley Dooin as manager of the Phillies. To a close personal friend Dooin has practically admitted that he will be out next season, and this same friend says that President Baker is very anxious to have Dunn.

No matter whether New York or Philadelphia gets Dunn, the big leagues will have a brand new, live wire manager. An example of the shrewdness of Dunn is the fact that he has developed and sold enough players during the past season to make himself a nice sum of money in face of his club being a financial failure in the International.

MR. TELFORD'S IMPRESSIONS OF NEW ONTARIO ON RECENT VISIT

Bridgenorh, Oct. 21, 1914.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—If you will allow me space in your valuable paper I might give your readers a short history of a trip through New Ontario that might be interesting to them.

I left Peterborough on the 30th of September, on the G.T.R., going to North Bay; I there took the terminus of the G.T.R., the G.N.O., the Provincial Government road which runs through to Cochrane, a distance of 253 miles. The G.T.R. has a running privilege to and from that place every day, which is called the Cobalt Special, which leaves Toronto every night.

The Ross Government undertook, some years ago, to build a railway up to New Liskeard. At that time it was thought by a great many people to be a great mistake. The country was no good, it was said, and that it was a land of stunted poplar. In the meantime the Whitney Government came into power and they wisely went on and completed the road through to Cochrane, where the G. T. P. passes through to the great Northwest.

In the years gone by it was the custom to get the country settled, and after many years of hardship, build them a railroad. Happy to say that custom has died out. Now it is the custom to build a railroad into a new country for to take the settler in, and to help him along in his undertaking. Our Government has succeeded in building a railroad up through New Ontario that is a credit to any government. The roadbed is very smooth and the coaches are steel coaches, lighted by electricity. The conductors and brakemen are civil, polite and obliging. After leaving North Bay you don't find a very good farming country until you reach New Liskeard, which is the beginning of the great clay belt. It is 112 miles north of North Bay. About twenty years ago the first settler commenced to clear his farm or his homestead, at the head of Lake Temiskaming. In a few years he had enquiries for village lots to build on, and he commenced to sell, and that homestead is the lively Town of New Liskeard. It has a population of over 2,200. There are some very fine houses and barns in this locality. For over forty miles, north, the country is nearly all settled and buildings built thereon. The country is very level and free from stone and the land is clay.

There is plenty of land for homesteading, but it is situated back about ten miles from the railroad. But the Government has not only built a railroad but has spent a lot of money in opening up concession lines and building roads. In riding on the train you can see for miles. The lines opened up through the woods and roads are well built on both sides of the railroad. It was my intention to spend a day at the Model Farm at Monteith. In fact I started to go, and got as far as Matheson, but it was raining and cold, so I came back to Haileybury.

There are only four kinds of timber in the clay belt—spruce, white birch, poplar and cedar. but spruce and poplar is most plentiful. The timber is small, from six inches, up to about fifteen inches, and grows very thickly. The spruce and poplar is worth from $4 to $5 a cord, where it can be placed alongside of the railway, for pulpwood. After the timber is cut and burned off, in about three or four years, the stumps will all come out, and the land, not being full of hills and hollows, will be fine level land. Grain of all kinds may be grown here; also roots, which are of as good quality as can be grown anywhere. Corn, as yet, has not proved a success, on account of the early frost, but as the country gets cleared I think it will do all right.

I left Haileybury on the 5th of October and the potatoes were green, and flowers were in full bloom. The amount of gold and silver that is concealed in this new country cannot be estimated. I had the pleasure of going through the Nippissing plant at Cobalt. The amount of machinery there, to take the silver out of the ore, has cost millions of dollars. The day before I left the Nippissing mine one carload of silver, about one month's make, was marketed, and I am told that it is not to be compared with the Hollenger mine, and the great Dome mine, at Timmins and Porcupine. There are a great many more mines I might write about. It is something wonderful the amount of American capital that is invested in the mining interests of this north country. It amounts to many millions of dollars, and only part of the gold in this country has yet been found. The day before I came home a man told me he had discovered a new mine, seven miles from Timmins that had tested the best of any mine that has been discovered as yet in that north country.

Some may wonder if labour is plentiful and how are the wages. There is plenty of work to be had, such as cutting pulp-wood, for which there is a great demand at present. Prices for paper have gone up and is still likely to go higher. The mining industry calls for a great amount of labour. The wages run from $3 to $3.50 per day, and there is also a good demand for farm hands at good wages. Of course, in some cases, living is higher than here. Rents are high. Milk is selling at twelve cents per quart. I drove out into the Township of Buck. I inspected the dairy of Graham Bros., who sell milk in the Town of Haileybury. I found they had 25 cows on 20 acres of land and they had all or nearly all their hay and bran to buy. They told me they had to pay from $30 to $32 per ton for hay, and about the same for bran and shorts, so that accounts for the high price of milk. Meats are not any higher, if as high, as here, for in Haileybury they have a very fine market, where you can get anything from a bonqnet of flowers to a quarter of beef. Fresh meat of all kinds can be bought by the pound or quarter. The Province of Quebec is just across the Lake from Haileybury. In fact you can see the farm buildings fro mthe towns and the farmers come over in steamboats and gasoline launches with their produce for sale every Tuesday and Saturday—the market days in Haileybury.

A trolley line is operated from Cobalt to New Liskeard, through Haileybury, a distance of nine miles. People come from Cobalt and New Liskeard to make purchases at Haileybury. This trolley line is also built by the Government and runs to and from, every half hour. It is a great convenience and is well patronized.

Now, the question arises in my mind, why are there so many of our young men flocking to the North West, when we have a country that has such great possibilities before it as New Ontario?

In the first place there is work all the year round, clearing the land and taking out pulp-wood. All varieties of grain can be grown here, as good, and better, than in the West; also roots of every description can be successfully grown for the reason it is not as far north, by some hundreds of miles. Then there is the mining industry, where there are millions of dollars worth of siver and gold that has never as yet been discovered and in some cases, never will.

I think that if New Ontario was better known and the great future there is before it, there would be more people go into it than to the North West.

Yours truly,

John N. Telford.

HEARNE HAS JUMPED TO THE FEDERAES

PITTSBURG, Oct. 21.—The local Federal League Club are pursuing a policy of spring the names of contract jumpers one at a time, and the fatest to be announced is "Bunny" Hearne, of the Toronto Club in the International League last season, but who was to go back to the New York Giants next spring. It is said here that McGraw gave two players and $5,000 for him. He formerly played with Rebel Oakes, and the latter had an eye on him all season.

At the close of the season the Pittsburg manager offered Hearne a tempting contract, after McGraw had paid over the money, so the Federal officials here aver, and the pitcher accepted the bait, and signed to play with the Rebels in 1915. This last season he won and lost eleven games for Toronto.

SOME THINGS AND A FEW OTHERS

The presentation to the Historical Society of the existing system of city government is long past due.

Farmers, themselves, admit that there is no reason for high-priced potatoes this fall.

The meanest man in town. The singularity of the phrase is very satisfactory.

We sometimes think that the inability of human faculties to comprehend most things eternal will keep many people out of hell, and others out of heaven.

The man who talks the most and with a claim of authority, is too often the man who knows the least.

The New York Times says the Belgians' Plight stirs the world. Yes even to Marmora out here; but it hasn't stirred Peterborough 80 cents' worth yet.

"I think Mr. Weir will be a good alderman: he is very economical," said an East City man yesterday. Finance Minister Johnston had better keep expenses down.

East City residents positively boast that they are now secure from the possibility of garbage collection. Fat chance for the hen feed merchants. Not.

We greatly miss the Rev. Dr. Marsh. Were he here he would have long ago piloted us through space to Delhaven's comet.

Plant hyacinths, narcissi and other bulbs now. They are cheap, easily grown, and will provide lovely blooms at Christmas.

We were told that, industrially, Peterborough is in a busy condition compared with many cities.

PRONOUNCING WAR NAMES IS GOTHAM'S NEWEST AMUSEMENT—57 VARIETIES OF PRONOUNCIATION TO SOME OF THEM

The pronunciation of the many war names is the newest and most popular form of amusement in many quarters these days. Some of the jaw-breakers and tongue-twisters uncovered for the first time by the European war have been given as many different pronounciations by the general public as a certain manufacturer has brands of pickles.

Therefore, an attempt has been made, in the list which follows below, to give the correct, or at least, as nearly correct as possible, pronunciation of the names that one sees every day or two in stories of the conflict raging in Europe.

It should be borne in mind, however, that it is utterly impossible to indicate exactly the sounds employed in pronouncing some of the names. Some of them you can't describe in the English language.

Here's one for which a professor stands responsible: The French U sound (equivalent to the German U with the umalut mark) has no equivalent in English. To make the sound purse the lips as though to say O, but say E instead. The combination produces the French sounding of U.

The French and Belgian names are as a rule accepted on all syllables. To an American they would sound as though they were accented on the last syllable. The Austrian words are generally accented on the first syllable.

In the list below will be found some words marked nasal. To get the correct sound for instance, in the French word mon (my) it is pronounced as though spelled mawn, the letter n, however, not being sounded, the word dying away with a nasal twang. It is as though the end of the word tried to creep out through your nose but got stuck there. Following is the list of words with the pronounciation given as clearly as possible.

French and Belgian: Aisne—Ayne; Aix-la-chapelle — ex la shappel; Alsace—Al zass; Amiens—Am e en; Argonnes—Ar-gon; Brabant-le-Roi — Bra bonn le rwa (a short); Cambrai —Cam-bra; Chalons—Chal lon—nasal; Chantilly—Shaan tee yee; Craonne—Krah on; Chateau Salins—Sha to sal an (nasal); Chateau Thierry—Sha to tee ry; Compiegn—Com pe ayne; Coulommiers—Cool o mee ay; Epernay—Ap pear noy; Epinal—Ep e nal; Louvain—Loo van (nasal); Luneville—Loon ay veel; Maubeuge —Mo burzh (r not sounded; Meaux—Mo; Meurthe—Mert; Meuse—Merze (R silent); Metieres—May ze air; Mons—Mawngs (nasal); Montdidier—Mawng dee di ay (first syllable); Montfaucon—Mawng fo con (nasal); Mantes—Nawnt; Nanteuil — Nawng Teheyee; Oise — Wois; Outeq—Ourk; Peronne—Pear on; Pont-a-Mousson—Pon tah moos awn (nasal); Rambervilliers — Rom ber veal yay; Raon l'Etape—Rah on lap tap; Revigny—Ray veen yee; heims—Rance (nasal); St Die—San dee ay; St. Menehould —San many ool; St. Quentin—San kon tan (nasal); Senlis—San lease; Seine—Sen; Sezanne—Sez ann; Soissons — Swas sohn (nasal); Somme Sum; uippe—Sweep; Termonde—Ter mond; Thiaucourt—Tee o koor; Toul —Tool; Valenciennes—Val on see en; Vervins—Vair van (nasal); Vesle — Vell; Vicsur-Aisne—Vik seer ayne (French U); Ville-sur Tourbe—il seer torb (French U); Vitry-le-Francois—Vee tree e fran swah

Holland: Maastrict—Mas trict.

Russia: Kiece—Kiel ea; Krasnoslav—Kras no slaff.

Antwerp Not Badly Hurt

Millions of Dollars Worth of Merchandise Ruined—Heavy Guns Smashed Forts Only—But the City is Dead.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—A correspondent writing from Antwerp, says that as he drove through miles of the streets of Antwerp the City seemed have suffered less from the bombardment than had been believed. Indications of damage wrought by the German shells were observed in all quarters of the City, but the destruction was usually confined to individual houses at widely scattered intervals, the great mass of intervening buildings being untouched.

Shells Dropped in all Parts.

At the German headquarters it was said this fact was due to the definite plan of the Germans to convince Antwerp with a minimum of damage that the City was at the mercy of their guns. The heavy 12 and 16-inch guns, it was asserted, were not used against Antwerp proper, but shells from the smaller mortars were dropped throughout the City, a few in each section, until every quarter had been systematically visited. The Cathedral of Notre Dame, the pride of Antwerp, had a hole eight or ten feet in diameter in one transept window, and in an adjoining wall thirty feet above the floor. Otherwise this edifice was not damaged.

The artillery park of the Germans before Antwerp was stronger than was generally known. In addition to their widely heralded 16-inch mortars and a large number of 12-inch siege guns, they had two Austrian automobile batteries of twelve guns, which made the victory at Antwerp an Austro-German one.

Havoc Wrought in Forts.

The effect of the big guns at Antwerp's outer fortifications was more striking than at Liege. Two armoured turrets at Ft. Wavre-St. Catherine were put out of action with a single shot, their steel beds being broken in two and the heavy masses of metal hurled five or six yards away. In another fort the concrete embankment was pierced like an egg shell and the steel turret uprooted, and another turret was completely upended and lies with its base pointing skyward and its gun buried beneath.

Behind Fort Waelhem, where a twelve-inch shell penetrated the magazine, a heavy steam engine, which furnished power for the light plant was blown twenty yards from its base. The entire top of the fort here was torn off, and sixty men of the garrison are said to have been buried beneath the debris.

A Dead City.

Antwerp is a dead city. The populace has fled and the streets are deserted. Many of the houses which were demolished by the German shell fire are still smoking. Scenes of destruction are to be witnessed in the warehouse district along the river bank. In addition to wrecked buildings piles of packing cases lie broken open and their contents strewn about the streets. Millions of dollars' worth of merchandise have been ruined in this district.

INDOOR BASEBALL.

The indoor baseball games at the Armouries to-night will be played by E and D Companies, and A and H companies. The first game will start at 8 o'clock.

Mrs. Carman's Maid Says She Told a Lie at The Inquest

Saw Mrs. Carman With Revolver After Woman Was Killed—"I Shot Him" Was Statement Alleged by the Negro Maid

GOT FIVE DOLLARS FOR HER SILENCE

MINEOLA, N.Y., Oct. 21. — Celia Coleman, negro maid in the Carman household and star witness for the State, testified to-day at the trial of Mrs. Florence Conklin Carman, accused of the murder of Mrs. Louise Bailey, that Mrs. Carman had appeared to her, revolver in hand, a moment after Mrs. Bailey had been shot and that Mrs. Carman had said: "I shot him."

Saw a Big, Black Revolver.

"On the night of June 30 I served dinner at 6:45 o'clock. After dinner I started to wash the dishes.

"While I was washing the dishes, Elizabeth (Mrs. Carman's daughter), came into the kitchen. Soon afterwards Mrs. Carman came in. She was dressed in a kimono and had a shawl around her neck. She told Elizabeth to go back into the house. Then Mrs. Carman went out the back door. A minute later I heard a crash of glass and the report of a pistol. Mrs. Carman came in the door again.

"I was standing in the door between the pantry and the kitchen. She said to me, 'I shot him.' Then she showed me a revolver, a black revolver that was about nine inches long. I grabbed her by the arm and told her not to go into the office. She said she was not going to do anything else. Then I went into the office.

Mrs. Carman Winked at Her.

"The body of a dead white woman was lying on the floor near the operating chair. Mrs. Carman followed me into the office. She stayed there about half a minute and then went out to the waiting room. Dr. Carman was there and so was another man. I went into the kitchen and returned to the office in about a minute. Mrs. Powell (Mrs. Carman's sister) was in there then. Then I went back into the kitchen, finished washing the dishes and went to my room and went to sleep.

"The next morning about daylight Mrs. Carman came to my room. She was dressed in a night gown. She said, 'Oh Celia, what did I kill that woman for? I hope God will forgive me. You stick to me and if anything happens to you I'll take care of your little boy.'

"I saw Mrs. Carman later that morning at the breakfast table and she burst into tears. After breakfast she came into the kitchen and told me to forget that I had seen her the night before. Later that day Mrs. Carman came in with her lawyer, Mr. Levy. Mrs. Carman winked at me when he asked me what I knew.

Burned a Bundle of Letters.

"I told Mr. Levy that I did not know anything. Mr. Levy came again the next day." Before he came Mrs. Carman told me to tell him I was not down stairs after dinner. She wrote out some statement and I signed it without reading it. He read it, however. The statement was not true.

"The day after the murder Mrs. Carman came into the kitchen and asked me to make a wood fire in the stove, which I did. Later she came down stairs with a bundle of letters and burned them up in the fire. That same day she told me to call her father from the barn because she wanted him to get the revolver out of the house. Mr. Conklin, her father, came in and went to her room and then came down stairs again. He had a hammer with him. He returned to the barn. The next day, Wednesday, Mrs. Carman came into the kitchen and asked me to step into the office. I went in and the detectives began to question me."

Admits She Told Untruth.

"Did you tell the truth at the coroner's inquest?" the District Attorney asked.

"I did not," the witness answered.

The District Attorney at this point turned the witness over to John J. Graham, Mrs. Carman's counsel, for cross-examination.

A crowd that eclipsed the previous day's throng sought to enter the tiny court room to-day in anticipation of hearing Celia tell her story. Less than 200 were able to do so and these were nearly all women.

Mrs. Carman entered the court room between her husband and her sister, Mrs. Ida Powell. The defendant appeared to be more careworn than she was yesterday. She smiled at her counsel and a woman friend among the spectators and sank wearily into a chair. Apparently the strain was tell on her.

Kept to Her Story.

She testified on cross-examination that when she was being brought from Freeport to Mineola to go before the grand jury, Dr. Carman told her not to change her testimony and that he "would take care of her."

Mrs. Carman, she continued, gave her an extra $5 a few days after the murder.

"That is for keeping your mouth shut," the witness said Mrs. Carman told her.

For an hour and a half Mr. Graham alternately shouted at Celia and pleaded with her, seeking to make her vary her story. Her answers to the hundreds of questions he asked her contained nothing more than was asked for. She was made to say that she was living in New York City at the expense of Nassau county. She admitted tersely that she had testified falsely in many respects at the coroner's inquest; but she explained that she had done so to shield Mrs. Carman and the admission apparently did not disturb her equanimity.

May Relay All Pavement In The City

Company Offer to Tear Up All That Is Not Eminently Satisfactory and Put It Down in More Approved Manner

Some time in the future, perhaps in the near future, the citizens of Peterborough will have to witness the tearing up of all the much vaunted pavement, to secure which central streets of the city were in a state of chaos and confusion for several weeks. The purpose of the tearing up of the asphalt surface will be to relay it in a more satisfactory manner and the chief satisfaction that local people will get out of the resultant inconvenience is the fate that none of the City's money is being spent either in taking up or laying the pavement, and that the new work, when finished, will make (according to the statement of the contractors) an ideal pavement.

The new pavement will be laid with a "binder" between the asphalt and the concrete, in which manner the work this year is being done. The contractors themselves made the suggestion. They have gone over all the pavement in the City and volunteered the information that the work from McDonnel Street north was not up to the standard. They have offered to relay it at their own expense and all other sections of the pavement not eminently satisfactory.

LOCAL BOYS WITH THE HIGHLANDERS

The correspondent of the Toronto News has the following to say of the Highland regiment of which Gordon Campbell and Vivian Fessenden of this city, are officers:

"Pete" Campbell, "Dutch" Wilson, Alex. Sinclair, Art Muir and Bob Corey are in their element. Corey's tent is the centre at evening festivities. He possesses an oil stove which is in great demand. The romance of the evening bugle calls was dispelled by the early morning blast, but the quiet fervour of the men's language has left a lasting impression. The Highland regiments are all brigaded together. The skirl of the pipes shrieking in cometition makes memorable music. The whole Highland battalion was out on a route march this morning, followed by kit inspection. They expect to have rifles and uniforms distributed to-night. All the infantry battalions are rapidly changing to the double company system which obtains in the regular army, and is being introduced in the territorials.

Give me, O Lord not scenes anew,
But eyes to see, more clear to view
The beauties that around me shine
In every word and every line
Of Nature's book, that voluminous sphere
In which the words of God appear;
In earth and sky and ocean deep,

Of things that fly and things that swim,
Of sun sun so bright, of moon so dim,
In all the realm of earth and heaven
This revelation Thou hast given.

Closing Service Was Held

Rev. Mr. Crossley's Final Address Given

The closing service of the Crossley meetings was held Tuesday night, when Mr. Crossley spoke on the theme, "Stir Up the Gift." Appealing to Christians, he said, merely trying to be a Christian was a mistake; the proper thing to do is to trust in the Lord. The greatest joy in this world was for the Christian; to be gloomy or morose was a blunder. It surely is the privilege of the Christian to learn how to be happy. It tempted to become discouraged, a few verses of "Go On," to the tune of Auld Lang Syne, will put us where we belong. We are not in this world to learn how best to resist, but how to persevere and win. Deserters are seldom, if ever found during war; it is when only parading and drill is the order of the day that men yield to this temptation and leave the ranks. A working Christian does not desert Christ or His church. The home life reveals the Christian more than his attitude away from home among strangers. Show me a Christian at home and I will show you a Christian away from home. The right church to join was where you can be most at home, receive the most good and do the most good. To ward off the possibility of backsliding do not begin to neglect the prayer life or the daily reading of the Scriptures. Then let the fact of your being a Christian be known. If we realise our relationship to God and God's covenant relation to us, we need not fear as to our ability to gain the victor's crown. God does not fail those who trust in Him a day at a time. The great resolve or the great refusal is made when we accept or reject Jesus Christ to be our Saviour, Lord and King. No one should neglect salvation and declare as to the main thing in life to be attended to, "I missed it."

Seven centre seats of the church were filled with those who entered into covenant relation with God. The services closed with singing, "God Be With You Till We Meet Again."

Mr. Crossley left this morning for Toronto and begins next Sabbath a campaign at Clinton, Ont.

TO BUILD SEWERS AND FIX WALKS

Board of Works Deal With Complaints and Petitions at Last Night's Meetings

The Board of Works Committee of the City Council met last night, there being present Ald. Duncan, chairman; Alds. McIntyre, Saunders, Johnston, Green.

Ask for Sewer.

A letter was read from Dr. Park re the sewer he is asking for, on Bethune, north of Smith street. The letter was accompanied by a petition, sufficiently signed, and the Chairman explained that the residents needed the sewer badly. It was impossible to build the sewer without putting it through private property, but Dr. Park wrote that such a right-of-way could be easily secured.

Ald. Johnston moved that the matter be referred to the City Engineer, and the City Solicitor at once, to see what could be done by way of secura right-of-way, and finding out what the legal position of the City would be. Ald. Green seconded the motion, which carried. A letter was read from Mr. Geo. Edmison, Rubidge street, asking for an additional section of sewer on that street, between Brock and Murray streets. The city engineer was instructed to investigate and report.

Ald. Green said that some change should be made in demanding an immediate revenue of 10 per cent. of cost from sewers, as many who deserved connection were blocked by this. This was not a paying course in the long run.

Bad Sidewalks.

A letter was read from Dr. Greer, saying the sidewalk was in bad condition, being heaved up by trees near the sidewalk. He asked that it be remedied while the work was being done on the paving. The Engineer was instructed to fix the sidewalk and any other sidewalk that needed repairing, for, as pointed out by Ald. Johnston, if an accident occurred the City was liable.

Ald. Green — There should be a standing order to that effect.

Mayor Buller—There is one already

Will Build Crossing.

Father McColl wrote asking for a crossing opposite the new Roman Catholic in East City. It was the unanimous opinion of the Board that this should be granted and done at once.

Two Weeks Holidays.

Mr. Evans, street commissioner, wrote asking for two weeks holidays, beginning November 1st. He was granted the period, the time to be arranged with the City Engineer.

Another Crossing.

Mr. W. Fitzgerald, Smith Street, asked for a crossing opposite his residence.

On motion of Alds. Johnston and Green, the Board decided to build the crossing as soon as possible.

The Campbell Flour Mill Co. wrote complaining of the condition of Dalhousie Street, opposite the mill. The necessary orders were given to have the street fixed at once. The letter complained that the street was in such a condition that the water did not drain off readily.

Pole Must Go.

A letter was read from the G.T.R. authorities regarding a pole that was blocking the moving of the siding, on Bethune Street, between Charlotte and Simcoe Streets.

Ald. Green—That matter should be attended to at once.

It was decided to have the pole moved at once.

Ald. Saunders asked for a sidewalk on Concession Street, from Douro Street to the East City school.

The feeling of the Committee was that the sidewalk should be built, but owing to the pressure of work in progress it cannot be done this fall.

TELEGRAPH AND ELECTRIC WIRES TROUBLE CITY

Who Are Anxious to Have Ruling of the Ontario Railway Commission on Certain Matters

At the Board of Works meeting last night a letter was read from City Solicitor Gordon as to whether the Peterborough Radial Railway Company could place feed wires on the streets of the city, without permission of the City Council. Mr. Gordon's opinion, which was concurred in by Mr. Cowan of Toronto, was that the company have no right to sell power being carried over their poles. The company claim that they have the right to put up feed wires wherever they need them, and that this permission was given in clause 8 of the company's franchise.

Mayor Buller said that all that was left to do was to try and arrange to have the feed wires put on the city poles, to prevent the appearance of the city being apoiled by so many extra poles. If the company was intractable and would not act amicably so as to preserve the neat appearance of the streets, then the question should be taken to the Railway Commission.

Also the matter of the G.N.W. wires which had been put on the Bell Telephone poles on Simcoe street, without the consent of the should be taken before the R Commission. In connection wi matter a letter was to hand fro Solicitor Gordon saying that brought the Bell Telephone pany's breach of contract to the tion of their general council wh promised to look into the matt

Mayor Buller said also tha Railway Commission should b as to whether the G.N.W. ha right to put their lines on when they were asked not to do the City Council, for good re The cost of moving the G.N.W was no argument against doing it had been put there in the fa the request of the city not to d Soon there would be nothing but graph wires on the poles on S street.

Buy Artillery In The U. S.

Belligerents Have Representatives in New York—Many Purchases Made—New Big Gun Creates Interest.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—Representatives of several foreign Powers, some of them now at war, will witness near New York to-day a demonstration of a new high power gun. In the hotels where these agents of Japan, Britain, Italy and other countries have been staying for several weeks they are known to have purchased enormous quantities of military material.

The widespread interest among them in the gun they are to watch in action to-day led to a knowledge of that demonstration getting about. Details concerning the time and place of the demonstration and the character of the weapon were not obtainable.

Japan has been represented in New York by two sets of agents. One of these commissioners, as they are known, is reported from reliable sources to have purchased so large a quantity of cannon that surmises concerning the prospective use of those weapons have run to interesting conclusions. Those who assume to be in the secret declare that Japan is preparing to send an army across Manchuria and Siberia to fight the Teutons side by side with the Russians they defeated in battle only a few years ago and to aid Japan's ally, Britain.

French agents are reported to have bought everything in the line of artillery they could find. A British agent has been buying automobile trucks by the hundreds. An Italian military official has purchased as many aeroplanes as could be built and equipped for him within the limited time he named for completion of his order. These agents brought to New York great fortunes in cash to obtain the supplies they sought.

THE MOON INDICATES WARM WEATHER---

"We're going to have some warm weather," said the old gentleman last evening. He was gazing toward the amber and purple shades in the western sky where the new moon, silvery and bent like a bow, stood out, as if embossed, a few degrees above the horizon.

The other citizen did not understand the signal that was apparently written in the sky. His silent question invited a reply.

"When you see the new moon so far south, you can make sure that we are going to have some good weather."

Reasonable wasn't it? Here was the new moon full of promise, rising toward the cloying south, instead of favouring the north.

The moon, you know, controls the weather, implied the first citizen. After it has spent itself through the third quarter, and only the night shift cops know the hours of its rise, it spends the early part of the evening somewhere beneath the horizon figuring out the brand of weather to be announced next. During the seasons of extremes, summer and winter, there is little cause for indecision. It would never do, for instance, to cross the dope, determine upon a February chill in July. No, there must be a consistent performance during the seasons that tolerate only particular brands. Mark you, however, there are some old timers who can go out after supper on a January evening, gaze at the new moon and, returning to the Capuan climate within declare that the new moon looks warm. Likewise, he will declare positively that February will be mild.

But getting gack to regular performances, the fact remains, there is little latitude for the Old Moon Man during the aforementioned periods. But swing into spring or autumn and he has a chance to satisfy any passing whim. The first citizen declares that this new moon presages good weather. Would that we could accept his interpretation. Pending purchases of necessities, coal, flannels, cocoa for the cold evenings, and similar cold weather accompaniments would be deferred until the next moon, when the nights are falling early, would show itself some evening the worst message that winter was about to descend, or that the warm spell would be still further prolonged. However, in spite of the first citizen's asurance we feel that some medium other than the moon will determine the November. Possibly it just happens, eh?

RUSSIA THE REAL MENACE TO GERMANY

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 20.—The Berlin Tageblatt, in an editorial, appears to renounce the view prevalent recently in Germany that the destruction of England is the main object of the present war.

"Because Russia threatened us," it says, "and because its perpetual menace is intolerable, the German people went to war. Until we finish we must not forget for a moment why we began.

"Every loss of power by England means for Russia a further gain of strength, influence and freedom of movement. We all hope that England's position as the world's dictator will be shaken, but it is tenfold our duty to fight against Russia becoming the world's dictator."

The Handelsblad has published a despatch which declares that Prince Wolrad Frederick Waldeck-Pyrmont, half brother of Emma, Dowager Queen of the Netherlands, was killed in the western theatre of the war when engaged in patrolling.

A Letter From Lille Right In The War Belt

Mr. E. B Fowler, 277 Rubidge Street, has received the following letter from Mr. C. C. Miller, formerly of this city, from Lille. He is the superintendent of the International Harvester Company's binder twine mill at Croix, about 20 miles from Lille, where Mr. Miller resides. The names referred to are those of the foreman, whom Mr. Miller took with him to France from the local plant. The letter from an old neighbour in the actual scene of war, will bring us in more realistic touch with the terrible scenes of which Lille is now, and has for some time been, a centre. The letter, is in part as follows:

Lille, le 3rd Oct., 1914.

Friend E. B.— Just received your letter a few days ago, as I have been away from here for some weeks—got chased out of here—then took the organization to Paris. Was there a few days and our German friends tried to slip a few bombs down on us. One struck about two blocks from the hotel my family was at; so the wife got nervous and we went to London. McManus is in Ireland safe and sound. Reed and Rowland are near London. I left my family in London and came back here with Butler, and now we are right in it.

As I am writing the cannons are booming outside the city. I took a walk about an hour ago and a shell came over me whistling to beat the band. I made one break for the hotel, and believe me, I will stay off the streets for some time. There was a fight this morning about two blocks from my house (but I have that closed up.) Just now they have 400 Germans cornered at the station, about five minutes' walk from here, and they are having a hot time. I cannot write more as I do not know if you will get this, and I want to see how things are. Address at factory. Regards to all.

Your friends,
C. C. MILLER.

JUDGMENT RVED

Local Man Charged With Theft of a Gold Watch and $62.00

Fredrick Revoy was charged before the Police Magistrate, this morning with stealing from Thos. W. Cameron, a gold watch, and $62 in money. He elected to be tried summarily through his counsel, Mr Widdifield.

Mr. Cameron, called as a witness, said that on the 12th of October he was drinking with the prisoner and a man named Curtin. After 9 o'clock he was so intoxicated that he could not remember anything that transpired, but subsequently Curtin told him that he and the prisoner took him home. Two days later the witness charged the prisoner with taking the money and the prisoner admitted it.

W. Curtin said that when he took Cameron home on the night in question, the latter laid on the lawn, and while he (witness) was arousing Cameron's landlord, the prisoner, who accompanied them, vanished.

P. C Reid stated that the prisoner was first arrested on suspicion of a theft at Colborne and when searched a gold watch and $101.30 were found on him.

The prisoner said that on the night in question, after leaving the Hotel, he was very drunk and could not remember anything. The next morning, ing, however, he found in his left trousers pocket $32 and a gold watch. Whose it was he did not know, nor how he got it. He endeavoured to find Curtin, thinking that the money might be Cameron's, but could not do so. Next day he (the prisoner) went to Norwood, returning in the evening, when he was arrested. He had the money on him, but the watch he had left at his boarding house in Peterborough.

His Worship reserved judgment for one week.

Dr. Gordon SpeaKs To-night On "Why Do American Marriages Fail?"

Two Large Churches Packed to the Doors Last Evening to Hear Him.

It is very evident that Dr. Gordon is being appreciated by the people of Peterborough. Last night at seven-thirty, St Paul's Church was comfortably filled, and at seven-forty-five, when Mr. Hesselberg started to play, the church was packed to the doors.

The selections rendered by Hesselberg, the Russian Master Pianist, were a "Russian Polonaise," an original composition, the "Trocadero" March and one of Chopin's Nocturnes. (Emajar). As these gatherings consist chiefly of the "people" and not "musicians"—Hesselberg has wisely decided to offer music of a popular character; things that even the uneducated in music can easily understand. So much has been said of this eminent artist's mastery of the keyboard, that criticism will be impossible and praise unnecessary. Every one in that vast audience which filled St. Paul's from door to pit, hung breathlessly on each note sounded, and congratulated themselves upon the opportunity of hearing within their very own city, such an artist.

The main solo for to-night will be Liszt's great "Hungarian Battle March."

Mr. Greenlaw, the noted singer, has certainly touched the hearts of the people. He sang five different selections during the two meetings, and at the close of the last meeting, the audience seemed to sit with the expectation of having him produce another selection. This evening, Mr. Greenlaw sings the great "Crucifixion Song," also the "Shining Way," to the tune of "Annie Laurie," and the selection entitled "I Love Him," to the tune of "Old Black Joe." The accommodation of these plantation songs to sacred purposes, is most highly appreciated by the average congregation.

Magistrate D. W. Dumble, Esq., K. C., delivered a very appropriate address, and the Reverend E. E. Johnston led in prayer.

The following is a brief outline of the address delivered by Dr. Gordon, in St. Paul's Presbyterian church last evening:

A nation is known by its architecture. An individual is known by his language. Cromwell discovered that the word of a Quaker was better than the word of the average soldier. That is the best church which produces the best type of character. Character is the best expression of a man's creed. A man's words are a part, a vital part, of a man's character. The human soul seeks for expression. There are many forms of expression. Laughter is the most natural form of expression; beauty the most acceptable; music, the most universal; architecture, the most dignified and impressive; eloquence, the most enduring; painting and sculpture, the forms which are classic, but the oldest and most comprehensive form of human expression is—Language.

"Mark you it is not wrong to talk about people if you talk about them in the right way. But let me warn you—words have wings. The Persians have a proverb to this effect. "The un-spoken word is your slave — the spoken word is your master." There is nothing so swift as slander. It is social blood-poisoning. A friend of mine, a Toronto physician of great skill and popularity, one day, during a surgical operation, scratched his finger with a tainted instrument. In less than two weeks he was in his grave. But slander travels faster than that! They have just discovered a branch of the "Black Hand" Society in the United States, but there are social mischief makers who belong to a blacker society than the one indicated. In a recent novel a certain Dr. Packthread is thus described: "He could whisper away a character by an innocent interrogation— he could destroy a high reputation by a shrug of the shoulders—he could assassinate a soul by silence, when silence became the strongest instrument." What a garland to weave for the brow of fiendishness.

"Friend, don't believe all you hear concerning your neighbour. Remember the "four discounts" recommended by Dr. T. DeWitt Talmage. First, a discount of twenty-five per cent. for exaggeration. Second a discount of twenty-five per cent. for the spirit of gossip. Third, a discount of twenty-five per cent. for the pressure of overpowering temptation. Fourth, a discount of twenty-five per cent. to cover your ignorance of the facts on the other side of the case. Richard Baxter wrote these words in his advanced years: "I see that good men are not so good as I once thought they were, nor bad men as bad as I once imagined." They said concerning Stephen Girard, that he was mean, close, shrewd, and exceedingly economical, but this same strange and eccentric captain of industry, was planning a great college for the youth of America.

"And finally, in this connection, let it be distinctly understood that conversation is a test of character. Goethe said concerning Schiller: "I never heard him utter an insignificant word." The painting reveals the artist, the book reveals the writer, the poem reveals the thinker, the building reveals the architect, the machine reveals the inventor, and conversation reveals the individual. Remember that words are the best remembered symbols in use. Charles M. Alexander, sitting in the office of William T. Stead, exclaimed: "I have often wondered how you interviewed people! But he, himself, was being interviewed" at that very moment. One of the greatest journalistic artists in the world was focusing his camera on the renowned singer. In two weeks every reader of the Review of Reviews would be scanning Stead's description of the co-labourer and companion of Tory and Chapman. Every man is being "Interviewed" every day by somebody.

Last evening at a quarter to ten o'clock, Dr. Gordon answered the following questions, in the Murray Street Baptist Church. The Church was crowded to the doors, even at that late hour. This evening he will answer a number of questions in St. Paul's Church, prior to the delivery of his address.

1. Is it right to defraud a corporation that is defrauding you?
2. What is the worst sin which a person can commit?
3. How would you treat people who slander you? Speak well of them.
4. Is it possible to love a person whom you do not like?
5. Is a beautiful face the sign of a superior mind?
6. Should a girl work for a living who has no need to?
7. Would you advise breaking off an engagement because a young man has a weakness for strong drink?
8. What is the characteristic weakness in a woman's character?
9. If you were a woman would you favour woman's suffrage?
10. What is the most difficult mental task for a young man to perform? Concentration?
11. Should an unconverted person be permitted to sing in a church choir?
12. Is the day of emotional religion passing?
13. What is the highest test of a preacher's success?

The "Peoples" Meat Market Re-opened

Simcoe Street Can Now Boast of a First-Class Meat Market

Up until Saturday, last, Simcoe street was without a meat shop. With good business foresight, Mr. Geo. Perrin, who owns the meat business at 461 George street, opened a branch store at No. 176 Simcoe street, Snowden block(a few doors west of Turnbull's. The opening is considered a good one, being centrally located and surrounded by a good field for this line of business.

Mr. Perrin was fortunate in securing the services of a thoroughly practical Old Country butcher and meat cutter, when he placed Mr. Huckley in charge as manager. He has a reputation for being an all-round experienced meat cutter, as well as a judge of prime cattle and other stock.

The new venture got a good start last Saturday and has kept up a brisk pace all week. The stock is well equipped with a mamoth refrigerator, cutting blocks, scales and other accessories for prompt service to the public. The shop is stocked with a general assortment of fresh beef, lamb, veal and pork; also, sausage, head cheese, hams, bacon and other fancy meats. Housekeepers and others should watch for the Saturday special prices at the Peoples' Meat Market every week.

THE STOCK MARKET

TORONTO, Oct. 22.—Live Stock Market—Receipts fair, trade slow, prices lower generally. Choice butcher cows, $6.40 to $6.60; extra prime steers, $7.60 to $7.75; spring lambs, $7.50 to $7.80; hogs off cars $7.75 to $7.90, fed and watered $7.50 to $7.60, f.o.b. $7.15.

WAR MAKES OTHER HARDSHIPS EASY

Bridgeburg Man Writes That He Will Never Complain Again if He Comes Safely Through the War.

BRIDGEBURG, Ont., Oct. 21—"If I ever get through this I will never again complain of hardships. I have been fighting night and day ver since the Allies' victory on the River Marne," says Private William Saxton, in a communication received today by his brother, former Sergeant E. J. F. Saxton of the Army Medical Corps in South Africa, now residing in Amigari.

Another communication received today by Mr Saxton from another brother at the front says: "I was so exhausted that I fell asleep on a gun carriage and suffered a fractured leg when I fell beneath the trucks. I am recovering quickly and expect to be back at the front in a week's time."

PROF. MUNSTERBERG SEES AN ANTI-GERMAN IN DR. ELIOT

BOSTON, Oct. 20.—"I call Dr. Eliot the leader of the anti-German party in America," said Prof. Hugo Munsterberg to-day. "By his recent utterances Dr. Eliot has aggravated opposition to and misunderstanding of Germany.

"Let us hope that this discussion will lead to a better understanding of Germany. For my part, I stand by all I have said."

Determined to drive Prof. Munsterberg out of Harvard, Capt. Wiener of London attacked him anew in a message received in Cambridge to-day. Wiener, who lived in Philadelphia after his graduation from Harvard, insists that the will in which he has left $10,000,000 to Harvard on condition that Prof. Munsterberg be forced out is a real will. In the message he said:

"If is quite true that I have made such a will and shall revoke it if Prof. Munsterberg is retained by Harvard. While Count Bernstorff, German Ambassador at Washington, is a valuable asset to England and her allies, Munsterberg is cleverer than Bernstorff, and far more dangerous.

"Still, I think his miserable representations will soon terminate and that public opinion will be so aroused in fair minded America that he will be compelled to leave the United States. I propose to do my share toward realizing that end, anyhow."

Prof. Munsterberg's resignation is still in the hands of the Harvard corporation, which is expected to take some action at its meeting Oct. 26.

Erving Winslow, Secretary of the Anti-Imperial League, in a letter commenting on the Munsterberg-Weiner controversy to-day, urges the Harvard Corporation to accept the Professor's resignation. He said:

"Because Prof. Munsterberg has acknowledged himself a believer in the 'divine right' of kings, obsessed, therefore, because of the moral obliquity inherent in such belief, he should be, by the acceptance of his resignation, be debarred from instructing the youth of the Republic."

Germans Committed Atrocities But Many Kind Acts Reported, Too

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—Acts of individual cruelty and kindness performed by Germans toward wounded French soldiers and the populations they passed in their march toward Paris are told by Mlle. Yvonne Karger, who has just come to this city and is stopping at the Ansonia, after serving as a Red Cross nurse at Deauville, near Havre. She nursed French and German wounded there from the beginning of the war in the converted hospitals that had been the gay Casino and the Royal Hotel.

"At first," said Mlle. Karger, "the German wounded brought to the hospitals refused to eat or drink the dishes proffered them, fearing they might be poisoned. Several of the soldiers insisted upon my first partaking of the dishes, and one was so convinced that the dishes were poisoned that he threw them at my head and refused for two days to eat or drink. Presently, however, they realized that their fears were groundless and that the German wounded were being treated exactly the same as were the French wounded.

"Some of our French soldiers told me tales of cruelty on the part of German officers, but others told of acts of kindness. It appeared that in the main the cruelties were attributed to individual officers, while the German soldiers themselves were more humane. Several of our wounded told me that German Sanitary Corps workers, passing them as they lay on the battlefield, bound up their wounds with bandages, even as they bound up the wounds of the Germans, having no time to remove other wounded friend or foe in their retreat. One French soldier told me he and the rest of his company had been captured by the Germans near Soissons, had been well taken care of with food and drink, and then, after being stripped off their revolvers and other weaons, had been sent back to the French lines, as the Germans could not afford to take them along.

"One instance that came to my personal attention was the case of a little Belgian girl who, after trudging with refugees for ten days, reached Deauville and was treated there. The child had her right hand severed at the wrist and half of her left hand had been cut off. She said that she had been carrying bread in her native village and that a German cavalry officer had tried to snatch the bread away. When she held on to it, she said, he swung at her with his sabre, cutting off one hand and part of the other. The child also said her mother had been insulted by German soldiers and later killed, and that a man in a neighbouring house had been tortured for several hours until he died.

"On the other hand, we heard frement tales of atrocities committed on German prisoners and German wounded by the French Moroccan troops. These hate the Germans bitterly. I was told of one case in which a French officer left several Moroccans in charge of a room ful lof German prisoners, warning them not to injure the Germans. When he returned a few moments later, the Moroccans had killed every German in the room, so savage was the hatred of these dark troopers for the Germans that it was necessary to ship the wounded Moroccans and the wounded Germans on separate trains, lest the former murder the latter.

Mlle. Karger said the Germans reached Chantilly, their furthest southern point in the march toward Paris, after receiving 1,000,000 francs indemnity from a Duchess who had a chateau there.

NEW PICTURES FOR SCHOOLS

At a meeting of the Board of Education held last evening, it was decided to spend the $50 granted by the government on pictures for the various schools.

Janitor Avery of the King Edward school, who is indisposed, was granted one month's pay and a new janitor will be temporarily appointed.

The Board did not commence its session until after a lengthy committee meeting and in consequence of the late hour adjourned till to-morrow at 8 o'clock.

Recently compiled official figures place the gold production of Alaska to the close of last year at $328,302,540.

THE LIFE OF A WATCH

It should be cleaned and oiled once a year. Many good watches are allowed to go without cleaning and oiling, and the result is the oil is entirely dried up, the pivots become cut and rusted so badly that it costs nearly as much and a new movement to get it in proper condition again. The old saying, "a stitch in time saves nine" holds good.

RUSSIAN SAVINGS SHOWED A BIG INCREASE IN SEPTEMBER

PARIS, October 20.—A Petrograd despatch to the Havas agency says that the Russian press is enthusiastic over the declaration by the Russian Emperor that the sale of alcohol by the government is henceforth forever forbidden in Russia. The Novoe Vremya cites as a happy effect of the suppression of the sale of liquor an increase in the savings bank deposits during September of 23,000,000 rubles ($11,500,000) over the same month last year, in spite of the war.

LONDON, October 21.—The Havas correspondent at Oporto, Portugal, has sent the following despatch:—"Telegraphic and telephonic communication with Lisbon has been cut off. A number of unexploded bombs have been found on the railways."

This may indicate the resumption of the royalist revolution.

BERLIN, October 2.—A German casualty list issued to-day contains the names of about 11,500 killed, wounded and missing.

JOFFRE DENIES USE OF CATHEDRAL

LONDON, October 21.—E. Franklin Tate, Daily News' correspondant in Bordeaux, telegraphs:

"In order to excuse their resumption of the bombardment of the Rheims Cathedral, the Germans allege that the French placed watchers with luminous signals on the tower. In his report of military movements, General Joffre bluntly answers the threadbare attempts at justification, thus: 'No purpose would be served by placing watchers with luminous signals on the half ruined towers while the plains can be watched from from the neighboring heights,' he says. 'If watchers had been placed on the towers there would have been no need of luminous signals. All that would be needed are telephones. The enemy could not have suspected their presence.'

"Mr. Marcel Sembat, the Minister of Public Worqs, after a trip of inspection to the Rheims Cathedral, said:

" 'I am glad the two towers are still standing. It may be possible to preserve the admirable building. It will take a lot of patience and money but it is possible.' "

THE CATHEDRAL AT RHEIMS

The following appeared in the Globe from the pen of Mr. Arthur L. Phelps, son of Rev. Mr. Phelps, East City:

THE CATHEDRAL AT RHEIMS.

Here the dim aisles, the nave, the chancel dim,
Here, in rapt adoration unto Him
The Prince of Peace, an unturned praying face!

Here with still glory on high purple panes
Gleam of the dull September sun; no sound
Within these walls of the dread world, all drowned,
Noise of its losses and its tragic gains.

'Till German thunder rend the sacred air
And screaming Devastation hurtle down
Crash 'mid the candles. O thou with the Crown
Of Sorrows plaited cruelly. Thy Care
Will shepherd even this, and that seems sin
Pity as blindness, bringing Thy Day in.

ARTHUR L. PHELPS.

ROLL UP FOR BRITAIN

The call for enlistment was greatly aided in Britain by patriotic songs. To the tune of The British Grenadiers a lot of people have been singing a song by W. M. L. Hutchinson, of which the 1st and last verses are:

"Roll up the map of Europe'
The German Kaiser cried,
'For I'm the new Napoleon,
An' Britain's 'ands are tied.'
But another sort o' rollin' up
Is comin' into play—
'Roll up! Roll up!' says Kitchener,
An' we're rollin' up all day.

An' while we do our part 'ere,
We'll think with love an' pride
Of our comrades, now a-rallyin'
Across the oceans wide.
For East an' West an' farthest South
They hear K.'s call resound—
'Roll up! Roll up for Britain!'
An' they're rollin' up all round!"

ADDRESS WILL BE ILLUSTRATED

WEDDING BELLS

COLE—DAWSON.

"Pleasant View" farm, South Monaghan, the home of Mr. Peter Dawson, was the scene of a very pretty wedding yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock, when his daughter, Miss Mary Elizabeth, was united in marriage to Mr. Franklin Charles Cole, son of Mr. Edwin Cole of Hamilton Township. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. P. Wichett of Fraserville, in the drawing room, which was beautifully decorated with autumn leaves, palms, and carnations. The bride, who entered the room on the arm of her father, who gave her away took her place by the side of the groom, who stood before a bank of autumn leaves and flowers. The wedding march was played by Miss Mabel Symons, and the ceremony was witnessed by one hundred guests. The bride looked charming in a gown of white crepe-de-Chine with trimmings of lace and pearls. She wore a bridal veil of Brussels net and carried white roses and lilies of the valley. There were no attendants, save two little flower girls, Vena and Irene Dawson, nieces of the bride. They were prettily attired in pale blue silk and carried pink roses. The groom's gifts to the pianiste and flower girls were gold lockets and chains.

After the nuptial knot had been tied and hearty congratulations had been bestowed on the young couple, the guests sat down to an elaborate luncheon. Numerous and costly presents were received by the bride.

A photograph of the entire party was taken by Mr. F. L. Roy.

Mr. and Mrs. Cole left later in the evening for their new home, "Rosslyn Farm" in Hamilton Township, followed by the good wishes of a host of friends.

GRANTLAND RICE ON THE ULTIMATE WALLOP.

We met one man this week who hasn't recovered from the daze of the result even now. He says he probably never will be just the same. It seems that he had bet on the Mackmen to win, placing his bet with a rabid Brave campfollower who had wonderful faith in Stallings and Evers, and who was willing to hazard even money from the jump. After the first game the Brave backer was taken on another bet at 2 to 1 that Boston would win.

"But the worst jolt I got," says the Athletic backer, "was on Monday. We were watching the ticker together when, in the tenth inning, the Mackmen scored two runs. 'Well, that cinches one game,' I remarked. 'I'll bet you twenty-five even,' snapped the Boston fan, 'that the Braves will still win out this game.'

"Naturally," said the Philadelphia supporter, "I jumed at this, for the odds should have been about 1 to 40. And the loss of that extra twenty-five that I had already had as good as nailed down hurt me worse than all the others. After that I wouldn't bet $5 against $1,000 on Mack's club against Stallings', even for one game."

GERMANS FORCED BACK BY RUSSIAN ATTACK

Result of Present Battle at Warsaw May Decide Whether Germans Will Be Able to Reinforce Western Army or Have to Keep Forces in East.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 23. — The official communication issued by General Headquarters last night says:

"The rapid retreat of the Germans from Warsaw continues. The bombardment of the enemy's heavy artillery has caused no essential damage to the fortifications of Ivangorod or the bridges.

"In Galicia desperate engagements are still being fought. During the advance in the region between Przemysl and the Vistula we captured more than 30 officers, 2,000 soldiers and many rapid-fire guns. To the south of Przemysl the Russian operations are developing, also with success.

"The Russian troops displayed exceptional energy in coming to the defence of Warsaw and saving the city from a German bombardment. The Russian concentration was effected with greater swiftness than was called for by strategical reasons.

"The seventeenth German corps and some of their reserve troops who attempted to push forward in the region between Blonie and Prouschkoff, suffered severely. It was there that the Siberian troops, together with other Russian forces, inflicted terrible losses on the enemy. Many villages in the vicinity were taken and retaken in hand-to-hand fighting."

Retreated 18 Miles.

ROME, Oct. 23. — A despatch to The Corriere Heras yesterday, from Petrograd, states that the Austro-German forces have been compelled to retreat 18 miles to the westward. The battle has been renewed on the Vistula river with extreme violence.

The Germans have lost heavily in artillery and munitions of war in the entrance of Poland.

Watch the East, Says Belloc.

LONDON, Oct. 23. — Emphasizing the importance of the operations around Warsaw, Hilaire Belloc, the famous writer on military topics, says: "It is obvious the Russian plan must be a turning movement around the north of the enemy by way of Warsaw. They know this is largely a campaign of exhaustion. They know the enemy has rendered his own communications insecure by a false policy of cruelty toward the peasants. They know he has in his retirement but few roads or railways to depend upon—roads and railways which will be hopelessly clogged in any pressed retirement.

"The Germans have massed themselves, it is said, in not less than five army corps in front of Warsaw—a third of all they have upon the Vistula. It is probable that an appreciable result in Russian Poland will in a short time either release the Germans for the west or in the absence of such reinforcements compel the German line in the west to retire.

"That is why it is the business of all," says Hilaire Belloc, "to keep their eyes fixed upon this eastern field."

Cossack Captured General.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 23.—A startling story is told by an official from Lvoff, Lemberg. An Austrian general ordered a Cossack captured alive and brought to the Austrian camp to prove that he was no better swordsman than the Austrians. When the general handed him a sword the Cossack wielded it wildly, leaped upon the horse where the general was sitting and drove madly away. The Austrians feared to shoot lest they kill their own general, who is now in Russian captivity.

May Be Returned Unopposed.

OTTAWA, Oct. 23.—It is improbable that any opposition will be offered to the return of Hon. T. C. Casgrain and Hon. Pierre Blondon. Other bye-elections, in Westmoreland, Terrebonne and Jacques Cartier will be brought on shortly.

It is believed that the six vacancies in the Senate will be filled shortly. Five of these vacancies are in Ontario in succession to Senators McMillan, Ross, Coffey, Gibson and Cox, and one in British Columbia, through the retirement of Senator MacDonald.

Lines of Communication In Danger.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 23. — The sound of heavy artillery firing was heard yesterday morning at Sluys, a village in the extreme western tip of Zealand, about 20 miles north and a little west of Ghent. The firing apparently was taking place between Bruges and Ghent.

The conveyance of German wounded from Bruges to Ghent has suddenly ceased and it is believed that the German lines of communication between Ghent and Bruges are threatened by the advancing allies.

FINES INFLICTED.

C. P. R. Conductors and Others Plead Guilty to Lesser Charge.

TORONTO, Oct. 23—Following the inability of the sessions jury to arrive at a unanimous verdict in the case of Henry Coker, the C. P. R. conductor who was charged with having charged short fares and not handing the money to the company, the crown abandoned the charge of conspiracy against the railway officials yesterday and eight of them pleaded guilty to breaches of the Secret Commissions Act, and fines ranging from $50 to $200 were imposed by Judge Coatsworth.

Richard Reid was allowed to go on suspended sentence; Fred Lee was sentenced to two months in jail; Albert Cheeseman and Harry Yates were fined $50 or an alternative of one month in jail. When passing sentence of one month on P. McCart the judge declared, that this case was the worst, and he could not allow him to go by paying a fine. He imposed the minimum sentence, however.

Keep Your Lungs Strong

This advice is doubly important with the knowledge that every three minutes some one in the United States succumbs to consumption and many refuse to realize they are afflicted until it is too late.

It is after colds or sickness, from overwork, confining duties or when general weakness exists that tubercular germs thrive because the resistive powers of the body are weakened.

Only with fresh air, sunshine and abundant rich blood can one hope to arrest their progress, and the concentrated fats in Scott's Emulsion furnish fuel for rich blood, and its rare nourishment helps strengthen the lungs while it builds up the forces.

If you work indoors, tire easily, feel languid or run-down Scott's Emulsion is the most strengthening food-medicine known and is free from stupefying drugs. Avoid substitutes.

ATTACKS REPULSED.

Allies Held Their Own During Thursday's Heavy Fighting.

PARIS, Oct. 23. — With increased success at various points in the line and the evident fruition of the plans of the allies the official bulletins yesterday were more extensive.

The official communication issued by the French War Office last night reports a continuation of the great battle between the sea and La Bassee, in which the Belgians and the allies are holding their ground. Between Arras and the Oise the Germans have met with similar opposition. The text follows:

"The activity which the enemy displayed yesterday (Wednesday) did not slacken to-day. Between the sea and La Bassee the battle has continued with just as great violence, without the Germans being able to force back the Belgian army or the French and British troops.

"Similarly, between Arras and the Oise, the enemy has made determined efforts, which have at no point been crowned with success.

"In the Argonne district we have made progress between St. Hubert and Le Four de Paris.

"To the north of Verdun we have gained ground at Haumont and Brabant on the Meuse. In the Woevre region we have repulsed an attack on Champion."

The French War Office issued the following communique yesterday afternoon: "On our left wing German forces in considerable strength have continued their violent attacks, particularly in the vicinity of Dixmude, Warnitsky, Armentieres, Badingham and La Bassee, but the positions occupied by the allies have been maintained.

"On the rest of the front the enemy has delivered only partial attacks. These all have been repulsed, particularly at Fricourt, to the east of Albert, on the plateau to the west of Craonne; in the region of Souain, in the Argonne district; at Four de Paris, southwest of Varennes, in the region of Malancourt, in the Woevre district; in the direction of Champion, and at a point southeast of St. Mihiel, in the forest of Ailly.

"We have made slight progress in the Argonne district, and in the southern part of the Woevre, in the forest of Mortmare.

"The forward movement of the Russian forces has been positively announced. An important success in the region of Warsaw has driven back the enemy more than thirteen kilometres. The advance of the Russians at Ivangorod and to the south of Przemysl are equally perceptible."

There is nothing new on the situation around Verdun, Belfort and Metz.

TWO BANDITS DEAD.

Customs Officer Also Killed In Bank Hold-Up.

VANCOUVER, Oct. 23.—Two robbers dead, one dying and two yet at large, is the schedule of casualties on the side of the enemy in the battle between the Austrian bank bandits and the authorities near the international boundary at Blaine yesterday morning. Clifford Adams of New Westminster, a young customs officer, was the official killed.

The five bandits who held up the Sedro-Woolley Bank last Saturday night attempted to cross the boundary into Canada yesterday morning. The first fight with the boundary officials resulted in Adams' death, while one of the robbers was shot dead and another wounded. The latter was taken to Cloverdale yesterday afternoon. He was apparently disabled by the officers' shots, and then probably fired at by his fleeing companions, for he is suffering from a scalp wound dealt by a revolver held so close to his head that his hair was singed.

Just after noon yesterday another robber was wounded at Hall's Prairie. He drew his own revolver and shot himself while the officers raced forward to catch him.

At dark the posses were still out, but it looked as if the remaining two or three had escaped. The country is, however, well policed, not only by regular officers but by members of the Home Guard, formed since the starting of the war. These amateur warriors rendered quite valiant assistance yesterday.

Sir Robert Leaves for South.

OTTAWA, Oct. 23. — Sir Robert Borden leaves Ottawa to-day for the south on a three weeks' vacation. The Premier feels much in need of a rest. He has been working hard for a long time, and since the outbreak of the war he has been especially busy. He will probably spend a portion of his holiday at Virginia Hot Springs. Lady Borden will accompany him.

GAINS BY THE ALLIES

General Von Trip and His Staff Reported Killed by Bombardment From British Ships

THE LILLE FIGHTING

LONDON, Oct. 23.—From the Belgian coast to a point beyond St. Mihiel fighting was continuous yesterday. The result favors the allies in every instance, important advances being reported in the neighborhood of Lille. It is said that Roulers is again in the hands of the allies, but it is not known whether Franco-British or Belgian forces have effected the capture. On Tuesday the Belgian advance rested on this point, and it was claimed that a further penetration of King Albert's troops in that zone would seriously imperil the German forces between Roulers and the Channel coast. The town of Ypres was the centre of desperate fighting yesterday, heavy reinforcements from the south of France enabling the allies to strengthen their lines from Ypres to the edge of the Channel.

A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. from Flushing says: "Wednesday night and yesterday the Germans made a violent attack on the environs of Ostend, which was repulsed by an energetic counter-attack by the Belgians.

"Eleven British warships fired on the Germans yesterday morning. Gen. Von Trip and his staff, who were together in Leffinghe, near Middelkerke, were killed by the fire of the British naval guns."

The situation in western Flanders, where the latest German drive has met with a better organized resistance than any which faced the Kaiser's armies in the early days of the war, is befogged by many reports. It is stated that every town on the fighting line has been taken and retaken several times, and that the British warships are wrecking vengeance on the Kaiser's lines within reach of their powerful guns. From Ostend comes a report that the allies have succeeded in destroying the railroad between Bruges and Ghent. This is in no way confirmed, but, if it proves true, signifies that allied cavalry in force has cut into the heart of the German position in Belgium. A despatch to The Daily Mail says that Courtrai has been occupied by the allies. Courtrai is an exceedingly vital point, and its possession would give the Franco-British forces control of railway lines which would further isolate the Germans at Lille.

Dixmude is one of the towns which the Germans retook from the allies, only to be driven out a few hours later by a desperate bayonet charge. House-to-house fighting continued for some time, in which the losses on both sides were heavy.

The chief success of the allies as the result of Thursday's operations were perceptible gains around Lille. It is claimed that a wedge has been driven into the Germans at a point thirteen miles north of the town, and that a distance of two miles was gained on the east of Lille. This eastern advance is the first of any moment since the action around Lille assumed much importance, and has caused great jubilance among the allied commanders. The tactics at this point are directed toward isolation of the city, which is the critical point in the movement to double the German right wing back on its own lines of communication.

From Roye to Arras considerable fighting took place yesterday morning, but without special significance, further than a very successful artillery exchange near Roye, where the French 75-millimetre guns silenced several German batteries.

The flanking operations of the French to the east of St. Mihiel, held by the German crown prince's troops, was met yesterday by a stubborn counter-attack on the part of the Germans. This attack was repulsed several times, and the efforts of the French to secure control of all highways running to Metz is progressing very nicely. The armies of the republic are hammering steadily at Etain, and it would seem that the town cannot hold out much longer. The French have a secure foothold on the right bank of the Meuse, and are displaying the most brilliant spirit in pushing the advantage gained a few days since. It is declared that French tactics in this quarter have excited the admiration of their British allies in the highest degree.

West of Craonne and in the vicinity of Souain the Kaiser's commanders yesterday threw forward masses of fresh troops to test the French lines. They met with a stubborn resistance and failed to gain ground. The chief significance of this action is the apparent effort of the Germans to resume the offensive in that quarter.

Armentieres was again under fire yesterday, with both sides striving ineffectually to gain an advantage.

Will Bring Out Belgians.

KINGSTON, Ont., Oct. 23.—John Weir, of London, Eng., representing several charitable institutions in the old country, is here arranging to bring out a number of Belgian farmers and domestics to Kingston and district. At present these Belgians who have lost their homes are being cared for by these charitable institutions. Mr. Weir intends to go to Toronto to make arrangements for bringing Belgians there.

"DARKNESS AND DAWN"

By Geo. Allan England

For a while even thoughts of Beatrice were crowded back by the excitement of the arrival. In all, his wonderful experience never before had he sensed a feeling such as this.

To be returning, master and lord of a race of long-buried people, his own people, after all—to be acknowledged chieftain—to hold their destinies within his hand for good or evil—the magnitude of the situation, the tremendous difficulties and responsibilities, almost overwhelmed him.

He felt a need to rest, and think, and plan, to recuperate from the long journey and to recover poise and strength.

And with relief, as he raised his hand for silence, he perceived the wrinkled face of one Vreenya, head councillor of Mamrou, his predecessor.

Him he summoned to come close, and to him gave his orders. With some degree of fluency—for in the months Beatrice and he had spent in the Abyss they had acquired much of the Merucaan tongue—he said:

"I greet you, Vreenya. I greet my people, all. Hearken. I have made a long journey to return to you. I am tired and would rest. There be many things to tell you, but not now. I would sleep and eat. Is my house in readiness?"

"It is in readiness—the house of the Kromno. Your word is our law. It shall be as you have spoken."

"That is good. Now it is my will that this air-boat on which I ride should be carried close up to the walls and carefully covered with mantles, especially this part," and he gestured at the engines. "After that I rest."

"So it shall be," Vreenya made answer, while the Folk listened. "But, master, where is the woman? Where is the ancient man, J'hungaav, who sailed with you in the air-boat to those upper regions we know not of?"

"The woman is well. She awaits in a place we have prepared for you."

"It is well. And the ancient man?"

Stern though quickly. To confess the patriarch's death would certainly be fatal to the undertaking. These simple minds would judge from it that certain destruction must be the portion of any who should dare venture into those mysterious upper regions which to them were but a myth, a strange tradition—almost a terror.

And though the truth was dear to him, yet under stress of the greater good he uttered falsehood by implication.

"The ancient man awaits you, too. He is resting in the far places. He would desire you to come to him."

"He is at peace? He found the upper world good?"

"He found it good, Vreenya. And he is at peace."

"It is well. Now the commands of Tai Kromno shall be done. His house is ready!"

While Stern clambered out of the machine and stretched his half-paralyzed limbs, the news ran, a murmur of many voices, through the massed Folk. Stern's heart swelled with pride at the success so far of his mission. If all should go as well from now on, his mighty object could and would be accomplished. But if not—

He shuddered slightly despite himself, for to his mind arose the ever-present possibility of the Folk's custom of trial by combat—the chance that some rebellious one might challenge him—that the outcome might another time turn against him.

He remembered still the scream of Kamrou as the deposed chieftain had plunged into the boiling pool. What if this fate should some time yet be his? And once more thoughts of Beatrice obtruded; and, despite himself, he felt the clutch of terror at his heart.

He put it resolutely away, however, for he realized that all depended now on maintaining good courage and a bold, commanding air. The slightest weakness might at any time prove fatal.

He understood enough of the barbaric psychology to know the value of dominance. And, with a command to Vreenya: "Make way for me, your master!" he advanced through the lane which the crowding Folk made for him.

As, followed by the councillor and the elders, he climbed the slippery causeway and passed through the labyrinthine passes of the great gate, strange emotions stirred him.

The scene was still the same as when he first had witnessed it. Still flared the torches in the hands of the populace and along the walls, where, perched on the very ledge of the one-time battle with the Lanskaarn, the strange water-fowl still blinked their ghostly eyes.

No change was to be witnessed in the enclosure, the huts, the wide plaza, stretching away to the cliff, to the fire-pit, and the Dungeon of Skeletons. But still how different was it all!

Only too clearly he remembered the first time he and Beatrice had been thrust into this weird community, bound and captive; with only too vivid distinctness he recalled the frightful indignities, perils, and the hardships inflicted on them.

The absence of the kindly patriarch saddened him; and, too, the fact that now no Beatrice was with him there.

Slowly, wearily, he moved along the slippery rock-floor toward his waiting house, unutterably lonesome even in this pushing throng that now acclaimed him, yet thanking God that the girl, at least, was far from the buried town of such hard ways and latent perils.

At the door of the round, conical stone hut that had been Kamrou's, and now was his—so long as he could hold the chieftainship by sheer force of will and power—he paused a moment and faced the eager throng.

"Peace to you, my people!" he exclaimed, once more raising his hand on high. "Soon I shall tell you many wonders and things strange to hear—many things of great import and good tidings.

"When I have slept I shall speak with you. Now I go to rest. Await me, for the day of your deliverance is at hand!"

A face caught his attention, a sinister and brutal face, doubly ominous in the flaring cresset-glare. He knew the man—H'yemba, the cunning ironsmith, one who in other days had before now crossed his will and, dog-like, snarled as much as he had dared. Now a peculiarly malevolent expression lay upon the evil countenance. The dead-white skin wrinkled evilly, the pink eyes gleamed with disconcerting malice.

But Stern, dead tired, only glanced at H'yemba for a second, then with Vreenya entered the hut and bade the door be closed.

All dressed as he was, he flung himself upon the rude bed of seaweed covered with the coarse brown stuff woven by the Folk.

"Sleep, master," Vreenya said. "I will sit here and watch. But before you sleep loosen the terrible fire-bow that shoots the bolts of lead and lay it near at hand."

"You mean—there may be trouble here?"

"Sleep!" was all the councillor would answer. "When you have rested there will be many things to ask and tell."

Spent beyond the power of any further effort, Stern laid his automatic handy and disposed himself to rest.

As his weary eyelids closed and the first outposts of consciousness began to fall before the attacking power of slumber, his thoughts, his love, his enduring passion, reverted to the girl, the wife, now so infinitely far away in the cavern beside the brawling canyon-stream. Yearning and tenderness unspeakable flooded his soul.

But once or twice her face faded from his mental vision and in its stead he seemed to see again the surly stare, the evil eyes, and venomously sinister expression of H'yemba, the resourceful man of fire and of steel.

CHAPTER XII.

CHALLENGED!

After many hours of profound and dreamless sleep, Allan awoke filled with fresh vigour for the tasks that lay ahead. His splendid vitality, quickly recuperating, calmed his mind; and now the problems, the anxieties and fears of the day before—to call it such, though there was neither night nor day in this strange place—seemed negligible.

Only a certain haunting uneasiness about the girl still clung to him. But, sending her many a thought of love, he reflected that soon he should be back again with her; and so, resolutely grasping the labour that now awaited him, he felt fresh confidence and hope.

After a breakfast of the familiar sea-weeds, bulbs, fish and eggs, he bade Vreenya (who seemed devotion incarnate) summon the Folk for a great charweg, or tribal council, at the Place of Skeletons.

Here they gathered, men, women, and children, all of fifteen hundred, in close-packed, silent masses, leaving only the inner circle under the stone posts and iron rods clear for Allan and for Vreenya and some half-dozen elders.

The rocky plaza-floor sloping upward somewhat from the dungeon, formed a very shallow natural amphitheatre, so that the majority could see as well as hear.

No platform was there for their Kromno to speak from. He had not even a block of stone. In the true native style he was expected to address them on their own level, pacing back and forth the while.

In his early days among them he had seen one or two such gatherings. His quick wit prompted a close imitation of their ceremonies and ancient customs.

First, Vreenya sprinkled the open space between the poles and the dungeon with a kind of sea-weed swab dipped in the waters of the boiling vat, then with a bit of the coarse brown cloth washed Allan's lips—a pledge of truth.

The councillor raised both hands toward the roaring flame back there by the cliff, and all inclined themselves thereto, the only trace of any religious ceremony still remaining among them.

Allan likewise saluted the flame; then he faced the multitude.

"O my people," he began, striving to speak clearly above the noise of the fire-jet, his voice sounding dull and heavy in that compressed atmosphere, "O Folk of the Merucaans, I greet you! There be many things to tell taht you must know and believe. I have come back to you with great peril in my flying-boat to tell you of the upper world and all its goodness.

"Easily could I have stayed in those places of light and plenty, but my heart was warm for my people. I thought of my people night and day. The woman Beatrice thought of you. The ancient man thought of you. Alone, we could not enjoy those happy places. So I returned to tell you and to show you the way to liberty. Thus have we proved our love for you, my folk!"

HERO OF BYGONE WAR

RIFLEMAN HARRIS' STORY ONE OF CLASSICS OF HISTORY.

Soldier Who Served Through the Peninsular Campaign Has Recorded the Terrible Experiences of Moore's Retreat in a Remarkable Book—He Also Served With the 95th In Denmark.

Literature, indeed, contains no adequate picture of a great battle as seen through the eyes of a private of the ranks. But at any rate there is one book, long since out of print, which gives some real idea of what war means to the private soldier, his emotions and impressions when the cannons roar, his feelings and fears when he charges at the point of the bayonet.

The book was not a literary gem, but it contained some graphic descriptions of the pluck and gallantry of the British soldiers who stormed Badajos, fought at Salamanca, and saw Sir John Moore die after his famous retreat on Corunna. It was called, "Recollections of Rifleman Harris of the Old 95th," and as a picture of the private in the Peninsula, with his hardihood, "his splendid fighting gifts, his hatred of retreats, his childlike trust in his officers, Rifleman Harris' recollections are of much greater value than whole volumes of starched and erudite histories," says Rev. W. H. Fitchett in "Fights for the Flag."

Harris was a Dorset man, and six months after joining the 95th Rifles the regiment sailed with an expedition to Denmark. The troops, some 30,000 strong, were landed at Scarlet Island, near Copenhagen, and as the men leaped from the boats ashore their warlike temper broke out. "The whole force," says Harris, "set up one simultaneous and tremendous cheer, a sound I cannot describe, it seemed so overwhelming." Harris heard afterwards on many battlefields that deep, stern, menacing wave of sound, the shout of the British soldier in the presence of the enemy.

But what a splendid tribute to the bravery of the British soldier is contained in Harris' account of the fight at Vimiera. The French came on in a solid mass, the British guns playing on them, and, says Harris, "I saw regular lanes torn through their ranks as they advanced, which were immediately filled up again as they marched steadily on. Whenever we saw a round shot thus go through the mass," he adds, with a visible chuckle, "we raised a shout of delight." From the enemy Harris looked round upon his comrades. He says:—

"As I looked about me, whilst standing enranked, and just before the commencement of the battle, I thought it the most imposing sight the world could produce. Our lines glittering with bright arms, the stern features of the men as they stood with their eyes fixed unalterably upon the enemy, the proud colors of England floating over the heads of the different battalions, and the dark cannon on the rising ground, and all in readiness to commence the awful work of death, with the noise that would deafen the whole multitude."

It was in this battle that Harris saw the charge of the 50th, of which Napier was major. "They dashed upon the enemy like a torrent breaking bounds, and the French, unable even to bear the sight of them, turned and fled. Me thinks at this moment I can hear the cheer of the British soldiers in the charge, and the clatter of th Frenchmen's accoutrements as they turned in an instant and went off, hard as they could run for it. The Grenadiers—the 70th, I think—our men seemed to know well. They were all fine-looking men, wearing red shoulder-knots and tremendous-looking moustaches. As they came swarming upon us they rained a perfect shower of balls, which we returned quite as sharply. Whenever one of them was knocked over, our men called out, 'There goes another of Boney's invincible'."

The sternest experience of war, however, which Harris had, occurred when the 95th were caught in the backward rush of Sir John Moore's retreat on Corunna. Gen. Craufurd was in command of the brigade, and for four days the force marched at a terrific rate, the men being in total ignorance of their goal. "Where are you taking us to?" a rifleman asked his officer. "To England," was the answer, "if we can get there." The soldiers then learned for the first time the real reason of their terrific marches, and, says Harirs, "the men began to murmur at not being permitted to turn and stand at bay, cursing the French, and swearing they would rather die ten thousand deaths with their rifles in their hands in opposition than endure the present toil."

At last, from the head of the long straggling column came a faint shout. From the top of the hill the sea was visible, and the tall masts of many transports. "Harris," said a rifleman notorious for his foulness of language, "if it pleases God to let me reach those ships, I swear never to utter a bad or discontented word again," and the tears ran down his haggard cheeks as he spoke.

Harris was the very last man who embarked at Vigo. He crawled on to the beach just as the last boat was pushing off, almost totally blind with mere fatigue. The boat put back for him, and he lived to reach Spithead, where, he says, "our poor bare feet once more touched English ground."

ENGLAND'S LAST HOPE.

British Boy Scouts Doing Real Soldiers' Work.

The Boy Scout is now proving the worth of his training in England Chief Scout General Sir Robt. Baden Powell, the organizer of the Boy Scout movement, recently issued the order that puts the Boy Scouts of England on a war basis.

Britain's army is not a large one Before the war it included less than 200,000 men. These soldiers were scattered over the islands, doing guard duty and occupying themselves in the maintenance of order in the various parts of the country Those troops have been sent for the most part across the channel. The work they did on the islands has been neglected. Moreover, their departure left no trained body of men for the additional work of guarding bridges covering telegraph and telephone lines, acting as guides, waving the signals, carrying despatches, collecting information as to supplies, picking up and forwarding messages dropped by air craft, assisting post guards and distributing martial notices to inhabitants. But the Boy Scouts, by their training, were fitted to do all these things, as well as the soldiers themselves, if not better This contingency had already been foreseen by Baden-Powell and his associates; accordingly, as soon as the situation became pressing, the order probably prepared months in advance, was issued, and the Boy Scouts from an organization of pic-nickers became an active part of the military service of the Government.

The response to Chief Baden-Powell's appeal for the Boy Scouts to "come and do something for your country" was instantaneous. As fast as properly equipped troops came to the fore, they were assigned to the various lines of work mentioned above as close to their own homes as was practicable. No complaint has been received to date against any Boy Scout, nor has any indication been given that they are incapable of performing the multifarious duties assigned to them.

One Bullet In 3,000 Fatal.

An army officer is authority for saying that during a battle only one bullet out of every 3,000 fired kills an enemy.

Two armies each of 50,000 men might go into action with 100 rounds of ammunition. These armies could discharge at each other 10,000,000 bullets.

If only one shot in 1,000 took effect 5,000 men on each side would be killed or wounded. That would be an awful casualty. But, as the army officer says, the artillery fire is more destructive than rifle fire.

SHEET OF FLAME STREAM OF LEAD

How the Germans Were Deceived, Then Given a Volley and Welcomed With Cold Steel

Here is a striking glimpse of war from the trenches in a soldier's letter home:

In a few minutes we were all at our posts without the slightest confusion, and as we lay down in the trenches our artillery opened on the beggars in fine style.

It was a fine sight to see the shells speeding through the air on their way to pay our respects to Kaiser Bill and his men.

Soon they returned the compliment, but they were a long time about finding anything approaching the range, and they didn't know of our shelters.

After about half an hour of this work their infantry came into view along our front. They were in solid square blocks standing out sharply against the skyline, and you couldn't help hitting them. It was like butting your head against a stone wall.

We lay in our trenches with not a sound or sign to tell them of what was before them. They crept nearer and nearer, and then our officers gave the word. A sheet of flame flickered along the line of trenches and a stream of bullets tore through the advancing mass of Germans.

They seemed to stagger like a drunken man suddenly hit between the eyes, after which they made a run for us, shouting some outlandish cry that we couldn't make out.

Half-way across the open another volley tore through their ranks, and by this time our artillery began dropping shells around them. Then an officer gave an order, and they broke into open formation, rushing like mad towards the trenches on our left.

Some of our men continued the volley firing, but a few of the crack shots were told off to indulge in independent firing for the benefit of the Germans, who did not like it at all. They fell back in confusion, and then lay down wherever cover was available.

We gave them no rest, and soon they were on the move again in flight. Then came more furious shelling of our trenches, and after that another mad rush across the open on our front.

This time they were strongly supported by cavalry, who suffered terribly, but came right up to our lines. We received them in the good old way—the front ranks with the bayonet and the rear ranks keeping up incessant fire on them.

After a hard tussle they retired hastily, and just as they thought themselves safe our mounted men swooped down on them, cutting them right and left. This sort of thing went on through the whole day without bringing the Germans any nearer to shifting us.

BISMARK NO PROPHET

In an interview granted to Beatty Kingston on September 23, 1867, on condition that nothing be said should be published during his lifetime, Bismarck proved himself very poor at prophecy. "Russia will never join France against us," he declared. "On that be assured—it is impossible (Bismarck said this with great emphasis, leaning on both arms half across the table towards me and looking into my eyes with the greatest earnestness.) It is true there has been some talk of an understanding upon the Oriental question. Gortschakoff is a funny fellow—he has been taken in six or seven times by French humbug and protestations of an entente cordiale which always lasts from three to five weeks. Then he finds he has been taken in, and begins to curse and swear by all the devils and saints in the Russian calendar."

The Austrian "Bauer"

The most interesting of Austrian types, and the backbone of the Dual Monarchy, is the "bauer." In social rank he occupies somewhat the same position as the old English yeoman, farming his own land, and in many cases enjoying a far more substantial fortune than the nobility. The "bauer" has a strict social code of his own, mixing neither with the laborers on one hand nor the aristocracy on the other, is apparently quite content with his lot, and takes pride in his ability to provide all the necessaries of life from the productions of his own land, even, in many cases, growing the flax from which his womenfolk weave all the household clothing.

The Kaiser's Luxurious Train

The headquarters of the German war staff, with the Kaiser at its head, is a specially-constructed train, kept on a certain open line. This train contains dining-saloon, council-saloon, and sleeping-saloons. The train carries expert telegraphists, and is preceded and followed by an armored train. The war train was specially built some years ago for such a purpose, and attached are well-fitted boxes for the Kaiser's chargers and his motor car, spare parts, etc. The whole thing is fitted up as the last word in luxury.

Might Have Been Written To-day

"It were better to fall into the hands of miscreants, of heathen and Saracens, than into that of Germans. . . . In many things Germans are people outside the rule of reason, and it is a wonder why any will have to do with them or suffer them to take arms beside them, like Frenchmen and Englishmen, who do courtesy, even as they have ever done." So wrote the Belgian Froissart in his chronicles about 550 years ago.

Great economy of power is claimed for a system of canal towage that is being experimented with in Germany in which the tow boat is supplied with electricity through trolley wheels that run on a submerged rail.

About 12 miles of experimental highways have been built near Washington, D.C., for government experts to enable them to determine what methods of construction and materials are best under various conditions.

THE BURDENS OF AGE

The kidneys seem to be about the first organs to wear out and fail to properly perform their work. The result is weak, lame, aching back, rheumatic pains and failing eyesight. Many people of advanced years have recovered health and comfort by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They ensure the healthful action of liver, kidneys and bowels.

THE VICTROLA AND THE FAMILY—No. 2

has many hours of leisure now. "The most pleasant of these," she says, "are those I spend in knitting while the Victrola sings for me, the old, old songs I used to love.

"There's 'Love'e Old Sweet Song,' 'Silver Threads Among the Gold,' and 'Sweet Genevieve,' sung by such splendid singers as Clarence Whitehill, Richard José and John McCormack. Those are my favorites, but there are so very many other splendid pieces all by such wonderful artists that it is a constant source of wonder and pleasure to me. The best of it is, the rest of the family are just as fond of it as I am. The Victrola surely has brought sunshine into our lives."

Many Visitors Motored To Countries of The Allied Nations

Affair Under Auspices of the Charlotte Street Church Ladies' Aid Was Splendid Success.

VISIT STILL POSSIBLE

Many were the guests of the Charlotte Street Ladies' Aid Society, last night, who took a trip to the countries of the Allied nations. Much time and pains had been expended in preparing the various "countries," and as a result everything except the warlike atmosphere of the various of the countries visited last night and ed in a manner that surprised everyone who made the trip. It is significant that the United States was one of the countries visited last night, and the spirit shown in President Wilsons republic was so absolutely sympathetic with the cause of the Allies that all were convinced that the Americans are with us in sentiment in the present war.

"Canada" was at the home of Mrs. S. Clegg, Stewart street. Here a patriotic atmosphere had been effected by numerous large flags, beautifully draped. Snow shoes, Canadian fruit, and Canadian flags were much in evidence and were very prettily arranged. The chandeliers were decked with wreaths of maple leaves. The costumes of the ladies were of white with appropriate trimmings. Stirring patriotic airs, including "The Maple Leaf" and "Rule Britannia" were played. The outside decorations were quite as pleasing and effective as the comprehensive interior scheme, large flags being draped in a picturesque manner.

"The British Isles" were at Mrs. Lane's, Rubidge Street, where Chief Howard in officer's uniform, was the first to receive the visitors. Mrs. Lane and Mrs. Campbell represented England; Mrs. Howard, Scotland; and Mrs. Jamieson, Ireland. Scotch Irish and English flags and costumes made a very delightful impression inside and the Rose, Thistle and Shamrock, symbolizing the three countries, were prominent. From the piano drifted Scotch, Irish and English airs.

Mrs. (Dr.) Morrison's house had been transformed into a small section of Japan. A Japanese inscription on a banner hung over the entrance and the visitors were received in truly Japenese fashion. Japanese curios, flags and umbrellas, as well as splendid designs of red and white streamers completed the transformation, and Oriental music added a realistic touch. Outside Japanese lanterns were hung—a very pretty spectacle indeed.

The Czar's vast empire was represented by Mrs. Parker's residence, 394 Park Street. A Russian appearing attendant was stationed at the door, and inside everything spelled "Russia." Flags of the allied countries, with a large Russian emblem predominating, had been arranged most effectively, and attractive Russian costumes were worn by the ladies and young ladies in charge of that particular section of the northern kingdom. Guests were served with Russian tea and Russian bread from Russian tea urns in Russian fashion, by young adies in Russian costumes. They were allowed to inspect Russian fancy work, including a good-sized tablecloth, which was hand made, from the flax field to the dining room. Russian curios were also in evidence and if all at once the group of persons present had dropped into a conversation in the Russian language it would hardly have seemed unusual.

France, the battleground of 1914, was at Mrs. Lyle's home, 317 Park Street. French flags and emblems were very attractively arranged, both inside and outside of the house, and a French atmosphere was created by innumerable ingenious devices. Grape wine, of a non-intoxicating variety was served with the refreshments, and Mrs. Lyle and her assistants are to be congratulated on the splendid decorations.

The home of Mrs. Walsh, Margaret Avenue, represented Belgium. Beautiful schemes of decoration, very well worked out, made the interior of the residence a picture. Belgium curios, including a model of a Belgium home, which was one hundred years old, were on exhibition, and are well worth seeing. Belgium refreshments were served and the guests enjoyed their visit to Belgium in every way.

Returning, the United States of America was visited. The exterior of the United States was represented by American flags and red, white and blue lights. Inside the geniality of our neighbours to the south was amply illustrated, and the home was very prettily decorated. The United States does not differ from Canada as much as other countries, but in one thing was the traditions of the great Republic upheld. That was in the exceedingly delicious refreshments, which left a pleasant memory of the visit to the United States. The Statute of Liberty was, of course, in that country, and reminded Canadian visitors of the hundred years of peace between the two countries. The United States was represented at the home of Mrs. A. F. Bookout, Maitland Avenue.

PARIS HAS COAL ENOUGH TO LAST UNTIL DECEMBER

PARIS, Oct. 17.—(Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—France has not experienced as yet any considerable rise in the price of commodities owing to the war, but there is now some anxiety with regard to two important articles, coal and sugar.

Greater Paris normally consumes 1,000,000 tons of coal a month in the winter. It is estimated that the present stock will last to the middle of December and no longer. Some of the largest coal fields in Europe are wholly or partially closed. Nothing can get from Germany or Belgium, and very little from the Black Country and the Franco-Belgian frontier.

England, in fact, is the only hope, and of the English sources of supply, Northumberland, Durham and Yorkshire are limited, if not cut off, by the insecurity of navifation in the North Sea.

South Wales remains, and it is Cardiff coal that is usually most in demand in France. But it is said that shippers have cut the freight rates from Cardiff to Rouen, whence coal is brought by lighters on the Seine to Paris, from 5 shillings 2 pence to 2 shillings 4 pence a ton, and that the cost of river carriage has been increased 40 to 50 per cent. without any good reason, since the military authorities offed to provide the necessary port labour. It has been suggested that the Belgian refugees should be employed, and the Government is being pressed to suppress all speculation in coal or unfair charges. Any rise in coal prices would certainly inflict a penalty upon the poor, especially in this city.

Sugar, which cost 75 centimes a kilo a month ago, now costs a franc. Many sugar factories of the North closed, and some, especially in the Santerre region, are destroyed.

At the beginning of the war the corn duties of 7 francs on 100 kilos were abolished in order to keep prices from rising, but if sugar is not quite as essential as bread, it may be generally classed as a necessary of life, and it is now urged that the rise in sugar prices should be met in the same way. The import duty on sugar is 6 francs on 10 kilos.

NERVOUS DYSPEPSIA, GAS OR INDIGESTION

"Pape's Diapepsin" settles sour, upset stomachs in five minutes.

Time it! Pape's Diapepsin will digest anything you eat and overcome a sour, gassy or out-of-order stomach surely within five minutes.

If your meals don't fit comfortably, or what you eat lies like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of indigestion.

Get from your pharmacist a fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a dose just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, nausea, debilitating headaches, dizziness or intestinal griping. This will all go, and, besides, there will be no sour food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odours.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is waiting for you at any drug store.

These large fifty cent cases contain enough "Pape's Diapepsin" to keep the entire family free from stomach disorders and indigestion for many months. It belongs in your home.

1,000,000 GERMANS TO FRONT.

Since Middle of September Exportation of Stores Prohibited.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company from Petrograd says it is semi-officially stated that the number of German troops sent forward to the eastern and western theatres of the war since the middle of September is 1,000,000.

The despatch also states that the export of any stores from Germany is prohibited, and that this may seriously affect Switzerland, which heretofore has received potatoes from Germany.

HALF A BILLION OF WATER IN STEEL CAPITAL, HE SAYS

Jacob M. Dickinson, in Charge of Government's Action to Dissolve Great Corporation, Tells of Its Formation, Its Alleged Price Agreements and Suppression of Competition.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 21—Jacob M. Dickinson, formerly Secretary of War, took up the entire day in presenting the prosecution in the action of the Federal Government to break up the United States Steel Corporation by separating into independent units all of its subsidiaries.

Mr. Dickinson has been in charge of the government's case since it was instituted in October 1911, and his argument to-day before four judges sitting at the United States Court for the District of New Jersey it will continue to-morrow. Arguments of counsel for each side will take up the entire week.

Mr. Dickinson told how the five great industrial and financial interests, headed by the late J. P. Morgan, Andrew Carnegie, W. W. and J. H. Moore John W. Gates and John D. Rockefeller, came together and formed the steel corporation in 1901. He went into intricate detail to show how the steel corporation's capital of more than $1,400,000,000 was made up, and he charged that more than $500,000,000 of this is water.

Tells of Gary Dinners.

Continuing, he told how the steel corporation and its subsidiaries kept up prices, and he charged that the men at the head of the big combination in every way possible restrained trad and crushed out competitors. Mr. Dickenson said that at the famous Gary dinners about ninety per cent. of the iron and steel manufacturers of the United States would come together and that a general understanding would be reached to maintain prices.

The purchase by the steel corporation of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company during the money panic of 1907, in which ex-President Roosevelt figured, was not through any patriotic motives to prevent the panic from spreading, but to get control of the company. Mr. Dickinson made no reference to Mr. Roosevelt, but in the brief filed by the Government it was set out that the representative of the steel corporations who went to Washington to consult with Mr. Roosevelt over the propriety of purchasing the Tennessee stock from the New York brokers had deceived the President about the amount of stock held by the New York firm.

Mr. Dickinson read letters and minutes of corporation meetings, among the former one by Andrew Carnegie, at Skibo Castle, Scotland, in 1899. It appears that Mr. Carnegie's company and the Illinois Steel and other concerns were in a steel rail pool. Mr. Carnegie wrote to his company stating that the Illinois Company was 90,000 tons ahead of its proportion of the steel rail business and that it was bad policy to allow the Carnegie Company's proportion of orders to fall below that of others "If you can fill next year at present prices, you have at least forty millions profit—but it may be risky. To want more than that seems wicked."

If Mr. Carnegie were Tsar.

At another time when competition was brisk, before the days of the steel corporation, Mr. Carnegie wrote to his partners: "If I were Tsar I would make no dividends upon common stock, save all surplus and spend it for a hoop and cotton tie mill, for wire and nail mills, for tube mills, for lines of boats upon the lakes for our manufactured articles, and to bring back scrap."

Richard V. Lindabury, of Newark, N., will open the argument for the Steel Corporation.

The brief filed by the United States Steel Corporation declares that what competition exists among the companies acquired by the big corporation was greatly limited. It is declared that the Steel Corporation's proportion of the country's total production of finished products in 1901 was only 50.1 per cent.; that it has since been reduced to 45.7 per cent of the country's production for all the markets of the world and to 40.9 per cent of the total production for the domestic market.

In denying that the Steel Corporation suppressed competition, the brief states that the organization of the Company was but a natural and normal development from existing trade and manufacturing conditions.

To Put On Flesh And Increase Weight

A Physician's Advice

Most thin people eat from four to six pounds of good solid fat-making food every day and still do not increase in weight one ounce, while on the other hand many of the plump, chunky folks eat very lightly and keep gaining all the time. It's all bosh to say that this is the nature of he individual. I isn't Nature's way at all.

Thin folks stay thin because their powers of assimilation are defective. They just absorb enough of the food they eat to maintain life and a semblance of health and strength. Stuffing won't help them. A dozen meals a day won't make them gain a single "stay there" pound. All the fat-producing elements of their food just stay in the intestines until they pass from he body as waste. What such people need is something that will prepare these fatty food elements so that their blood can absorb them and deposit them all about the body—something, too, that will multiply heir red blood corpuscles and increase heir blood's carrying power.

For such a condition I always recommend eating a Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is not, as some believe, a patented drug, but is a scientific combination of six of the most effective and powerful flesh-building elements known to chemistry. It is absolutely harmless, yet wonderfully effective and a single tablet eaten with each meal often has the effect of increasing the weight of a thin man or woman from three to five pounds a week. Sargol is sold by good druggists everywhere on a positive guarantee of weight increase or money back.

Jesus and Judas. Matt. xxvi:14-25, 47-50; xxvii: 3-10.

1. Verses 14-16—What was the probable reason for Judas being made the treasurer for Christ and his apostles?

2. What reason, if any, is there to believe that the handling of money, and the knowledge of its vast power tend to the undue love of money?

3. Did Judas hate, or despise, or believe in Jesus, or how do you think he felt toward him?

4. What was the real reason for Judas betraying Jesus?

5. Did Judas expect that his betrayal of Jesus would lead to his crucifixion, or that he would escape his enemies as in the past? Give your reasons.

6. What proportion of church members to-day betray Jesus for money, and what method do they take to do it?

7. Verses 17-19—What was this feast of unleavened bread, and the passover, which Jesus and his disciples kept together?

8. Why do not Christians keep the passover feast to-day?

9. What are the events which Christians celebrate to-day, and what benefit comes from their observance?

10. Verses 20-22—Did Jesus know through human or divine knowledge that Judas was going to betray him?

11. Did any one of the other disciples, besides Judas, have any fear that he was going to betray his master?

12. If human events are contingent, and not necessary, how can God know in advance what any given man will do?

13. If men are "exceedingly sorry" in advance at the remotest liability of sin, will that tend to prevent them from committing it? Why?

14. Verses 23-25—What is the 'woe' when Judas, or any other man, betrays Christ for money?

15. Did Judas know, or not, at this time that he was going to betray Jesus? Why?

16. If, as some think, Judas was pre-destinated to betray Jesus, where is the justice of God in punishing a man for what he could not help?

17. Verse 7—The chief priests seem to have organized a small army to arrest Jesus, why did they do this?

18. Jesus could have successfully prevented his arrest, and have slain every one of his enemies; why did he not do so?

19. Verses 48-50—Which would have been the least base, for Judas to have betrayed Jesus with a bow or a kiss?

20. Chapter xxvii: 3-10—Why was it a surprise to Judas that Jesus was condemned?

21. Why did Judas now detest himself, and repent for having betrayed his master?

22. What is the usual final effect of money received through the injury of another?

Lesson for Sunday, Nov. 1, 1914. The Arrest and Trial of Jesus. Matt. xxvi: 47-68.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's treatment, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even colour, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadys, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive; besides, prevents dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair.

DOUBLE MISTAKE

"Mr. Popenjoy!" announced a maid to Miss Angela Rivers, who was standing before a mirror in her dressing room.

"Tell him I'll be down directly."

The visit was not unexpected. Miss River's mother, a widow, had some time before written her daughter that she had decided to marry again; that her fiance was not by any means an old man, but full of life and spirits. He would be useful to them both. His name was Robert Popenjoy, and he was quite well off. The mother, who was not given to long letters, deemed this quite an efficient explanation for the present and closed by saying that Mr. Popenjoy would be in the city where they lived and would call that very day to make the daughter's acquaintance.

When her toilet had been satisfactorily arranged Miss Rivers went down stairs to meet her future stepfather. She was surprised to see a man about 30 years old and with all the airs and graces of a man of the world. Her mother was only 40, but Angela never dreamed that she would marry a man 10 years younger than herself. However, good breeding required that she show neither surprise nor disappointment. She advanced, extending her hand graciously.

"Mamma wrote me that you would call to-day."

"Indeed. I expected to call soon, but I was not aware that there was any especial appointment as to the date."

"Have you been in the city long"

"Oh, yes. I live here."

Miss Rivers was surprised at this. She supposed that her mother had met her second fate in the city where she was visiting. The young lady would have liked to ask how long he had lived in the city of her home, and why she had not met him in society, but this would have been to imply that he was not of the select social circle to which the Rivers' belonged.

"I've been living here only a month," he said. "I came here to go into business."

"In so short a time you could not have made many acquaintances. I shall have the pleasure of introducing you to some of my friends."

"Thank you very much."

"Of course, considering the relationship, we shall have a great deal of freedom in going about together. We won't need a chaperon."

"Not at all."

"Only I wouldn't like mother to be jealous." This was said archly and with a smile.

"I'm more afraid of father as to that."

"Father?"

"Yes, father," looking at her with surprise.

"How old is your father?"

"How old is my father? Haven't you been told how old he is? Why he's 55."

"I confess I haven't heard anything about him."

"That's singular. I should have thought she would have told you everything."

"I haven't seen him."

The young man looked at her with opening eyes.

"What kind of a match do you call this, anyway?" he asked presently.

"I think it is a very good match. So long as mamma is pleased I am."

"Oh, your mother's consent was necessary. Of course it was. How stupid of me!"

At this moment there was a ring at the doorbell. The maid answered the summons and preceded a visitor into the drawing room, at the same time bearing a card on a salver. Miss Rivers took it up and looked at it wonderingly. On it was the name "Mr. Roger Popenjoy." While she was still staring at it an elderly gentleman entered.

"Morning, father," remarked the Mr. Popenjoy, who had been announced earlier.

"Morning, my boy. Happy to find you here. Present me to—"

"Your fiancee! How can that be necessary?"

Miss Rivers looked on and listened with amazement. The last comer advanced toward her with outstretched hand and said cheerily:

"Your mother wrote you, I believe, that I would call."

Miss Rivers looked from one to the other of the two gentlemen for some moments before replying.

"Mamma wrote me that her fiance, Mr. Popenjoy, would call, but she did not say that there were two fiances. Can it be that mamma has forgotten she is no longer of an age to engage herself to two men at the same time?"

"Dad," cried the younger man, didn't you write me to call on your fiancee, Miss Rivers?"

"I asked you to call on my fiancee, Mrs. Rivers."

"I see!" exclaimed Angela to the elder Popenjoy. "You are to be my stepfather. I wondered if mamma had lost her senses to engage herself to such a—"

"Fool!" supplied the younger man.

"Not at all—one so much younger than herself."

"All's well that ends well," said Mr. Popenjoy, sr. "You can go about with Miss Rivers very nicely — no chaperon needed, no—"

The two young people burst into a laugh.

Exhausted Nerves Were Fully Restored by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

When the nerve force expended in the day's work and in the act of living is not replenished by restful sleep at night you have cause to be alarmed, as physical bankruptcy stares you in the face. This letter directs you to the most satisfactory cure for sleeplessness.

Mr. Dennis Mackin, Maxton, Sask., writes:—"I have just finished using the sixth box of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and I must say that when I commenced using it my nerves were so bad that I could scarcely get any sleep. I would lie in bed nearly all night without sleep, and anyone who has this trouble knows the misery of sleepless nights. The Nerve Food helped me from the start, and has built up my nervous system wonderfully. I now enjoy good, sound sleep, and instead of feeling tired in the morning I am strong and healthy, and well fitted for my daily work."

AS ENGLISH EYES SEE GERMAN NAVY

Steeped in Theory, the Kaiser's Sailors Are Mere Cogs in a Machine Like His Soldiers

The German naval officer is more like a soldier than a seaman, says a writer in the London Post. He is, of course, entirely devoted to his business. He works tremendously hard and he is never tired. His attention to detail amounts to a passion. He is physically very strong; and if the habit of the sea can be acquired by the most sedulous and indefatigable attention he will acquire it. But to the English observer (who may, of course, be prejudiced) the German naval officer seems to accomplish by a strenuous effort what is done by the English naval officer as it were by nature. The German naval officer goes about his business sad-eyed and earnest, even solemn. His respect for etiquette, which is army etiquette, is perfect. When he is on shore he receives from the civilian the same kind of terrified deference which is paid to the army officer. When the fleet is in harbor, for instance, and the officers pervade the town in their immaculate capes and white gloves, no civilian dares to take a cab or to order a meal in a restaurant; or, if he does venture, it is in vain.

But determination can accomplish much; and the German naval officer has become an excellent seaman. His attainments in strategy, tactics, and gunnery are difficult to appreciate, for the Imperial German Navy delights in an imposing secrecy.

The men strike the English observer as being a trifle overtrained. They are clean, smart, athletic, hard fellows; but they have the air of being part of a machine, and not particularly enjoying it. The British bluejacket is usually a person who disengages an impression of resource, initiative, and a regulated independence of mind. To put the matter negatively, the German sailor fails to convey that impression. When he is ashore he marches the streets, alone or in company, like a soldier on duty. He does not appear to relax. If he meets an officer he looks expectantly for an order to bring a cab or to trot upon an errand. He is well enough treated. The ships are comfortable, the food excellent, properly cooked, and cleanly served. Everything, in fact, is as it should be. And yet—and yet the German sailor does not appear to enjoy life at all. British officers who have served with German troops say that the German is singularly dependent upon rations and regularity. An empty belly disorganizes him. The new German navy is, broadly speaking, an experiment in sea power made by strictly military methods.

Until now the German navy has never engaged in a big war. It knows nothing of war except in theory, of which it knows a great deal. War to the German navy is an extraordinary adventure, an enterprise fraught with immense and unknown possibilities.

Sandy Thanked Nurses

A Gordon Highlander attracted attention at the Gare du Nord, Paris. He was in fine humor, although he had been wounded in the side. He had a sword in his hand which, he explained, he had captured from a Uhlan directly after the German had struck him with it, and he had shot his assailant dead.

Some women of the French Red Cross on their way to the front caught sight of the Scotchman and hurried up to see if he was badly hurt. An animated conversation followed.

The Highlander, anxious to express his gratitude to the French Florence Nightingales, hesitated a moment; then he kissed all of them on the cheeks. The crowd cheered delightedly and the nurses were not in the least abashed.

What Tommy Atkins Smokes

Tommy can get plenty of the tobacco he likes in France. Knowing that he preferred Virginia tobacco, the French factories had tons of it supplied direct from England. This is called "Tabac à la coulture." In honor of the heroic resistance of the Belgians at Liége, a new brand of cigarettes was brought out by the State factories, called "The Cigarette Liégeoise." They are done up in packages of twenty, with the coat of arms of France and Belgium on the outside, and a band of the Belgian colors. Some of the packages supplied to the French army consist of tricolor paper with the motto, "Vive la France."

THE RUSSIAN Ppremier

Distribution of People Over the Huge Country is His Aim

A strong hand on the wheel of statecraft in Russia to-day is that of the economist and sociologist, Prime Minister Ivan Goremykin.

Goremykin was born in St. Petersburg in 1848. He received a good academic training in that city and graduated from a university. He became interested in his country and when twenty-one years published his first book. Later on he wrote a history of the Polish peasants, and with the success of this effort he added another volume entitled "The Land of the Russian Peasants." These efforts of study in things pertaining to his country directed the attention of his government sufficiently to make him chief of the emigration department into Siberia.

Eventually he rose to be minister of the interior, and in 1906, prime minister. The country was in a revolutionary state. Count Witte had resigned. Goremykin declared to the Duma that amnesty was impossible in Russia in the case of persons guilty of murder or other acts of violence. He also declared that the agrarian possibilities could be worked only by time. He then submitted a program of reform. The Duma would not accept these reforms. Revolutionary disturbances followed. The massacre of the Jews took place and a clash came when the agrarian proposals were renewed. Goremykin was immediately replaced by Stolypin, who was later assassinated.

During the next few years Goremykin took no active part in any official position, but acted as advisory functionary to the Czar in all matters relating to economic and social questions.

Goremykin's plan for the salvation of Russia is economic. His whole wish is to distribute the people over the different territories. They call him an old-time conservative who desires things to go his way in slow steady paces.

REFUGEES SUSPICIOUS.

Belgians in England Refuse to Return Beyond German Lines.

FLUSHING, Oct. 23. — (Via London)—A total of 8,000 penniless Belgians, quartered to-day in Flushing, absolutely refuse to return to their homes in Antwerp or other Belgian cities in the hands of the Germans. It is true a hundred refugees did go back to Antwerp Wednesday and that an equal number left yesterday, but the movement to get large numbers to return to the city in the possession of the enemy has been futile.

All the school and church buildings of Flushing are at the present time occupied by impoverished Belgians. The schools have been dismissed to accommodate them.

The normal population of this city is 20,000, but it is to-day augmented by probably 10,000 Belgians, only 2,000 of whom have funds and are able to pay their way. The municipality is bearing the expense of feeding and sheltering those who are without money.

VON MOLTKE ILL.

Private Letter From Berlin Says Von Falkenhayn Is In Charge.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—A private letter received in Amsterdam from a high official in Berlin, says Lt.-Gen. Count Helmuth von Moltke, chief of the German General Staff, is dying, according to the Exchange Telegraph's Amsterdam correspondent.

"Everything, the correspondent adds, "is being done to keep the news secret. Gen. von Moltke is suffering from an affection of the liver. The cure he was undergoing was interrupted in July by the German mobilisation. He has now had to leave Emperor William's headquarters, Gen. von Falkenhayn, the Prussian Minister of War being left in charge."

German Rioters Suppressed.

KINGSTON, Ont., Oct. 2.—An order to the guards to "fix bayonets" prevented a small-sized riot among the prisoners at Fort Henry. One German who has for some time been acting in a disorderly manner and who tried to induce the other prisoners to join in a riot was placed in a cell. For some time a number of the prisoners have been trying their best to make trouble.

SUPREME TEST IS ON IN BELGIUM

New York Military Critic Says Germany Has a Different Army to Meet Now

NEW YORK, Oct. 20. — The Herald's military critic to-day says:

Although reports from the battle front in the western theatre of operations reveal little of the complex strategyeral operations, the latest information is indicative of the fact that the allied general staff is following faithfully the axioms of Mahan, who said: "Grasp firmly some vital chord in the enemy's communication and so force him to fight there."

It now appears from the events referred to in recent despatches that instead of an immediate resumption of their original objective of a speedy advance upon Paris the Germans fought for control of northern Belgium with the primary purpose of protecting their lines of communication through that territory.

Beaten Without Fresh Troops.

The reduction of Antwerp, however, was but a step in this direction. The renewed activity on the part of the Belgian field force, which was interned in the fortress and the forcible advance of the Franco-British troops before and north of Lille have proved an effective counter stroke to the exertions of the invaders in Belgium.

Military experts are now of the opinion that without a tremendous reinforcement of first line troops the German offensive in the west is effectually checked. The German troops which occupy Belgium are for the most part men of the second line, and the consequently not as pliable a force as those that were under arms at the commencement of hostilities.

Figures Often Tell Little.

It is a well-known fact that the strength of an army is not in the weight of its numbers, but in its power of concentration. The working out of figures is an academical exercise as far as warfare is concerned, for although the ability to place a numerically overwhelming force in the field is a decided advantage to either combatant, many factors intervent. Losses in killed, wounded and prisoners are oftentimes exceeded by reduction of full strength of an army by illness. In this regard sinister reports have come through telling of the existence of enteric or typhoid fever among the German troops in France and cholera in Galicia.

What Napoleon Said.

In 1815 Napoleon counted one Frenchman the equal of two Prussians. Whatever reasons the master tactician had for such comparison relative to the field of effectiveness of his own and the troops opposed to him, it is certain that the remarkable organization of the great German army to-day has materially enhanced the Prussians' value as a fighting unit.

The supreme test of individual prowess in arms, however, has now come in Southwestern Belgium where the flat nature of the territory and the almost complete absence of facilities for construction of entrenchments and defensive works necessitates to a degree fighting in the open. Here a decisive result is inevitable. The Allies now are not confronted with the same conditions which obtained when they contested with General Von Kluck and General Von Buelow in Belgian territory two months ago.

What To-day's Fight Is Like.

Then the troops were fresh from camps and barracks, and they were opposed by a force whose numerical superiority was sufficient to crush any concerted effort to hold them in check. The slaughter inflicted by the artillary and rifle fire of the allies meant little to a general staff to whom ultimate success could be insured only by the prompt crushing of their adversaries in France.

To-day the German is fighting up on this field a second time, and his opponent is a Belgian, whose grit and the principle for which he fights make up in large measure for what he lacks in military training; a Frenchman whose fighting spirit has been kindled by success in battle and the bitter desires of forty-four years, and a Briton, a fighter of intelligence and indomitable perseverance. This allied force has tasted and tested the German military strength.

Make Ostend Untenable.

The fact that the allies have thrust forward considerable advances with the last few days, even after the Germans had released to the firing line men from garrisons that were obligatory, while the Belgians were in the north, indicates that the offensive is being pushed with a vigor made possible by numerical strength.

If sufficient gains are made by the allies to the eastward and the front advances in a powerful salient in the north with the flank resting on the channel coast, Ostend would be untenable to the Germans. In order to prevent being cut off or driven from the Dutch frontier they will have to evacuate Eastern Belgium.

While along the remainder of the battle line in France both sides may be held in a condition of stalemate for many months, the individual fighting ability of the men of either army, providing approximate equality in numbers is maintained, will soon turn the balance in Belgium.

EATS GILLETT'S DIRT LYE CLEANS

DISOBEYED THE KAISER.

German Generals Partially Saved Situation Say Danish Papers.

LONDON, Oct. 23. — The Danish press is authority for a story that Emperor William and his generals had a severe disagreement after the battle of the Marne. In the face of all military precedent and common sense, with the right flank seriously threatened, he insisted on an advance and a general debacle was only avoided by noncompliance with the Kaiser's order.

When the haughty German war lord was told of the retreat of the Prussian Guard at Vitry-le-Francois, he is reported to have said: "That and Gen. von Hausen still living? A Samurai would have acted otherwise." This phrase is said to have sunk into the hearts of the German commanders and to have aroused profound misgivings over the future, each man feeling that his imperial master would sacrifice both commander and men as the merest slaves to carry out one of his own ideas.

SUBMARINE E3 SUNK.

Admiralty Announces That War Craft Is Long Overdue.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—The Secretary of the Admiralty announces that the submarine E3, commanded by Lieut.-Commander George Chomley, is now considerably overdue, and that it is feared she has been sunk in the North Sea.

A wireless despatch received from Berlin on Tuesday said the E3 had been sunk Sunday, Oct. 18, by German warships. Her complement consisted of 16 men.

It is also reported that the British torpedo boat Dryad is ashore at Kirkwall, in the Orkney Islands, off the coast of Scotland. Her crew is said to have been saved.

The Dryad, which was built in 1892, is 250 feet long, and has a speed of 18.5 knots an hour. She has been attached to the navigation school at Portsmouth.

There are in commission in the British navy now 232 destroyers and 59 torpedo boats.

The Belgian refugees are beginning to return to their own country, especially to the city of Antwerp.

An effort is being made to organize a corps of civil servants in Ottawa who do not belong to any of the militia regiments.

Mrs. James Romain and her brother, Tony Demarce, of North Bay, were arrested yesterday on a charge of arson, as a result of a fire at the Romain residence.

Lt.-Col. W. S. Hughes will be appointed provisionally in command of the infantry battalion to be organized from the infantry and rifle units of the third division.

It is officially announced that Maj. Liberte, Quebec, will have charge of the machine gun section of the French-Canadian regiment, while Maj. Rainville will be quartermaster.

Italy has decided to remain out of the war, but she has notified the powers that she may find it necessary to occupy Avlona, Albania, owing to the chaotic conditions prevailing in that country.

The German steamer Santa Catharina, from New York for Rio Janeiro, etc., before reported seized as a war prize, is now reported sunk off Parcel des Abrolhos, off Rio Janeiro as a result of fire.

A message from Athens states that two submarines and a number of aeroplanes in pieces are en route to Constantinople via Rustchuk, on the northern border of Bulgaria. They are from some German point.

The steamer Brussels reports that she saw the steamer Cormorant of Cork sink in the North Sea. It is supposed she struck a mine. Her crew probably were saved by a torpedo boat which was seen to leave Harwich.

UHLANS PAY PENALTY.

Fourteen Brutal Germans Bayonetted By Highlanders.

NORTHERN FRANCE, Oct. 23.—A certain place in the north of France was the scene of a fierce drama of crime and punishment. The actors were a small body of Uhlans and 12 men of a Highland regiment. The latter were carrying out a reconnaissance when they came upon a small farm. It was late in the evening. They noticed fourteen German horses in the farm yard. Stealthily and unobserved they crept into the farmhouse. Downstairs all was silent, but there were sounds from a room upstairs. The Highlanders burst into a room, where they found fourteen Germans and tied to a bed, a young woman.

The scene that followed was swift and terrible. The Uhlans were surprised in their dastardly conduct, and the outcry of the Highlanders was like the descent of a squad of vengeance. Rightfully no mercy was shown the Uhlans. Every one of the fourteen was killed with the bayonet, and their bodies hurled through a window into the yard below.

Thinking of Moving?

LONDON, Oct. 22.—The Exchange Telegraph Co. has given out a despatch from Amsterdam which says that an arrival in that city from Brussels is an authority for the statement that the German military commander in the Belgian capital has placarded the city advising all Germans civilians to leave within 48 hours.

CHILDREN HATE OIL, CALOMEL AND PILLS

"California Syrup of Figs" Best For Tender Stomach, Liver, Bowels.

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the "dose" mother insisted on—castor oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. Mothers who cling to the old form of physic simply don't realize what they do. The children's revolt is well-founded. Their tender little "insides" are injured by them.

If your child's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing, give only delicious "California Syrup of Figs." Its action is positive, but gentle. Millions of mothers keep this harmless "fruit laxative" handy; they know children love to take it; that it never fails to clean the liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach, and that a teaspoonful give to-day saves a sick child to-morrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on each bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. See that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

THE GERMANS HAVE BEEN HEAVILY REINFORCED, ALLIES LINES HOWEVER CONTINUE TO HOLD FIRM

ARE STILL RECRUITING

57th Quota For Second Contingent Not Yet Complete—Medical Examination Rejecting Many

APPLICATIONS NUMEROUS

More progress towards securing Peterborough's allotment of recruits for the Second Canadian Contingent was made last night when five more passed the medical examination and were sworn in. As on the other nights a number of the applicants failed to come up to the standard, and so far although there has been a rush of applicants, the majority have been unsuccesful in pasing the medical test.

Major Walker is in receipt of some very interesting letters from Canadians now living in the land of Uncle Sam. One man writes from South Dakota, another from Iowa, and a third from Chicago, wanting to enlist with the 57th Regiment for service at the front. Two of these men, formerly were members of the 57th Regiment, and the third hailed originally from Kingston. All three are most anxious to go with the Canadians, and are willing to pay the expenses of the trip north for a chance to enlist.

The examining officer, Dr. Cameron, will be at the Armouries to-night at 8 o'clock, and to-morrow from 4:15 to 6 p.m. and from 8 to 9 p.m. for the purpose of examining recruits. A large number are still needed to arrive at the complement of the 57th. It looked on Tuesday night as if 75 men from Peterborough would not be enough, but the medical examination has played havoc with the recruits, the long list of applicants having been whittled down.

ADDRESS WILL BE ILLUSTRATED

Enemy Throws Fresh Bodies of Troops At The Line of Allies

Violent Attempt at Several Points to Break Through at Any Cost---Late Despatches Show That the Allies Are Holding Their Ground.

Examiner Special:

LONDON, Eng., October 23.—Paris despatches late this afternoon state that Germany has evidently thrown into the firing line at several points in France strong reinforcements with the evident object of breaking through at any cost. They are apparently absolutely fresh troops. So far the French line is holding firm, with heavy losses.

PARIS, October 23, 4 p.m.—The Germans are making desperate attempts to break through the allied lines in the vicinity of Arras, and especially along the Channel. This was admitted by the War Office here to-day when it was stated that the fighting was of so severe a character that at various points it had been found advisable to cede territory and at others ground had been gained. It was plain from the tone of the despatches that the battle in the neighbourhod of the Channel is still some distance from a decisive result. Despite the severity of the fighting the entire situation is described by the war office experts as encouraging. There is no reason to fear that the Germans will get to Dunkird, they declare, and therefore little chance of a military invasion of Great Britain.

PARIS, October 23.—The most important declaration in the official communique telegraphed from Bordeaux this afternoon, was that the gaps between the allied position in the north were being closed up. The German attack, it was announced, continues to be of the most violent character. As a result the fighting is more or less pendulum in character. Various gains are offset by various losses of territory, it was stated, it be being found advisable to make slight recessions where the German assaults are the most severe.

On the whole, however, the lines are maintained without any very great change, despite the severe nature of the fighting. The enemy continues his great activity in the vicinity of Arras .

THE HAGUE, October 23.—Reports reaching here declare that the allies have succeeded in cutting the German line of communication between Bruges and Ghent. The fighting in that section is declared to be increasing. Bands of Franc Tireurs are reported to be operating in the rear of the German lines and have sniped hundreds of the Germans.

"DUTCH WILL NEVER FORGET THE EXAMPLE OF BRITISH HONOUR"

THE HAGUE, October 22.—A prominent Dutch politician referring to the fall of Antwerp, and expressing the general feeling here towards Great Britain, said:—

"Had England sent troops to Antwerp through the Scheldt, matters assuredly would have taken a different course, for Antwerp would have been absolutely impregnable.

"To do this, however, Great Britain would have had to violate the neutrality of Holland, and Holland will never forget that Great Britain, at the cost of heavy disvantage, respected the 'scrap of paper' and kept clear of the Scheldt. This great example of British honour is one which history will regard with admiration, and the Dutch with everlasting gratitude."

ROLLED UP LIKE RIBBON

Daily Mail Correspondent Says German Const Army is Retiring Before the Allies

THEIR LINE CUT?

Examiner Special:

LONDON, Oct. 23.—"The German General Staff has left Ghent and there are strong rumours of a severe German defeat," says the Rotterdam correspondent of the Daily Mail. "Messages from different points of the northwest frontier agree that the German coast army is being rolled up like a ribbon. The German cavalry has been unable to manoeuvre in the tangled dyke country, and German big guns are stuck in bogs. By a magnificent attack, it is stated, the Franco-British force have cut the German line south of Ostend."

Russians Claim The German Losses In Poland Are 200,000

Petrograd Reports Confirm the Retreat of the Enemy Beyond the Vistula---Many Guns Have Been Captured by the Pursuing Russians.

Examiner Special:

PETROGRAD, October 23.—The general staff in an official bulletin made public to-day says that the German forces are in full retreat from the vicinity of Warsaw. At several points it is stated the retreat has taken on the proportions of a complete rout.

Many of the German heavy guns have been mired, and captured by the pursuing Russians. So precipitate has been the German retreat that they have been forced to abandon their wounded and also large quantities of hospital stores. The crack German corps have been terribly decimated by the Russians, who attacked from both the front and the flank. The Russian cavalry are harrassing the retreating army and taking numerous prisoners.

PETROGRAD, October 23.—Reports reaching the military headquarters from the front say that the total losses of the Germans, killed, wounded and prisoners, in their operations in Poland to date, number 200,000. Fighting is still in progress all along the line of the Vistula, and is constantly increasing in magnitude.

LONDON, October 22.—The Standard's Paris correspondent says: It has already been related how gallantly the little Fort Troyon defied the Germans on the Meuse, but it is only just being realised what a service it garrison rendered the allied force for five days. A force of 450 men kept 10,000 Germans at bay, notwithstanding the awful pounding from the terrible guns that gave the death blow to Liege, Namur and other strongholds. After two days bombardment the enemy tried to carry the fort by storm. They got within ten yards but fell in such numbers that they had to withdraw. Next day they summoned the garrison to surrender. "Never!" was the reply.

"Then we shall have to shell you with our heavy guns until you and your fort are but a heap of cinders," retorted the German commander. They almost had time to carry out the threats before relief came. When the siege was raised nothing was left of the fort, while over one half its defenders had been buried alive in its ruins. The captain in command was wounded in 28 places, and his lieutenant has a leg blown away. The Governor of Verdun came in person to congratulate the garrison on the magnificent feat, and ever since a stream of generals and commanding officers from all sides have come to see the damage done. Every regiment that passes has orders to halt and render the garrison military honours. The defenders have been loaded with presents in recognition of their heroic defence.

LONDON, October 23.—The conflicting reports regarding Prince Max of Hesse, nephew of the Kaiser, were cleared up by the war bureau to-day. He was killed in action in the Mont-Descats region, and with three British officers who fell in the same action, was buried in the grounds of the monastry. The bureau states that much ground has been gained by the British in that region. The Germans have stubbornly resisted the advance of the allies and there has been frequent hand to hand fighting. Numerous dykes to the south of the Lys district necessitate the transport of planks and ladders to be utilized for crossing. It has been very difficult to negotiate these passages, in the face of the German fire, but it is always accomplished.

WORK OF THE FLEET

Official Statement From the Admiralty Tells of the Bombardment of Germans on the Sea Coast

MONITORS USEFUL

Examiner Special:

LONDON, Oct. 22.—The Secretary of the Admiralty issued to-night the following statement on the operations of the British warships in co-operation with allied army on the Belgian coast:

"On October 16 requests for naval assistance were made to the Admiralty by the allied commanders. In consequence, a naval flotilla mounting a large number of powerful long range guns came into action at daybreak on the 19th off the Belgian coast, supporting the left of the Belgian army and firing against the right of the German attack, which they were, by their position, able to enfilade.

"The Germans replied by shells from their heavy guns, but, owing to the superior range of the British marine artillery, practically no damage has been done.

"Three monitors, which were building in British ports for Brazil and were acquired on the outbreak of the war, have proved particularly well suited to this class of operation. A heavy bombardment on the German flank has been maintained without intermission since the morning of the 18th (Monday) and is being continued to-day (Thursday).

"Observation is arranged from shore by means of naval balloons, and all reports indicate that substantial losses have been inflicted upon the enemy and that the fire is well directed and effective against his batteries and heavy guns.

"Yesterday a considerable explosion, probably of an ammunition waggon, followed upon a naval shot. The naval losses have so far been very small considering the damage and the important assistance rendered to the Belgian left flank.

"All reports received by the Admiralty show the courage and determination with which the Belgian army, animated by the King in person, is defending the last few miles of Belgian soil.

Confirms Loss of E-3.

The Secretary of the Admiralty announces that the submarine boat E-3, commanded by Lieut.-Commander George F. Cholmondeley, is now considerably overdue and that it is feared she has been sunk in the North Sea.

A wireless despatch received here from Berlin Tuesday said the E-3 had been sunk Sunday, October 18.

ALL VOLUNTARY.

Canada in the special session of Parliament that opened on August 18th, voted a war credit of 50 million dollars which is being expended on the mobilisation and despatch of Canadian contingents to the front. This is the business side of Canada's contribution to the support of the Mother Country in the war crisis. There is, however, a sentimental side, in which the country individually supplemented their military contribution. The Dominion Government set the example of what may be called in distinction from the war credit vote, a contribution of affection. It contributed a million bags of flour, and the provinces followed suit with gifts—in kind, according to their staple products—flour, cheese, fish, coal, oats, horses, etc., etc. The beauty of these gifts is that they were all volunteered not commandeered; not seized as Germany, to show the spontaniety of subscription to her war loan, seized the deposits of private citizens placed there to pay the foreign debts of the depositors. The help in men and munitions of war that are coming from all points of the Empire is voluntary, the pledge of affection. Another illustration of the superior force of affection to force itself. Britain is supported in her battle for right because she has done right by her people, especially the outlying portions of the Empire. She is reaping what she has sown; and the whole civilised world is in sympathy with her battle for the vindication and support of national honour and good faith, and for the cause of human liberty and humanity.

HOME RULE.

Home Rule is not only a boon to the governed but a boon to Britain and the Empire. Great Britain is an equal gainer with her dominions and colonies in having practiced the policy of extending the latter the boon of self government. Giving Home Rule to Ireland, as a matter of principle, has become a matter of imperial profit. She now has the solid backing of that country, but a few months ago torn with dessension and on the edge of internecine war. Instead of being a weakness and a menace Ireland is now the right hand of the Empire in the hour of stress and need. The same is true of the Boers of South Africa. After beating the Boers by weight of numbers, and after a stubborn and plucky resistance, Great Britain subdued her late enemies more effectively and thoroughly with the pen than it was able to do with the sword—by the gift of self government. New South Africa is a strength instead of an anxiety, a friend in need. No other nation than Britain would have dared give self-government to a brave people, but yesterday in hostile array against her. The home rule of the self-governing dominions has made them staunch contributors to the Empire's armies and war strength. The whole Britannic Empire, with all its diversities of peoples, is a unit, because is is welded together with the magnificent cohesion that comes from the recognition of its subjects as men worthy of the rights of self-government, and of an opportunity to exercise their manhood—the highest and most difficult possible role, governing themselves. Great Britain has trusted her people and they have nobly answered the trust. It pays, even if it were not right, to do right—with nations as with men.

ALL MUST HELP.

In Canada and throughout the Empire there is a remarkable community of sentiment in regard to the successful waging of this war. And there also seems to be a similar unanimity of sentiment in regard to repairing the immediate results of the war—deprivation of families of their breadwinners and the straitened conditions that come from such withdrawal of support. In this connection one might add to the arsenal of common humanity the fact that the Catholic archbishops and bishops of Quebec have issued a pastoral in relation to the war. It deplores the war as enjoins prayers for the restoration of peace. It also declares that "every part of the Empire has its destiny associated with the fortunes of the British armies; that "Great Britain counts very rightly upon our cooperation, and this cooperation is being generously given her." In regard to the relief of suffering non-combatants the pastoral says:

"Already with reservists of the allied nations, naturalised or living amongst us, several thousand of our own compatriots have volunteered to go to war, and others, perhaps, will follow. Nearly all of them have left behind them families dependent upon them for their support. How many of them will ever return to take up again the task of bread-winner for the family? As beyond the seas, our own industries will be paralyzed; they will suffer from the impossibility of employers obtaining raw material from the countries now at war; and also from the absence or notable reduction in the number of skilled workers. In the fatherless homes, mothers will lament that they have not the food which their children ask. On our streets, men without work will seek, perhaps, in vain for employment to ensure their daily bread."

It is no surprise that ecclesiastics impress the duty of coming to the help of the suffering in this crisis; it is one of the duties of the religion they teach; and it is consistent with the objects of the Christianity the church represents. This is a war for humanity, for the most scared human rights. It is a fight against oppression and wrong; and all that is good or that stands for good, must help wage it and help repair the ravages it creates. And we can all help. The men of the cloth can preach the crusade of charity; the man in peace can give of his gains; the women can give of her work, and even the child can bear a part and do its share.

A GREAT RECRUITING AGENCY

A tribute to the Belfast Agent of the Canadian Pacific Railway is paid by the "Belfast Daily Telegraph" of October 10th, which reproduces a photograph of Mr. W. M'Calla, the Belfast Agent of the Company, together with his staff, all in recimentals. "The C.P.R." it says, "has placed the benefit of its widespread organization at the service of the Empire in the present crisis, and has developed itself into a great recruiting agency for the British Army. Every office is a centre of patriotic activity, and the Company's employees have given an excellent ead to others in joining the King's forces in large numbers. The Belfast Office, so capably managed by Mr. W. M'Calla, is no exception, and of the group of the Chief and his staff, shown herewith, no fewer than six are now preparing for the front, as recently-joined members of Lord Kitchener's Army. The display of pictorial posters in the windows of the Victoria Street Offices is very fine, and certainly it cannot be said that the Belfast staff has been deaf to the stirring appeal under one of the most effective of them:

Lads of the desk and wheel and loom,
Noble and trader, squire and groom,
Come where the bugles of England play,
Over the hills and far away.

Never was there a greater fallacy than the old saying that opportunity comes but once for opportunities keep coming to the hustling, wide-awake people who are ready to grasp them.

Before eating an orange, soak it in hot water for half an hour. The skin will loosen and come off easily, and the orange will be as sweet as if freshly picked.

As a rule, the folds of tablecloths are ironed very hard, and this, of course, will quickly wear out the cloth. There seems no sense in having the creases so very prominent, since the life of the cloth is lessened there by. Few women need to be told that the position of the folds should be changed from time to time when ironing.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER'S STRIKING PUBLIC SPEECHES IN REGARD TO PRESENT WAR

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the old man eloquent, Canada's acknowledged premier—orator—though he is simply leader of the Opposition, is not only a great orator, but a great Canadian and Great Britisher, a great Imperialist. When the war broke out he at once cancelled a speaking tour he had arranged and heartily joined with the Opposition in a truce to party politics and in hearty cooperation in the interests of Britain and the Empire. He has made many public speeches of a patriotic and strictly non-partisan character and has made many public utterances of striking pith and pertinence. A resume of them will make interesting reading:

"Upon this occasion I owe it to the House and to myself to speak with absolute frankness and candour. This is a subject which has often been an occasion of debate in this House. I have always said, and I repeat it on this occasion, that there is but one mind and one heart in Canada. At other times we may have had different views as to the methods by which we are to serve our country and our empire. More than once I have declared that if England were ever in danger—nay, not only in danger, but if she were ever engaged in such a contest as would put her strength to the test—then it would be the duty of Canada to assist the motherland to the utmost of Canada's ability. England to-day is not engaged in an ordinary contest. The war in which she is engaged will in all probability—nay, in absolute certainty—stagger the world with its magnitude and its horror. But that war is for as noble a cause as ever impelled a nation to risk her all upon the arbitrament of the sword. That question is no longer at issue; the judgment of the world has already pronounced upon it. I speak not only of those nations which are engaged in this war, but of the neutral nations. The testimony of the ablest men of these nations, without dissenting voice, is that to-day the allied nations are fighting for freedom against oppression, for democracy against autocracy, for civilization against reversion to that state of barbarism in which the supreme law is the law of might."

Sir Wilfrid was one of the chief speakers at the great musical festival given by the American residents of Toronto under the auspices of the American Aid Society on Thursday, September 10. The concert was held in the Arena, and the entire receipts were donated to the Canadian Patriotic Fund. Being entirely the work of American citizens, resident in Canada, the occasion was unique in the history of the Dominion. He said:

"Some weeks ago Canada deliberated upon the situation, the stupendous struggle in which Britain is engaged and the part which Canada bears. All vestiges of political differences were eliminated. We found in comparing our views that we stood exactly upon the same platform. Without a dissenting voice it was the unanimous opinion of the Canadian Parliament that the war in which England is engaged to-day is a sacred war and that Canada must help to its last man and its last dollar."

"Yes, England would go to war for a scrap of paper," Sir Wilfrid declared, "and it is for that we are proud of England. That bond will be redeemed, as the German Chancellor knows now, though he did not know it then. The Kaiser stands before the bar of nations to-day charged with having broken his bond, and he must be made to redeem that bond. This war was commenced for the purpose of saving civilization; it is being continued to vindicate the right of humanity. The German Ambassador said a week ago that the war was ended. Whether or not the German Ambassador is now ready for peace, Britain is not ready for peace and will not be until the bond is redeemed and Belgium granted her independence. She can never be recompensed for the loss of her sons and her cities. This war has been carried on with a cruelty that carries us back to barbarism. I do not think that the German people are by disposition a cruel people, but fifty years of Kaiserism and military rule has made Germany callous to human suffering. . . . We must face the situation as it is, and as Lord Kitchener told us some few days ago, we must have more men. There is a difference between the British nation and the nations of the continent. The nations of the continent get their soldiers by law, by conscription, and the enforcement of authority; the British nation gets her soldiers not by law, but by appealing to the patriotism of men. Lord Kitchener tells us he wants more soldiers. If he wants more soldiers from Canada, let him say the word, and we will respond to meet him. We are behind the mother country, and let us send them a message that this war must be fought out to a finish, and that arms must not be laid down until the principle for which it has been tought is vindicated, and until the day has come when right takes the place of wrong." (Loud cheering.)

At the Directors' luncheon, Toronto Exhibition, September 12, Sir Wilfrid spoke.

Speaking of the war, Sir Wilfrid said the Exhibition was coming to an end under more popular auspices than it commenced. When the Fair opened the horizon was reddened and charged. People thought of one thing only—the war. The war had not been proceedings in a way that was cheerful to our hearts, but he was glad to see at the moment that the news was becoming more cheering, and they had every reason to believe for the time the tide of the German invasion had been stopped. But even in the prospect of victory war was a horrible thing. "But there is," he continued, "some consolation in this: that it teaches us that which no doubt we have known all our lives, but which comes in a concrete form at this moment: the superiority of British institutions above all others. Wherever the British flag flies there is a unanimous feeling of devotion and determination to conquer." (Applause).

The readiness with which the British Dominions were coming to the aid of the motherland was not accidental. The cause was that wherever British rule had been established freedom and justice prevailed. He personally testified to the justice that had been atxended to the French race in Canada. Wherever possible Great Britain had withdrawn her rule and given self-government to the races over which she had dominion.

It was done in Canada, it was done in Australia, it was done in India," he declared amid applause, referring to Lord Minto's action in calling representatives of the native races to the Indian Council. "And in South Africa four years after the conclusion of the war the British nation did not hesitate to give responsible government to the men who had been fighting her armies. It was an audacious policy. No other nation would have done it but Britain."

Sir Wilfrid remarked how Britain was the only one of the European powers that did not recruit her army by law, but relied on the loyalty and devotion of her sons. Napoleon had once spoken of the British as a nation of shopkeepers, but the shopkeepers had show at Waterloo that they were as efficient with the rifle and bayonet as with the yardstick.

"As a result of this war there will be an upheaval in continental Europe. The nations will take an example from Britain and do away with militarism, conscription and enforced military service, and reply on the good will of the people to supply all the soldiers they want.

At the Methodist Conference, Ottawa, September 23, Sir Wilfrid said:

"The sword will not be put back in the scabbard," he said, "until this Imperial duty has been taught that this scrap of paper is a solemn obligation, and that solemn obligations between nations as between individuals must be observed. There can be no peace until heroic Belgium has had her rights and her lands restored and her wrongs repaired. There can be no peace until the world knows that it is so be governed, not by brute force, but by truth, liberty and justice, for which the British flag stands.

"The great lesson of the response "with one heart and mind," from every part of the Empire to the motherland's call for help, he declared was that the unity and loyalty of every oversea Dominion was broad-based on the free-will of the governed. That was the inspiring lesson that came particularly from South Africa where eneral Louis Botha was to-day leading in defence of the British flag, the very men who fought fourteen years ago against Great Britain. "No country could have given free government to the Boers after the war," he said, "none would have dared, except Britain. Trust men and they will answer the trust."

At Patriotic Fund meeting, Ottawa, September 28, Sir Wilfrid said:

"It's a Long Way to Tipperary, but 30,000 Canadian boys are on their way and will arrive there in due time," said Sir Wilfrid, when the great ovation which greeted his appearance had subsided. He referred to the splendid way in which the men of Canada had come forward at the call to duty in "as sacred a cause as ever men fought and died for. It is not without pride that I find to-day my compatriots coming to the overnment and asking permission to raise a French-Canadian regiment: I may tell you, for after all, blood is thicker than water, that I was deeply moved when I learned that the Government had granted the prayer of that deputation." Continuing, Sir Wilfrid declared he was sure that on the field of battle these French French-Canadians would do their share well to uphold liberty and justice.

"Germany has been ruled by a military caste which has instructed the people to believe that they are invincible, that their mission is to rule Europe. The German Emperor is a man of ability, we must give him credit for that, but he ought to know that no Empire ever lived that was founded on force. Only one Empire has stood the brunt and the test of ages. The British Empire is founded on the principles of justice and freedom. There can be no respite in this war until we have won and succeeded in again bringing forward the flag of civilization which is no on trial."

MET WITH A BEAR WHILE OUT HUNTING HER COWS

Mrs. Thompson Had an Exciting Exciting Experience Near Clark's Bay Recently.

SCREAMS SCARED HIM

Mrs. Thompson, wife of Mr. Thompson the guide, while out hunting her cows one day last week, had an experience which she will not soon forget. Wandering into the berry patch on Clark's Bay she was startled to see standing in front of her a monster bear (and she was not in search of "bearies" either). Luckily she had her dog along, and he proceeded to engage the attention of Mr. Bear. At times he would rise to his full height, and Mrs. Thompson was so terror-stricken that she was literally glued to the spot, but she managed to scream, and scream she did. In fact she made such a noise that the bear calmly withdrew into the solitude of the quiet woods. Ever since that men have been prowling around the Burleigh shore with guns over their shoulders, in search of "the bear that walks like a man."

This part of the environs of Stoney Lake has been noted for harbouring animals of the wild variety. Each summer goes numbers of ladies from the cottages in this vicinity in search of raspberries. Frequently they have been met by settlers with guns, who would invariably express surprise at their courage, for [illegible] not seen (just a few days before), a couple of wolves, a bear, or some other ferocious creature in that very patch? For the most part their stories were taken with a grain of salt.

The weather man still continues to be kind, and the few inhabitants still residing on the lake are enjoying the best season of the year.

Mr. Walters is making progress with the work on his island. The cement foundation for the launch house is finished, and Contractor Simpson is now constructing a cement wharf directly in front of the cottage.

Mr. Taylor of Lakefield, has build a series of cement steps at "Portree," the summer home of Mr. J. W. Carey.

Miss Ray of Lakefield had the misfortune to break her wrist While holidaying at her cottage, "Rayburn," she fell from the verandah Friday evening upon the rocks and sustained a compound fracture. Dr. Fraser of Lakefield was summoned by telephone and Miss Ray was taken to Lakefield next morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wilson are spending a short holiday at their summer home, "Capalino."

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Knapman and son Jack are sojourning for a few days at their cottage, "Forest Home."

Professor M. A. Mackenzie of Toronto, accompanied by his son Hughie, his newsphew, Kenneth Mackenzie and Mr. Donald Cameron of the Grove school, spent the week end at "Lochend."

Mr. E. Wyly Grier of Toronto and Mr. Archibald Lampman of Lakefield, paid a flying visit to the former's cottage, "Woodonga," on Wednesday.

Rev. Alex. Mackenzie of the Lakefield Grove school is the new owner of the Stewart launch.

Consumers Should Be Organized

And Secure Apples at $1.00 Per Barrel

The following by D. Johnson, the Fruit Commissioner of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, should be of interest:

There is no doubt that the apple crop of 1914 is one of the largest that Canada has ever produced. It is also a fact that many former avenues of trade are cut off, with the result that hundreds of carloads of apples will waste in the orchards of Ontario. This pertains specially to Western Ontario, where we are constantly advised that 75 per cent. of good marketable apples in many districts will fall upon the ground and rot. It is also a fact that consumers are paying prices ranging from $3 to $4 per barrel for apples in our cities. This is a most unsatisfactory condition of affairs. The producer spends years in the production of an orchard, protects his crop from insects, fungi, and weather conditions, to find in many cases that he is not able to market his apples at all; while many of those who have been fortunate enough to find a market are getting only 25 to 75 cents a barrel in the orchard. We find that even with apples costing only 50 cents a barrel in the orchard, they are sold to the ultimate consumer in our large Ontario cithies at from $3 to $4 per barrel, and in the West from $4 to $5 per barrel.

Taking 50 cents as the average cost or the price received by the producer, and $3.50 as the average price paid by the consumer, we find there is a difference of $3. How can this be accounted for? Are there any charges in the $3 that can be eliminated? In this must be included the following items: Cost of picking and packing, cost of the package (barrel or box), cost of transportation, and the profits of the wholesaler and retailer. The consumer is this year more interested in these items than is the producer, and consumers might, through self-organized groups or through municipal or other organizations, take the matter up with a view of cutting down this big addition of three dollars. Where "distribution" costs six times as much as "production" there would seem to be an opportunity for greater economy in the cost of food to the consumer.

Only yesterday the attention of the writer was called to a carload of apples which were bought at 25c per barrel on the trees. They were loaded into a box car in bulk, the apples being piled about 2½ feet deep, and shipped to a city 150 miles from the place of production. The apples arrived in good condition, and were sold out immediately at $1.00 per barrel to hucksters, pedlers, dealers, etc., who re-sold them to the consumers at from $2.00 to $2.50 per barrel according to the quantity bought. These apples were inspected by the writer at the time of delivery and were in good condition and would make excellent cooking and eating apples the greater part of the winter. These apples could have been sold to the consumer, in bulk form, at $1.00 a barrel, and still have given a fair profit to the dealer.

This is but a sample of what is being done throughout the consuming centres of Canada. The producer is getting very little for his apples and the consumer is paying a high price for them. It is for the consumers to organize themselves in such a way that they can send a man into some of the districts of Western Ontario, where apples may be bought, in bulk form, delivered on car, at from 30c to 40c per hundred pounds. These apples could be delivered in the cellars of our cities at $1.00 per barrel, in bulk form, and would give the people a grade of aples that would be serviceable for many months of winter use. Such varieties as Baldwins, Spies, Kings, and Russets could be procured in this way. The evaporators throughout the country are buying apples—all the apples they require, amounting to many thousands of barrels daily—at 18c to 25c per hundred pounds, delivered at the evaporator, and will take nothing but firm apples, not less than 2½ inches in diameter. Why should the consumers in our cities pay these high prices for apples when the solution of the situation is in their own hands?

Fruit Commissioner,
Dominion Dept. of Agriculture.

Country School Was On Fire

Wednesday at noon as an automobile party composed of Messrs. Edgar Lytle and Mr. Dean, of Oakwood, and H. J. Lytle and G. H. Wilson, of the Post, were passing through Cameron, the school bell was ringing furiously and great excitement was evident. About a mile northwest of the village flames were seen rising from the roof of a brick house, occupied by Mr. Alex. Henry and owned by Mrs. McNabb, of Lindsay. The party motored over to the building and assisted to man the pump and pails. The fire had caught in the shingles, and one of the active neighbours mounted the ridge pole, while others passed the water up. Just as they got nicely down to business, the cry came from Mr. Lytle that the water in the well had given out, and there was great consternation, but fortunately the water thrown on the roof had found its way down the eave trough into a barrel, and just enough was secured to put the last spark of fire out. The loss, however, will be covered by less than a hundred dollars.—Lindsay Post.

CANADIAN PAPERS ARE IN DEMAND

Dominion's Soldier Boys Like to Get the Journals From Home

LONDON, Oct. 22.—If David, son of Jesse, had visited his brethren in camp in these days besides an ophah of corn and loaves and cheese he would have taken with him a few scrolls recording the doing at home. Modesty might otherwise restrain, but anxiety to stimulate others to do likewise impels me to state that one of the most popular civilians who journeyed to Bustard and West Down camps yesterday was a visitor who stocked a motor with a goodly supply of the latest Canadian papers to arrive here.

Rush for Papers.

You should have seen how the chaps scuttered across the green from the lines of bell tents when they realized that the occupant of the car was flinging out the Canadian papers. One man would seize a newspaper, but in a second he would be borne to the ground by a host mates and had to yield at least half his treasure before he was released.

Write letters to the boys by all means, you good folk at home in Canada, but send them papers and as many as possible. You see, a letter in most cases brings pleasure to the recipient, but a newspaper is passed round among the men from the same district until it is well nigh thumbed to bits.

The Long Marches.

Bell tents by the hundred were empty yesterday, however, for the greater portion of every brigade undertook route marching away across the Plain. A long indistinct line could be seen slowly moving as if a creature, which flourished centuries before Stonehenge was built, had come to life again. The line became more distinct in half an hour or so and a skirl of pipes was heard. The sinuous moving mass resolved itself into a Highland brigade, marching in quarter column. Another ribbon-like formation advanced from a second point and a third was appearing from yet another quarter.

General Alderson had expressed a desire to meet the division or as many as could attend at such short notice.

"The parade is quite informal. They can come in any sort of uniform," was added as a qualifying clause to the summons. Thousands were too far away on route marches to attend, but all the same it was a mighty square khaki-clad of humanity which awaited the new Canadian commander.

Alderson is Popular.

General Alderson, if the term may be pardoned, is one of the jovial-looking sort of "military big pots." As he travels through the camp he returns the salute of passing privates with punctilious regularity, and there is also a subtle air of geniality in his acknowledgment of such compliments which every soldier appreciates.

To-day after some time spent in inspecting the muster he mounted ammunition waggons and addressed the men. He told how he appreciated the honour of commanding Canadians in South Africa and the pleasure he found in heading the contingent now at Salisbury of the same fellows.

A Canteen Question.

A most momentous statement of all—a wet canteen will be established in camp at the end of this week. Tell it not in Gath, but this announcement is received with cheers from all sides of the square. Parade is dismissed soon afterwards. While on the subject of canteen facilities, it may be mentioned that the only licensed house for miles around be the inn at Bustard—which has been out of rounds since Monday.

The Princess Pats, Regiment, who are away from the general body contingent, have had a wet canteen ever since they arrived here. They also had a wet canteen at Levis, but Valcartier was dry throughout. Some of the men who did not like Valcartier and said hard things about it are modifying their views now that they have reached Salisbury and begin to appreciate that no matter where camp is fixed there must be shortcomings.

Water and Electricity.

One thing in which Valcartier in a double sense shone over Salisbury was in being lighted with electricity. The water supply at Salisbury it is said is so far not up to the Quebec encampment.

Leave starts to-day, as many as 20 per cent. of most battalions receiving three days' passes and Scotland in particular will consequently receive many returning sons. Men proceeding to Scotland or Ireland have an extra day allowed for travelling.

A story goes that three men of the Queen's Own, Toronto, received an evening leave the other night and began to wal kacross the plain. They lost their way utterly and decided to make for a distant light. They walked for about three hours, and then found they had been following an automobile crossing the plain.

Pat's Pets Pat Themselves.

The Princess Pat's Regiment are swelling round, declaring they passed three other battalions in the march up from the railway to the camp. On arrival one of the regiments thus outwalked is said to have consoled itself with the remark that "Pat's Pets are all old soldiers and more used in marching. They are more used to telling soldiers' tales too," with [illegible] reflection on this incident.

Italian engineers have reported that the proposed tunnel from Venice to the island of Lido, which will be two miles long and in places 97 feet below the sea, is entirely feasible.

Cameras that will photograph objects many miles away, the details of which are carefully guarded secrets, have been added to the equipment of the United States army signal corps.

Dr. Gordon's Meeting Marked By Large Attendance of Men

"Wrecked Homes" Was the Subject of His Address Last Evening

QUESTIONS ANSWERED

St. Paul's Church was crowded to the doors last evening, for the fourth meeting in the series of services, conducted in connection with the Campaign for Christian Citizenship. Every inch of available standing room was occupied, and scores were turned away. One striking feature was the large attendance of business men, young men and mechanics, and the masculine element seems to grow stronger, with every additional meeting.

Mr. Albert E. Greenlaw, the coloured singer, was in fine form last night, and rendered three great selections. "The Man of Galilee," to the tune of "Annie Laurie," "I Love Him," to the tune of "Old Black Joe," and also the "Crucifixion Song," a selection which is called for by the audience, again and again, in every campaign. This evening, Mr. Greenlaw will sing "The Dream of Paradise," "He Lifted Me," and "Tell Mother I'll Be There."

The following questions were answered by Dr. Gordon, in brief but pungent paragraphs:

1. How do you account for the sudden temptation to commit some awful sin which sometimes comes into the minds of very good people?

2. Is there anything in the use of tobacco that makes men coloured?

3. Is it honorable to listen to a private conversation on a party telephone line?

4. Can a flatterer be a sincere friend?

5. What would you do if outside relatives interfered with the happiness of your home?

6. What is the most dangerous hour in a young woman's life?

The following is a brief outline of the address by Dr. Gordon, in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church last evening:

"Youth has three visions: The vision of God. The vision of Duty. The vision of Love. The vision of God touches the realm of religion and the soul. The vision of Duty concerns responsibility and achievement. The vision of Love finds its fulfillment and realization in the home life. That sacred threefold vision comes to us all. Happy the man or woman who finds that glory of the vision hours of early youth loses nothing of its spiritual splendour with the increasing years. Louis IX. of France, who married Princess Margaret of Provance, wore a ring on which were inscribed three words: 'God' — 'France' — 'Margaret.' He was accustomed to remark: 'I love no other love outside this ring.'

"The foundation of an empire is the home. The strength of a republic is the home. The glory of a civilization is the home. The crown of a true church is the home. The stability of the nation pivots on the home. The nation rests on the cottage, said John Bright. Oh, the home life! How the memories of the old homestead comes sweeping over us.

"A man never travels so far that he gets beyond the shadow of the old homestead, and the most men never rise higher than the ideals worshipped there. The writer who referred to the poet Byron as 'half God and half devil' may not have known that his father was a spendthrift and his mother the incarnation of a temperament which bordered on insanity. Harriet Martineau speaks thus of her early days: 'My life had no spring, no violets, no early flowers.' The first five years of my life made me an infidel," said Thomas Paine.

"How dare young people establish their homes without religion and assume the responsibility of childhood without God? Better send a new Titanic out to mid-ocean without captain or crew. An infidel Christian, if you will pardon the paradox, — a poor, worn-out, blacksliddon saint, deceived by the evil one and fascinated by the world, once remarked, in sad accents, 'I have a little girl, three years old, and I don't know what to do with her. Once I could teach her to say, "Now I lay me down to sleep," but I can't now.'

"An old preacher said to evangelist "Sam" Jones: "In my first charge, and during the first six months, I married one of my Christian young men to a worldly minded, unchristian girl: and also one of my Christian girls to a worldly minded and unchristian man. Inside of six months the Christian girl had brought her husband into the church, while the gay and gidd[illegible] girl had carried her husband out of [illegible].

"The first year of married life are apt to determine the destiny of a family. The hardest point in the establishment of a home is very often the first year. Learning to live together is the greatest problem in life. Two wills, two natures, two temperaments, two souls—coming into contact. What an opportunity for tact, consideration and fair play. How many biographies have been written in blood. Such was Shelley's. 'She can't bear solitude and I can't bear society —the living chained to the dead.' mastered the great poet. The greatest tragedies are the tragedies of the home life.

"When two people are determined to have their own way in all respects and particulars, there can be but one result—Look out for a tragedy! Home are [illegible] tyrants and [illegible] people. A home is not the throne-room of a despot but the virgin soil for the establishment of a ministering republic.

"John Ruskin used to say that the characteristic thing about a mean man was the way in which he pronounced the personal pronoun 'I.'

"Better the stalwart strength of a strong character than lacking character, the polished exterior of a shallow personality. Stanley, the explorer, was stern, exacting, uncompromising, silent and inscrutable, but his companions could [illegible] 'While we were all afraid of him, yet we all believed in him.' Character, that's the word. Character is the diamond which scratches every other stone.

"The social drinking customs of the hour threaten the permanency of our Christian institutions. The saloon is the organized enemy of the home. The distiller quaffs a goblet full to the brim with liquid agony and feeds like some monster of ancient mythology on human hearts, crushed, pierced, bruised, broken and torn. I would take my chances on the day of judgment with Judas Iscariot, rather than with the brewer who coins sorrow into silver, blood into bonds and manhood into the merchandise of ill-gotten wealth. He has no hesitation in crowding his hellish products, by display 'ads' and electric signs, upon the unsuspecting youth of the community, and I have no hesitation in branding him as the arch traitor of the race, the incarnation of commercial meanness, and the last surviving specimen of social piracy which threatens the existence of every frail human barque floating on the tempestious waters of our modern life."

This evening, Dr. Gordon will speak on "The Fools of Modern Society." Both men and women will receive particular attention in this discourse, and all classes will be interested.

Two thousand copies of Dr Gordon's printed address, on "The Hand That Rocks the Cradle," will be distributed at this evening's meeting. This means, that everybody will get a form.

The Proper Pruning of Trees

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir.—If there is one thing more than another which we lack in the art of beautifying our city, it is that of properly pruning our trees. Many of our most beautiful trees have been made unshapely and ungainly at the hands of a novice instead of "a thing of beauty and a joy for ever," to say nothing of doing it out of season. I saw one case of such pruning on Simcoe street near Aylmer street to-day, where the limbs were slashed off indiscriminately on one side and the top decapitated, leaving the tree lobsided and unsightly. Better by far had it been taken out altogether, especially as they were too close to one another. It takes years for a tree to grow, and the pruning of it should only be entrusted to an expert under the supervision of a committee.

Yours truly,

FOLIAGE.

The Spirit of Joanne D'Arc

A French Woman Displays Cheerful Confidence

(Special to The Star.)

Lagny, France (by mail), Oct. 25.—Here is the story of a woman who lives in Soissons, where another woman virtually "runs the town." She asks that her name be left out of print because she "is doing nothing for the cause."

Her home is near the bridge over the Aisne which the Germans, in the rock quarry on the hills north of the town, shelled repeatedly. A corner room upstairs was exposed to the weather, the walls having been torn away by a shell. The street in front of the house was littered with stone and plaster and splintered wood. Across the river dead bodies lay.

Along the firing line somewhere she had a husband and two brothers; she didn't know exactly where, for everything is secret in this "secret" war. She had not heard from any of them since the war began; yet she was able to smile with a cheerfulness that was contagious. I asked her what she thought of the war. "We will win," she said.

"But what do you think about all this fighting and killing one another?" I added.

"It is horrible, of course," she said simply, "and if He doesn't come back I don't know what I shall do, though I suppose I shall have to manage somehow." A little girl, perhaps three years old, came out and joined her mother on the littered steps, her big, mysterious blue eyes bent on me and wondering whom I could be.

"We have two children," the woman continued. "This one and a baby. Perhaps we are in for a hard time. And maybe He won't come back; they say our losses are heavy. But if France wins, where I lose I shall not complain; I shall feel that I, too, have done something."

"Even a great deal," I said.

"Yes," she replied, "even a great deal, for He was all I had."

Later in the day I saw another woman, standing boldly and unafraid in the streets, while the German shelling was particularly severe. A soldier hurried past.

"Dont be afraid, lady," he said; "the Germans are not going to get into the town again."

"Afraid!" she flung back disdainfully. "Afraid of the Boches? Hand me your gun, young man, if you're afraid, and I'll go out to meet them."

Everywhere I went I saw women like these. I talk to many whose homes had been destroyed, farms ruined, their stock requisitioned, and who had little or nothing of a material kind left in the world. But they were all hopeful, even cheerful. Every soldier they spoke to they cheered up; the spirit of Joanne d'Arc is still alive in France.

THE LIFE OF A WATCH

It should be cleaned and oiled once a year. If the oil gets gummy and chilling, and the result is the oil is entirely dried up, the pivots become cut and rusted so badly that it costs nearly as much as a new movement to put it in proper condition again. The old saying, "A stitch in time saves nine" holds good.

Ships Resume Sailing Dates

The White Star-Dominion Line announce the resumption of sailings commencing with the "Megantic" from Liverpool October 24th, from Montreal November 7th. S. S. "Canada" from Liverpool October 31st, from Montreal November 14th. The "Laurentic" November 7th from Liverpool November 21st from Montreal, thus giving a weekly service until the close of navigation on the St. Lawrence.

The announcement of this schedule will be welcome news to intending passengers and shippers, as the "Laurentic" and "Megantic" are the largest steamers from Canada, and the last word in ship-building.

The Christmas sailings are also announced from both Portland, Maine, and Halifax, Nova Scotia. The S. S. "Arabic" sailing from Portland December 2nd. Halifax December 3rd.

This steamer will make a noteworthy addition to the Christmas fleet as she is the largest One Class Cabin (II) steamer afloat, and has a reputation for "being as steady as a rock." She will be followed by the S. S. "Canada" from Portland December 12th.

Chocolate In Demand By Soldiers

Quite recently a gentleman in Europe, observing the passage of some troops through a village, noticed the women, in their enthusiasm, offering little gifts to the soldiers, and, making some inquiries, ascertained that the soldiers almost invariably asked for chocolate or cigarettes. Lately European governments have made large purchases of chocolate, finding that it is the favourite emergency ration on account of its small bulk and the large amount of nutriment it contains.

For many years in this country Walter Baker and Co.'s chocolate has been recognized as an exceedingly valuable article of food; chocolate containing, as one authority has stated, "More flesh-forming matter than beef."

MASCOT OF THE FIREMEN IS NO MORE

Sandy is dead!

Sandy was the Firemen's mascot, a ginger coloured cat. He used to walk across the freshly polished floor with dirty paws, and to allow the men to tumble over him in their haste to set out for a fire. But last night he acquired poison and this morning he was found under the hose waggon with his four paws pointing heavenward.

RAISIN SEASON

The new crop of raisins is already being offered, as will be seen by Messrs. Perkins, Ince & Co.'s announcement in another column — a very fine consignment of Selected Valencias having been already received at their wholesale warehouse, Bethune and Charlotte Streets. Retail dealers preparing for the holiday trade will doubtless take advantage of these offerings. The change of season brings round an extra demand for Christmas fruits, and raisins are one of the earliest to be featured. Needless to say, Perkins, Ince & Co. are in close touch with the best of the markets.

Local Presbytery Sanction Mr. Keith's Call To Edmonton

After Seven Years and a Half as Pastor of Knox Church Rev. H. J. Keith Will Go to Westminster Church, Edmonton.

A special meeting of the Peterborough Presbytery was held in the Knox Church this morning, to take action on the Rev. Mr. Keith's resignation of his position as pastor of the church. The Rev. Mr. Brown, of Warsaw, Moderator of the Peterborough Presbytery presided, and after some discussion it was decided to make the translation of the Rev. Mr. Keith to the Edmonton Presbytery.

A strong deputation representing the various departments and organizations of Knox Church were present to urge that the Presbytery have the Rev. Mr. Keith stay as head of the local church. The deputation consisted of Mr. J. F. Morrison and Mr. H. Shurter, representing the session, Dr. J. M. McCullough, the Board of Managers, H. McCannan, the Congregation, A. McKenzie, the Sabbath School, Mrs. McPherson, the Women's Missionary Society, Mrs. Parker, the Ladies' Aid Society, Mr. Cecil Williamson, the young people. All spoke in glowing terms of the progress of the church under Mr. Keith's pastorate, and asked that some arrangement be made so that he could remain as pastor of the church. They expressed their desire to keep him here, and of their regret should he be translated to another Presbytery.

They decided, however, to make the translation, which will take effect on November 8. On that date the Rev. Mr. Keith will preach his farewell sermon, and two days later he will leave for his new field.

This morning the Rev. R. Pogue was appointed moderator pro tem. of Knox Church, and he will be in charge of the church during the vacancy. It is likely that Mr. Pogue will preach in Knox Church next Sunday morning after which a meeting of the congregation will be held to make some provision for a supply.

The Rev. D. A. Thompson and the Rev. Mr. Meyers, of Toronto, were appointed by Westminster Church to prosecute the call, and the responsibility fell upon Mr. Thompson who did his duty with great regret. He and others of the Presbytery expressed their regret at Mr. Keith's departure, and their appreciation of the effective work he had done as pastor of the Knox Church and a member of the Presbytery.

Mr. Keith replied that it had been an inspiration and a pleasure for him to work in the Peterborough Presbytery, and he could reciprocate the remarks made regarding him, to all members of the Presbytery. He made it known that he had been led to accept the call. He felt he had completed his work in Knox Church and trusted that a successor would lead the people into still greater fields of service. His call to Edmonton was unsought, and had every evidence of being providential.

The Rev. Mr. Keith has been pastor of Knox Church for seven and a half years, and just what place he holds in the estimation of his congregation was amply illustrated at the meeting of the Presbytery this morning when every department sent a representative asking for him to remain here. The progress of Knox Church since his coming to the city has been phenomenal, the new church being built and just very recently a fine new organ being installed.

Mr. Keith was moderator of Omemee, and in his place the Rev. Jas. Rollins was appointed to-day.

LONDON, October 23.—Despatches from Teneriffe to the Daily Mail indicate that the German cruiser Karlsruhe in South Aelantic has captured or sunk 15 British steam and sailing merchantmen during the last two or three weeks. Most of the crews were rescued and landed at Teneriffe. Both French and British cruisers have been constantly on the watch for the Karlsruhe but she is very slippery.

LONDON, October 23.—St. John Cavendish, aged 39, brother of the Duke of Devonshire, has been killed in action. He was captain of the first Life Guards, and was awarded a distinguished service order and medal in the Boer war.

Sir A. Beck Not To Speak

A short time ago an invitation was sent by Mayor Buller to Sir Adam Beck, asking him to address a meeting in this city on the Hydro Radial Scheme. An answer was received today from Sir Adam saying that he did not think the time was opportune on account of the unsettled condition of the money market and the fact that the Dominion government had not reached a conclusion yet in regard to the subsidy for the railway. He would also like to see the Hydro-Radial matters in this City in a more settled state before anything such as [illegible] was done.

Says Peterborough Is Ready To Drop Out of Canadian League

OTTAWA, Oct. 22. — At the next meeting of the Canadian Baseball League important matters in connection ith the prospects for next season will be dealt with. It was announced last week that the Erie franchise would be transferred and operated jointly between Berlin and Guelph. Business men of these two towns are ready to finance the undertaking. To this Manager Frank Shaughnessy, of the Ottawa is strongly opposed. He takes the stand that it would be better to have a six-club league. This would make it more compact and would benefit all the teams. For instance London and Ottawa could double their inter-city games and thus avoid the necessity of meeting the weak clubs so often. They would multiply the interest and avoid long spells of poor business, such as the Canadian league has had to put up with in the past. Hamilton, Brantford and Toronto could do likewise.

Shaughnessy thinks that a six club league would prove a success. He would take in London, Ottawa, Hamilton, Brantford, Toronto and St. Thomas. Just how the other clubs stand is unknown, but the question will have to be settled shortly, as it takes many months to prepare for a baseball campaign. It would be a good idea to try the six club league for one season at least, though there is every probability that there will not be any Canadian league next year unless the European war comes to an end. Should it continue after next spring, people won't pay much attention to baseball or any other branch of sport. There appears to be a lot of enthusiasm among the Guelph and Berlin business men, who were seriously hit through the withdrawal of Canadian league clubs from their towns last summer. They would gladly get back into the game.

According to the Peterborough papers there will not be any team in the Lift Lock city next summer. The Peterborough management has written each of the Canadian league clubs offering all their players for sale. Curley Blount is not on the list, as he had a one year contract and is now a free agent. The Peterborough backers have been heavy losers each year and have announced their readiness to throw up the sponge. They expect to ralize from the sale of their players enough to recuperate some of this year's losses. Their string includes Catchers Kelly and Miller; pitchers Schettler, Tracey, Sterling, Belting and Cresswell; infielders Dolan, King, Fox and Byrne, and outfielders Rooney and Welsh. They will have no difficulty in disposing of Schettler and Rooney. Kelly has already been drafted and they will receive $500 for him. Biddie Dolan, their first baseman, is a good one, though somewhat up in years. Rooney came from the Indianapolis Feds and is one of the most promising outfielders in the Canadian league. He hit about .300 and showed great speed on the bases. Rooney will be in demand all right and might make a welcome addition to the Ottawa outfield, where speed is required. There will be a couple of vacancies in the Ottawa garden next summer as Petie Powers is to be used regularly behind the bat and there is little likelihood of Rogers returning. He has decided to stick to the oil business down south. Hamilton should gobble up some of those Peterborough players. They need them badly, especially pitchers.

Mack's Own "Bonds" Hurt Chances of His Team Winning

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Connie Mack went into the 1914 world's series with fandom hailing him as the craftiest brainiest man in baseball. He emerged with the fans wondering if the hails were justified, for Connie, in the four battles against the Braves, made four bones that hurt his team's chances — probably killed their chances.

In the opinion of the fans who saw the third game, in Boston, Connie's worst bone was made in the tenth inning of the game when he permitted Joe Bush to remain in the box after the Athletics in their half of that inning had broken the deadlock by scoring two runs.

Connie certainly must have known that the crowd would get after Bush as no crowd ever got after a pitcher. And the crowd did get after the Athletic pitcher. More than thirty-four thousand fans hooted and yelled and howled in chorus at Bush as he took his place in the box—and they kept it up throughout the inning. The band in the left field bleachers opened up with the most horrible discords ever heard anywhere.

The bedlam was of a kind that beggars real description. It was tremendous, horrible, nerve racking, even for the spectators themselves. What must it have been for poor Bushy, the target of it all; the boy who was entrusted with the burden of thwarting nine determined baseball warriors and 35,000 fanatics.

Bush tried to ignore the hoots and howls. Bush, steady and sure up to that moment, crumpled — and the Braves tied the score and eventually won a game that seemed hopelessly lost when they went to bat in the tenth.

Had Connie Mack taken out Bush and put in Chief Bender the chances are 10 to 1 that the Indian would have held the Braves in check and saved the game for the Athletics. Times without number in his big league career Bender has lived through situations similar to that which Bush faced in the last half of the tenth, and Bender, old in pitching experience, old in standing up under the most terrific bombardment naturally figured that Bush would stand up under the strain. And in figuring so Connie made a bone that cost his team a game and made the count 3 to 0 against them, instead of 2 to 1, as it should have been.

Those who saw the four games cannot understand why Connie sent his men to the plate with orders to "kill the ball." These orders more than anything else sent the Mackmen to their world's series death. Instead of waiting out the Boston pitchers they swung at nearly everything that was offered. Result — Instead of getting free walks to first or a chance to hit the good ones, they fanned or got themselves into holes from which they couldn't emerge.

With the count 3 to 0 against him Connie sent Shawkey to the box in the final game — Shawkey who never before had pitched in a world series battle. He staked the Athletics chances on a Kid—and the Kid lost.

Why didn't Connie use Bender in that final game? Bender was the logical selection. He was ready and he was wild for another chance at the Braves. True, the Braves hammered him out of the box in the opening game, but the chanes of their repeating were remote.

Another prize bone of Connie's was to leave Schang behind the bat. Schang's work at bat and in the field was miserable. His throwing was off colour from the start. The slow footed braves stole eight bases on him and Schang caught only one man pilfering. Schang made only two hits during the four games, when a hit meant much for the Athletics' chances, he fanned. Jack Lapp is one of the best catchers in the game. And he's a hitter. Lapp blindfolded, couldn't have done much worse than Schang.

The Braves beat the Athletics because they outclassed them in every way. They won because they played the greatest world series baseball ever seen. But they ought to thank Connie Mack, and his blunders, for the fact that they won with such speed. But for Connie's bone in the tenth inning of the third game the series would have gone five games at least. Were it not for his other bones the series might have been longer.

But Connie blundered, Connie boned four times in a row and the wonderful Braves took advantage of each of them and dashed on to victory in record time.

TWO BRITISH BORN BOXERS TO FIGHT FOR TITLE IN THE STATES

(By Left Hook.

Freddie Welsh, champion lightweight of the world, and Charlie White, the best of the class Chicago ever produced, will battle in Milwaukee, Nov. 9th.

And that announcement, which appeared a few days ago, has a moral behind it.

How many boxing fans know that both Freddie Welsh and Charlie White were given up by doctors at the age of 16 years? And that they were pronounced physical weaklings with but a few years to live?

To-day those two frail, flat-chested boys stand at the top of the boxing profession — physical marvels— powerful human motors of strength and endurance.

Of course, training did it. But not training alone. Determination and constant application brought these two to the athletic perfection and boxing skill sufficient to make fight fans part with $12,000 or $15,000 to see them perform in the same ring.

Welsh attributes his physique to the fact that he is a vegetarian. He has not tasted meat since the time as a slender boy, he was told he had not much chance to spend many years among us.

Now, at 28, he is perhaps the speediest boxer in the ring and as near perfect physically as a man can be.

Warned by physicians, White's parents sent him to Bill O'Connell, the old-timer who runs a gym in Chicago. While taking his regular exercises Charlie developed so much speed with the gloves that O'Connell's attention was attracted. Two years later the frail kid developed into a pretty tough young fellow, was fighting the best of the feathers.

Charlie is now 22 years of age. Two years ago his greatest ambition was to get a match with Johnny Kilbane. But the feather-weight class couldn't hold him and now, with a few added pounds he is to meet the best of the lightweights. Even to-day he rarely scales over 131 in his ring togs.

His record is without a blemish, with the exception of a poor fight he made against Danny Webster on the Coast when a kid, and that Fourth of uly battle two years ago in New Orleans when the referee stopped the fight in the 14th round and gave Jack Britton the decision. White was outweighed and outreached, but not outfought. His recent knockout of Joe Azevedo redeemed him on the coast.

Many people believe—and Welsh believes, White is the toughest lightweight in America at the present time. Before Willie Ritchie went abroad to lose his title to Welsh, the Chicago boy won a wide shade over him in Milwaukee and nearly had him out in the first round. White's left hook has sent many a good boy to the canvas and Welsh will be no exception if he gets it over. Freddie can't lose his crown in this ten-round no-decision affair unless knocked out.

But Freddie's lighter blows come across with a great deal more rapidity than White can boast and they may bewilder Charlie enough to make his left useless, especially in a ten-round encounter.

It is a curious fact that both were born Britishers, White originally in Liverpool. His name is Charlie Anchove, and three brothers are fighters — Jack White, Battling White, and Billy Wagner—although none of them ever showed the class of Charlie.

Cy Reidyman Manages The 1915 Cockneys

LONDON, Oct. 22—If "Doc." Reisling will not return to manage the London Canadian League Club next Spring, it is altogether likely that Cy. Reidy will be tendered the management job by the local directors. Reidy has real managerial ability, and a great dea of baseball experience. It was "Doc" Reisling himself who stated in the summer that Cy was the most valuable man on the team for the manner in which he instilled "pep" into the players, and kept them fighting all the time. Cy has set his heart on becoming an umpire next season, and he wants to give up playing. If he could be persuaded to take the job he would prove a valuable man. He knows the Canadian League like a book, and has the weakness of every club at his finger tips. He would be one of the regular players and it is a playing manager that the London Club wants.

Federals To Raid Minor Organizations

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—The Federal League clubowners will answer the call to colours when the independent forces mobilize here at the Hotel Biltmore, Saturday and Sunday. One of the biggest schemes which the Feds. have up their sleeves was discovered to-day.

The meeting here was called primarily to plan a final raid on the National Association of Professional Baseball Clubs, of which more than forty minor leagues will assemble at Omaha, Neb., on November 10.

Try to Enlist Minors.

Saturday the Federals will probably appoint a committee to move en masse on Omaha next month, provided with funds to convert all the minor leagues possible. It was learned to-day that President Gilmore of the Federas has already engaged reservations in an Omaha hotel for the day when the minors will be there. What they hope to do is to persuade some of the minors to desert organized ball.

The convention of the minors at Omaha is going to be the largest gathering of baseball men in the history of the country. The minors, although now protected better than they ever have been by the National agreement, will seek further protection this year.

Will Force Majors' Hand.

They have been ignored by the major leagues of organized ball, and unless sweeping concessions are made there is every probability of their joining hands with the Federal League.

It is felt in well-informed circles that the minors, particularly the Class AA. and Class A. leagues, will demand fair treatment at the hands of the majors. That, they say, is more than they have been getting. How the majors are going to accede to or circumvent the just demands of the minors without weakening their already precarious position is a problem which has the organized forces in a quandry.

WEDDING BELLS

HOGATH—BARNARD.

At St. John's Church, Norway, a pretty wedding was solemnized of Kate, third daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Barnard, to Mr. James Hogath. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a charming dress of ivory lace, trimmed with satin and seed pearls; also veil and orange blooms. She carried a bouquet of white roses and lillies of the valley, and was attended by Miss Mary Hogath, who wore a white shadow lace dress, trimmed with pale pink satin and white hat, with plume, and carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations. The bridegroom's gift to the bride was a gold wrist watch. The bridesmaid's gift from the groom was a pain gold-bracelet. Mr. Fred Barnard was best man. The Rev. W. L. Baynes Reid, officiated. After the ceremony a reception was given at the home of the bride's parents. The happy couple left at 5 o'clock to spend the honeymoon at Peterborough. THE INSTRUCTIONAL SERVICES AT ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

His Lordship the Bishop of Kingston Will Deliver the Last of the Evening Series This Evening--Devotional Addresses

To-night at 8 o'clock will witness the last of the evening series of instructions as given by his Lordship, the Bishop of Kingston (Ont.)—Dr. Bidwell, in the Anglican Church of St. John; and there will be held to-morrow at 4.30 p.m. the last of the afternoon series. This is for women only, the bishop desiring to have a heart-to-heart talk to them to-morrow, as he will have with men on Sunday afternoon next at 3 o'clock. The whole of the series has been marked by a strong devotional feeling. The congregations at each meeting showing by their demeanour and attention how fully they appeared to realise the efforts the Bishop was taking to arouse them from any state of apathy or lethargy into which they may have fallen. There have been no sensational effects, no attempt at sudden—and but too frequently only passing—conversions; but rather the instructor's efforts have apparently been devoted to the fanning of the flame which had been allowed to become lowered.

Dr. Bidwell is a fluent and forceful teacher. He possesses a winning manner and voice and his hearers cannot fail but to be carried away with him. He is the 'suaviter in modo'; not the 'fortiter in re'; although there is no lack of firmness about this prelate. Far from adopting sensational methods, the ultimate value of which is very doubtful, these instructions on the principles of our faith were presented in a devout, quiet, winning manner.

On a previous occasion, viz., on St. George's Day, in this current year of grace, Dr. Bidwell—an Englishman—preached the sermon. On his appearance then he created a profound impression, and there can be but little doubt that his, all too brief, visit here will have been productive of considerable permanent good.

On Sunday next there will be services at the usual hours, at which the Bishop will preach. He will also administer the Holy Communion at 8.30 a.m., and after the evening service a reception will be held in his honour in the St. John's school-house. Members of any denomination will receive a cordial welcome at any of these services, as well as to the meeting for men only in the church at 3 o'clock.

SIR EVELYN WOOD TELLS SOME INTERESTING WAR TIME ANECDOTES

Field Marshall Sir Evelyn Wood told some interesting stories at a meeting which he addressed in London recently. Referring to the charges of brutality made against the Germans, he said:

"We need not fear that the British soldier will ever descend to making reprisals. Thirty-five years ago I was commanding 18,000 men, who fought against 23,000 brave Zulus for five hours and a half. They attacked with the undaunted courage of savages who did not realize the effect of modern rifles, and the following morning we buried, besides a vast number elsewhere, 884 close up to one face of the lagered waggons behind which our men had stood. When the fight was over I desired a few friendly Zulus who were attached to the companies under my command to collect men of every regiment promising for each uninjured man a 'stick' of tobacco. Next morning there was a group outside my tent of magnificent specimens of humanity. When I got all the information I required, I said, 'Two months ago, when after a skirmish our doctor's cared for your wounded, and a few days later you overwhelmed our camp, killing 1,500 of our men, you did not spare those who had been attending on your own brothers. Will one of you say why I should not kill you?' Said a young giant, 'May I speak, O. Master? You ask why you should not kill us; I answer, because it is not the English custom.'

First Duty of a Citizen.

"This is the character our race bears in the North, South, East, and West Africa, and I hope it may ever continue, for reprisals are not only useless, but would sensibly lessen the grand fighting value of our soldiers. The troops at the assault of Delhi in 1857, when embittered by horrible stories, many exaggerated, and at Jhensi in 1858, were seen deliberately lifting women and little children out of the line of fire. Such conduct is a part of our national inheritance."

Sir Evelyn said this war would test Britons and deepen the spirit of self-sacrifice and devotion to duty. Our people were realizing now that the first duty of a citizen was to fit himself to defend his country. That we had yet time to repair our refusal to admit the accuracy of this truism was due to the unceasing watch of our seamen in mine-strawn waters.

Story of the Kaiser.

"In June, 1890, when the German Emperor saw the Aldershot Division carrying out tactical operations, pointing to some cavalry in the distance, he asked me: 'How many squadrons have you got in the field to-day?' I replied: 'Sixteen, your Majesty,' when he said 'If you will come and see my manoeuvres in September I will show you 64 squadrons.'

"We admit the Germans are brave, but so far they have not ridden over our regiments. Their horses are trained for two years before they are passed into the ranks, and while it is impossible for one man to fight three or four with a certainty of success, I have always believed that individually our cavalry are better horsemen, and will certainly attack without hesitation twice their number of Germans."

Sir Evelyn told a good story of Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien: "In 1882 I was left 12 miles outside Alexandria with six battalions to cover a frontage of over five miles, which in the previous week had been penetrated by the enemy. I sent an order into Alexandria for a smart subaltern, who was to go to the Khedive's stable and all the saddlers' shops and produce in one day some mounted infantry. Smith-Dorrien received the order at 1:30 p.m., and at 6:30, with 61 horses, three mules, and a donkey, carrying Derbyshire men, the Sherwood Foresters, few of them had ridden before, he passed me at Ramlah, went out into the desert, engaged an Egyptian outpost, killed its commander, and never let them inside our line again."

French "Always Reading."

A story of Sir John French followed: "When I inspected his regiment, he being a major, many years ago, I asked the colonel, pointing to him: 'Of what value?' He replied: 'Forever reading military books.' He has been reading ever since! In 1885, when we were retiring across the Bayuda desert, after the failure to save Gordon, I saw Major French coming back the last man of the last section of the rearguard."

"Charivari" Cost $73.20

As a result of a "charivari" ten strapping Otonabee youths appeared before Magistrate Dumble in the County Court, this afternoon, and were charged with causing damage and injury to preserves, pickles, fish, bread meat, cream, milk and a screen door valued at $6.70, the property of a young Otonabee farmer. Mr. Widdifield appeared for the complainant. It was alleged that the complainant, who was married a week or so ago, returned with wife wife to the farm two days after the ceremony, and that in the evening the youths broke into the cellar and caused the damage mentioned. They all pleaded guilty.

In passing sentence the Magistrate said: "I cannot help expressing my disapproval of such conduct. He fined the defendants $5 each and costs, and $10 for retribution, in all $73.20. The youths lined up and paid.

FINE SPIRIT SHOWN

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—When a week ago I left England I had just returned from France, and had motored many miles in both countries, says Richard Harding Davis, in the Tribune. Everywhere in this greatest crisis of the century I found the people showing the most undaunted and splendid spirit. To their common enemy they are presenting an unbroken front. The civilian is playing his part just as loyally as the soldier; the women as bravely as the men.

Sacrifices Great and Small.

Every one in England and France is making sacrifices great and small. As long ago as the middle of September it was so cold along the Aisne that I have seen the French, sooner than move away from the open fires they had made, risk the falling shells. Since then it has grown much colder, and two weeks ago Kitchener issued an invitation to the English people to send in what blankets they could spare for the army in the field and in reserve. The idea was to dye the blankets khaki, and then turn them over to the supply department. In one week, so eagerly did the people respond to this appeal, Kitchener had to publish a card stating that no more blankets were needed. He had received over half a million.

Without Precedent.

The reply to Kitchener's appeal for recruits was as prompt and generous. The men came so rapidly that the standard for enlistment was raised. That is, I beleive, in the history of warfare without precedent. Men who are not accepted as recruits are enrolled as special constables. They are those who could not without facing ruin neglect their business. They have signed on as policemen, and each night for four hours patrol the posts of the regular bobbies who have gone to the front.

Lord Roberts called upon all racing men, yachtsmen and big game shots to send him for the use of the officers at the front their field glasses. The response was amazingly generous.

Other people gave their pens. The men whose names are best known to you in British literature are at the service of the Government, and at this moment are writing exclusively for the Foreign Office. They are engaged in answering the special pleading of the Germans and in writing monographs, appeals for recruits, explanations of why England is at war. They do not sign what they write. They are, of course, not paid for what they write.

Stage Helps.

One theatre is giving all the money taken in at the door to the Red Cross; all of them admit men in uniform free or at half-price, and a long list of actors have gone to the front. Among them are several who are well known in New York. Robert Loraine has received an officer's commission in the Royal Flying Corps, anad Guy Standing in the navy. Gerald Du Maurier has organized a reserve battalion of actors, artists and musicians.

There is not a day passes that the most prominent members of the theatrical world are not giving their services free to benefit performances in aid of Belgian refugees, Red Cross societies or to some one of the funds under royal patronage.

Every one is helping. Each day the King and Queen and Princess Mary review troops or visit the wounded in some hospital; and the day before sailing, while passing Buckingham Palace, I watched the young Prince of Wales change the guard. In a businesslike manner he was listening to the sentries repeat their orders; and in turn a young sergeant, also in a most businesslike manner, was in whispers coaching the boy officer in the proper manner to guard the home of his royal parents.

OFFICIAL REPORT OF RECENT ACTIVITIES OF BRITISH FORCES

Increased Numbers Have Enabled Them to Lend Greater Assistance to the French in the Battles Along the Aisne---Brilliant Exploit of Cavalry Patrols---Homesteads Are Everywhere Torn to Pieces.

COMBATANTS BURIED WHERE THEY FELL

LONDON, Oct. 23.—The official information bureau has given out another account of recent operations by an eye-witness. This recital is dated 17th October, and explains at the outset that with the arrival of reinforcements the British have been able to play a more prominent part in exerting pressure on the enemy and in the gradual extension to the northward, which has thrown British troops to the Franco-Belgian border.

"Up till recently," says the statement, "the extension northward had been carried out by the French alone."

OPERATING IN TWO DISTRICTS.

The narrative goes on to explain that there have been actions in the two western theatres of the war, from Nieuport south, and along the Aisne and continues as follows:

"In both these theatres the results attained, without being in any way decisive, have been entirely satisfactory and in furtherance of the general scheme which the allied armies are carrying out in co-operation.

"In the southern of the two spheres in which we have been engaged on the Aisne, our right wing has been maintaining its pressure without actually moving forward, while in the northern sphere our left wing has advanced a considerable distance in face of some opposition.

"On the Aisne, since the repulse inflicted on the enemy the night of 10th October there has been no serious fighting, and less artillery action than usual for the reason that the misty and occasionally rainy weather has rendered observation almost impossible, and militated against the employment of guns.

On the night of 13th October, the enemy commenced an attack which was not pushed through, and which may be regarded as a demonstration. Our patrols have been active with the bayonet at night, and they have accounted for numerous small parties of German infantry left to occupy their front trenches. But the positions of the opposing forces have remained practically unchanged.

"In the north of France the fighting so far has been of a preparatory nature alone. As stated, ground has been gained by us, but the misty weather has hampered aerial reconnaissances, and at times rendered the artillery co-operation almost impossible, which factors, taken together with the nature of the terrain, has made progress somewhat slow.

A "BLIND" COUNTRY FOR WAR.

"Before the actual course of events in this quarter is recounted, it will assist to an understanding of what our troops are doing if the country which they are operating is described."

The narrative here describes the nature of the country along the Belgian frontier, explaining that hedges are frequent, that trees often restrict the view, and that means of communication are bad.

"Is is in a blind country of this nature," the narrator resumes, "that our advanced guards near the Belgian frontier are engaging the advanced troops of the enemy. The latter consists in some places of cavalry supported by Jager and Schultz detachments, with large numbers of machine guns and others with larger bodies of infantry.

"As was the case in our advance up the Aisne, the enemy is making every effort to delay our progress, no doubt to give time for the stronger forces behind to perfect their arrangements. In general, they take every advantage that is to be obtained from the ground and conceal themselves well, making use of ditches and hedges and the villages they hold, together with buildings, many of which have been placed in a state of defence; furthermore, they occupy narrow trenches with inconspicuous parapets on the side of the villages.

MACHINE GUNS IN ROOMS.

"Machine guns often are placed in the centre of rooms whence they can command an approach through a window. So far in our advance we have inflicted considerable loss on these detachments, in spite of the fact that they retreat under cover of darkness wherever this is possible.

"But their resistance is by no means passive, and they have made several determined counter attacks in order to free themselves and throw us back. Many of the prisoners falling into our hands have expressed surprise at being opposed by the British in this quarter.

"To the north of the Lys, although for reasons already given, an adequate reconnaissance ahead has been practically impossible, and in spite of the fact that the Germans held a strong position on a high bridge between Godewaersvelde and Bailleul, one of our cavalry forces would not be denied. Supported by infantry it has driven the enemy back steadily.

"Some hard fighting has taken place in this direction, especially in the neighbourhood of Mon des Cats, where Prince Maximilian of Hesse, a son of the youngest sister of Emperor William, was mortally wounded on 12th October.

"On 13th October a brilliant exploit was performed by one of our cavalry patrols coming suddenly upon a German machine gun detachment. The subaltern in command at once gave the order to charge, with the result hat some of the Germans were killed, the rest scattered, and the gun captured and carried off.

MUST CARRY PLANKS AND LADDERS.

"On the right, to the south of the Lys, progress has been slower, partly because the terrain affords greater facilities to the force on the defence, and partly because the enemy has had more time for preparation and is in greater strength. The numerous dykes in this low-lying part of the country are so broad and deep as to necessitate the transport of planks and ladders by which to cross them. It is in this quarter that the most obstinate combats for the possession of villages have so far taken place and that the enclosed country has rendered the co-operation of artillery most difficult, except wher the villages attacked contain a church

THE SUFFERING OF BELGIUM

United States Military Man Tells of Conditions of Which He Has Been a Witness

Major Louis Livingston Seaman is not only a military man and a medical man, but a traveller and journalist of international repute. His work in the Balkans and elsewhere in connection with the Red Cross movement has made his name familiar all over the United States. He went to the front some weeks ago as special correspondent of the Independent, New York, one of the liveliest weekly in that great city. In view of the statements written by him concerning German atrocities in Belgium, the publication of which the pro-Germans in the United States considered as a virtual breach of neutrality, Major Seaman was requested by the authorities to explain his action, as it is contrary to regulations for an officer of a neutral country to express himself definitely as a partisan in favour of either combatant.

On the day of the Zeppelin massacre at Antwerp, Major Seaman sent the following letter to President Wilson:

"My dear Mr. President,—Preferring liberty of speech to military or other advice where it is denied, especially when silence would be a crime against humanity, I herewith tender my resignation as a member of the Medical Reserve Corps of the United States Army."

(The following correspondence, within the limits imposed by the censorship, hints at the pitiful sufferings of which Major Seaman has been a witness, and which impelled him to take this action.—Editor.)

"I am writing from the Hotel de la Paix in Ghent, the city whose people for two thousand years have done so much to wring from their rulers the concessions upon which constitutional government is founded. In feudal days it was one of the first of the Free Cities of Europe, and its historic monuments bear witness to the part it played during the Reformation. I believe no city on earth has contributed more to the development of civilisation than Ghent. Here, the 24th of December next, it was the purpose of representatives of Great Britain and the United States to celebrate in the old Convent des Chartreux the one hundredth anniversary of the signing of the Treaty of Peace betwen Great Britain and America. Two months ago in the Royal Casino and Palais de Fete the international exhibition of flowers was held. France sent many roses of rarest hue and variety, many of which still adorn the extensive exhibition grounds, and in the Palais de Danse, the French Opera Company made gay music.

"But what a change! The Palais de Fete is now a Palais de Misere, transformed almost in a night. Fourteen thousand desolate peasant women and little children, refugees from the country near Louvain, Malines, and Termonde, whose husbands or fathers or brothers had been butchered or driven to parts unknown, their homes pillaged and burned, their crops destroyed, their only possessions the clothing on their backs, have been or are now being sheltered here. Could the reader but hear for himself the tales of suffering and horror that come from every mouth, or see the ghastly wounds of many, even among the little children, that testimony to the agonies they have undergone, his indignation would know no bounds.

"I have participated as an officer or observer in eight campaigns, in almost every country in the world, but in none have I ever witnessed such exhibitions of atrocious barbarism as this war is furnishing.

"Thank heaven there is another side to this dark picture. In that Palais de Fete, now the Palais de Misere, the Red Cross is doing a noble work of rescue and mercy. Refugees are carefully treated, clothed and housed. Many had not tasted food for two days preceding their arrival here. M. de Bruyne, who so ably represented the Burgomaster at the meetings of the International Peace Celebration, some fourteen thousand in number, in a systematic way, sending them to suburban villages where houses are open to them, shipping them to Britian, and so distributing them that they may eventually be repatriated. I was informed at Ostend that children under fifteen would not be received in Britain as refugees, but I have since learned that the Government is welcoming all.

The work of the Red Cross in Ghent cannot be too highly praised. It has many hospitals (ambulances, as they are called here) under its direction, and is working most efficiently and in perfect harmony with the military authorities. The most severely wounded are sent to the military hospital, while others are distributed to the hotels, schools, convents, private houses, and private clinics, which have been thrown open for them. At present comparatively few of the severely wounded remain, the majority having been transferred to other cities in anticipation of the coming of the enemy. Thousands of empty beds, with attendants and nurses from the most aristocratic and highly cultured families in the land, are waiting the arrival of more, ready to care for them with gentleness and skill, German and Belgian alike, in surroundings of elegance such as the majority of them never dreamed of.

Many of the shrapnel wounds are terrible, shattering bony structure and causing extensive laceration of tissue. A very large proportion of the bullet wounds are found in the legs and feet, showing that the Germans, who shoot from the hip, are firing low. The Belgian shoots from the shoulder. Dr. Dulet in Anvers has a dum-dum ball which he extracted from a wounded Belgian. Many of the invalided suffer from extreme exhaustion after their three days' incessant fighting, but they soon rally and beg to return to the colours.

The three characteristics of the Belgian people that have most deeply impressed me during the past month are their patriotism, their bravery, and their gentleness. In the military, civic, and Red Cross hospitals of Bruges, Ostend, Ghent, and Antwerp, over forty of which I have visited, the wounded German soldier has always received as careful surgical, medical and nursing care as the Belgian whom he came to murder, for this most unjust war was deliberately planned for conquest and extermination.

Whatever may be the outcome of this monstrous holocaust the justice and honours and the humanities belong to Belgium. When the victorious Allies make their triumphant entry into Berlin (and I believe they will) the Belgian should have the line, and royal restitution should be made for his sacrifice, in memory of Liege, Malines, and Louvain. All honour to little Belgium!"

"DARKNESS AND DAWN"

By Geo. Allan England

He paused. Silence overhung the assemblage save for the fretful cry of children here and there, squeezed in the press or clinging to their mothers' backs after the fashion of the Merucaans.

Afar, on the walls, the faint and raucous quarrelling of the sea-birds drifted through the fog. Allan drew breath and began again:

"In those places, my people, those far places whence your forefathers came, are many wonders. Betimes it is dark, as always here. Betimes a great fire mounts into the upper air and makes the whole world brighter than around your flaming well. In the dark time lesser fires travel in the air. Of birds there are many kinds, strangely coloured. Of beasts, many kinds—I cannot make you understand because none of you have ever seen any animal but fish and bird. But I speak the truth. There be many other creatures with good flesh to eat, and the skins of them are proper for soft clothing.

"Here you have only weeds of the sea. There we have tall growing things, many hundred spedi high, and rich fruit, delicious to the taste, grows on some skinds. In a few words, it is a place of wondrous plenty, where you can all live more easily than here, and with more pleasure—far—"

Again he ceased his discourse, but still continued to pace up and down the open space under the swaying skeletons on the poles above.

Through the dense press of the Folk murmurs were wandering. Man spoke to man, and many a new thought was coming now to birth among those white barbarians.

The elders, too, were whispering together: "So runs the ancient tradition. So said the ancient man! Can it be true, indeed?"

Stern continued, more and more earnestly, with the sweat now beginning to dot his brow:

"It were too long, my people, to tell you everything about that land of ours above. Only remember it is richer far and far more beautiful than this, your place of darkness and of clouds. It is the ancient home of your fathers in the very long ago. It is waiting for you once again, more fertile and more beautiful than ever. My errand is to carry you thither—two or three at a time. At last I shall be able to take you all.

"Then the world will begin to be as it once was, before the great explosion destroyed all but a few of your people, who were my people once. Will any of you—any two bold men—believe my words and go with me? Will any be as brave as—the patriarch?"

He flung the veiled taunt loudly at them, with a raising of both arms.

"I have spoken truth! Now, answer!"

He ceased, and for a short time there was silence. Then spoke Vreenya:

"O Kromno, master! We would question you!"

"I will answer and say only the thing that is."

"First, can our people live in that other, lighter air?"

"They can live. We have prepared caves for you. At first you shall not see the light. Only little by little you shall see it, and you and your children will change, till at last you shall be as I am and as your people were in the old days!"

Vreenya pondered, while tense interest held the elders and the Folk. Then he nodded, for his understanding—like that of all—was keen in spite of his savagery.

"And we can eat, O Kromno? This flesh of beasts you speak of may be good. This strange fruit may be good. I know not. It may also be as the poison weeds of our sea to us. But, if so, there are fish in those waters of the upper world?"

"There are fish, Vreenya, and of the best, and many! Near the caves runs a river—"

"A what, master?"

"A going of the waters. In those waters live fish without number. At the dark times you can catch them with nets, even as here. The dark times are half of each day. You shall have many hours for the fishing. Even that will suffice to live; but the flesh and fruits will not hurt you. They are good. There will be food for all, and far more than enough for all!"

Vreenya pondered again.

"We would talk together, we elders," he said, simply.

"It meets my pleasure," answered Allan. "And when ye have talked, I desire your answer!"

He crossed his arms, faced the multitude, and waited, while the elders gathered in a little group by the dungeon and for some minutes conferred in low and earnest tones.

Outwardly, the man seemd calm but his soul burned within him and his heart was racing violently.

For on this moment, he well knew, hung the world's destiny. Should they decide to venture forth into the outer world all would be well. If not, the long labour, the plans, the hopes were lost for ever.

Well he knew the stubborn nature of the Folk. Once their minds set, nothing on earth could ever stir them.

"Thank God I managed that he about the patriarch!" thought Allan quickly. "If I'd slipped up on that, and told them he died at the very minute the sunlight struck him, it would have been all off, world without end. Hope it doesn't make a row later. But if it does, I'll face it. The main and only thing now is to get 'em started. They've got to go, that's all there is about it.

"Gad! After all, it's a terrific proposition I'm putting up to these simple fishers of the Abyss. I'm asking them, just on my say-so, to root up the life, the habits, the traditions of more than a thousand years and make a leap into the dark—into the light, I mean.

"I'm asking them to leave everything they've ever known for thirty generations and take a chance on what to them must be the wildest and most hair-brained adventure possible to imagine. To risk homes, families, lives, everything just on my unsupported word. Jove! Columbus's proposal to his men was a mere afternoon jaunt compared with this! If they refuse, how can I blame them? But if they accept—God! what stuff I'll know they're made of! With material like that to work with, the conquest of the world's in sight already."

His eyes wandering nervously along the front ranks of the waiting Folk, dimly illumined by the dull blue glow of the fire-well tsat shone through the mist, suddenly stopped with apprehension. His brows contracted, and on his heart it seemed as though a gripping hand had suddenly laid hold.

"H'yemba, the smith, again! D——n him! H'yemba!" he muttered, in sudden anger strongly tinged with fear.

The smith, in fact, was standing there a little to the left of him, huge and sinewed hands loosely clasped in front of him, face sinister, eyes glowing like two malevolent evil fires.

Allan noted the defiant poise of the body, the vast breadth of the shoulders, the heavy hang of the arms, biceped like a gorilla's.

For a minute the two men looked each other steadfastly in the eye, each measuring the other. Then suddenly the voice of Vreenya broke the tension.

"O Kromno, we have spoken. Will you hear us?"

Stern faced him, a strange sinking at his heart, almost as though the foreman of a jury stood before him to announce either freedom or sentence of death.

But, holding himself in check, lest any sign of fear or nervousness betray him, he made answer:

"I will hear you. Speak!"

"We have listened to your words. We believe you speak truth. Yet—"

"Yet what? Out with it, man!"

"Yet will we not compel any man to go. All shall be free—"

"Thank God!" breathed Allan, with a mighty sigh.

"—Free to stay or go, as they will. Our village is too full, even now. We have many children. It were well that some should make room for others. Those who dare, have our consent. Now, speak you to the people, O Kromno, and see who chooses the upper world with you!"

Once more Allan turned toward the assemblage. But before he had found time to frame the first question in this unfamiliar speech, a disturbance somewhat to the left interrupted him.

There came a jostling, a pushing, a sound of voices in amazement, anger, approbation, doubt.

Into the clear space stepped H'yemba, the smith. His powerful right hand he raised on high. And boldly, in a loud voice, he cried:

"Folk of the Merucaans, this can not be!"

CHAPTER XIII.

"It cannot me? Who says it cannot be? Who dares stand out and challenge me?"

"I, H'yemba, the man of iron and of flame!"

Stern faced him, every nerve and fibre quivering with sudden passion. At realization that in the exact psychological moment when success lay almost in his hand, this surly brute almost in his hand, this surly brute might baffle him, he felt a wave of murderous hate.

He realized that the dreaded catastrophe had indeed come to pass. Now his sole claim to chiefship lay in his power to defend the title. Failure meant—death.

"You?" he shouted, advancing on the smith.

His opponent only leered and grimaced offensively. Then without even having vouchsafed an answer, he swung towards the elders.

"I challenge!" he exclaimed. "I have the right to words!"

Vreenya nodded, fingering his long white beard.

"Speak on!" he answered. "Such is our ancient custom."

"Oh, people," cried the smith, suddenly facing the throng, "will ye follow one who breaks the tribal manners of our folk? One who disdains our law. Who has neglected to obey it? Will ye trust yourselves into hands stained with law-breaking of our blood?"

TWO WOMEN SAVED FROM OPERATIONS

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—Their Own Stories Here Told.

Edmonton, Alberta, Can. — "I think it is no more than right for me to thank you for what your kind advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound have done for me.

"When I wrote to you some time ago I was a very sick woman suffering from female troubles. I had organic inflammation and could not stand or walk any distance. At last I was confined to my bed, and the doctor said I would have to go through an operation, but this I refused to do. A friend advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and now, after using three bottles of it, I feel like a new woman. I most heartily recommend your medicine to all women who suffer with female troubles. I have also taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills, and think they are fine. I will never be without the medicine in the house."—Mrs. FRANK EMSLEY, 908 Columbia Avenue, Edmonton, Alberta.

The Other Case.

Beatrice, Neb.—"Just after my marriage my left side began to pain me and the pain got so severe at times that I suffered terribly with it. I visited three doctors and each one wanted to operate on me but I would not consent to an operation. I heard of the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was doing for others and I used several bottles of it with the result that I haven't been bothered with my side since then. I am in good health and I have two little girls."—Mrs. R. B. CHILD, Beatrice, Neb.

Cured of Piles and Eczema

By Using Three Boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mr. Abram Buhr, Herbert, Sask., writes.—"I want to say that I was troubled with eczema and piles and suffered greatly from the itching, burning sensations caused by these annoying ailments. I sent for a free sample of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and this did me so much good that I bought three boxes more, and after using same was cured of both eczema and piles."

This is the kind of letters we receive daily from people who have been cured of these distressing skin diseases by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. No matter how skeptical you might be, you could not read these letters for many days without concluding that Dr. Chase's Ointment is undoubtedly the most prompt relief and certain cure for these ailments.

If you have doubts send for a free sample box and be convinced. It was by use of a free sample that Mr. Buhr was convinced of the merits of this treatment. For sale at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

THE PASSAGE OF THE CANUCKS

An Armada That Stretched as Far as the Eye Could See

NEW YORK, Oct. 23—A line of grey transports led by a pilot boat and two British cruisers, and flanked by an armada of battleships, cruisers and destroyers; a line so long that it laid the smudge of its smoke against the sky as far as sailors could see to the east and west—such was the fleet that carried Canada's troops to England, and its convoys, as glimpsed from the decks of the Minnewaska, 370 miles from the mouth of the Thames, on October 10. Officers of the steamer told of the splendid spectacle upon her arrival here to-day.

There were thirty-two transports in the line, and they churned the water of one another's wakes at distances of half a mile to a mile. Each transport flew the British flag, and each was painted the battle colour of the sea, steel grey, even to the funnels. Well to the front of the long line, perhaps five miles in advance, steamed the leader—apparently sent ahead to make sure the way was clear, for she carried no troops—with a cruiser to the starboard and another to port forward.

All the transports were converted passenger liners or merchantmen, and some of them were recognized, or at least it is thought they were, by the Minnewaska's officers, who viewed the wonderful maritime procession through glasses.

The fleet really moved in three lines: The transports sandwiched between a line of warships on each side. Among the warships were many destroyers sent out from British ports to reinforce the larger war craft as the fleet neared its destination.

The day was one of brilliant sunshine, the sky was cloudless, and the distance of the Minnewaska from the line was five miles.

Notwithstanding the fact that the British ensign floated over the liner, a cruiser darted out from the line of convoys, circled the Minnewaska, came quite close and steamed alongside till the last transport was a speck on the horizon. Then the cruiser turned about and steamed away, without having flashed a word to the liner, either by wireless or signal, to join the rear guard.

A HOMELY, PATHETIC PICTURE OF A FRENCHWOMAN AND WAR

IN FRANCE, Oct. 19 The old woman was busy feeding her chickens as we rode up.

You must come vite ma tante, says the officer in charge of the rounding-up party. "We will give you a lift."

"But I cannot leave my pullets" says the old countrywoman, aghast. "They will starve."

"You must come, ma tante, repeats the officer, inflexibly. "I am sorry for you, ma mere; but this bitter time we must make sacrifices. Get your clothes, old lady. W cannot wait now."

"But my pullets!" wails the old woman again. "They will starve if I am not here to feed them."

"Come, come, old lady," says the officer, and signs to his sergeant. • • "Diamount, Jean, and help her pack."

But the old woman backs up against the coop and fiddles a moment behind her with her left hand. Abruptly she has the door open and with a movement wonderfully quick for so old a body she steps inside, among her beloved poultry and slams to the wire-covered door.

There is a tumultous flapping and fluttering of bewildered poultry, and the air inside the coop is full for some moments of dust and feathers. Then the chaos subsides, and the woman looks out defiantly from her refuge within the coop.

The officer looks at me and laughs gently, yet with a queer little look of unexpected understanding in his eyes

"Ah, Monsjur," he whispers, "the poor old body! It breaks their hearts. But how many hearts are breaking these days! I have seen them thus many times these last days."

Then he dismounts and goes forward himself to the coop. He does his best to persuade the old woman to listen to reason and come out; but she is too old and too frightened, and too rooted to year-long customs and habits.

"No, no! I will not come. My pullets—they will starve," she says, reiterating endlessly.

"But the Germans will come, ma mere," he says, patiently. "They will kill your pullets and eat them."

"Never!" screams the old woman.

The situation has become impossible. The old woman is insensible to reason, totally unable to face and comprehend this sudden new necessity which war has brought across her quiet life.

Picture the scene as I see it in that moment, standing, pitiful and silent—helpless as all the world is in this moment to help the old body.

She stands in there, backed rigidly against the far side of the coop, with the chickens crowding away into the corners, cackling uneasily. Outside the officer stands, silent; for he had ceased to expostulate. The Sergeant, a big, black-bearded man, is crying quite frankly, and I see that several of the other men are in tears. It is an extraordinary moment, but I am getting used here to seeing these Frenchmen show emotion like a woman one hour and fight like the incarnate spirit of war the next. I comprehend their tears, though I am very far from tears myself—only full of a great pity for the old woman.

Thus this moment of drama around an old hencoop, and then, suddenly, action—showing the iron underneath the surface in these men who are not ashamed of crying.

The officer turns quietly and says three brief words to the Sergeant. The Sergeant and two of the men stp forward and around the front and sides of the coop. There is a sudden crashing of woodwork, and the coop is torn apart. Then—an old woman, screaming wildly, insanely, and a vast fluttering and clucking of outraged chickenhood!

They left the old woman fighting and kicking, out of the ruins of the coop, and the soldiers catch the chickens as they came soaring and clucking out in all directions.

The sergeant and his helper take the old woman into her little house and there, I presume, help her to pack, for a few minutes later she comes out very white-faced and rigid, carrying a small bird cage and a clock, while the sergeant carries a bundle on his broad back, tied up in a bed quilt.

The old woman is not allowed to pass near the coop, but is taken to the rear and put aboard a light waggon, along with a number of other unfortunates.

The sergeant comes back, and the officer whispers something to him and I notice that he passes him a couple of twenty-franc pieces.

The big Sergeant mutters something—nodding toward the disrupted coop, and after a moment the officer nods.

"Very well, Jean," he says. "Just one, but no more. We can't cart all the live stock on the countryside!"

From the coop I hear sounds that tell me unmistakably that chickens are being converted into poultry, and I glance for explanation to the officer.

"If we leave them," he tells me, "they will only be destroyed. They will be better in our camp pot tonight."

Just that he tells me. Not a whisper about the fact that out of his own pocket he has sent forty francs to the old woman to recompense her for the poultry which she was bound to lose.

Five minutes later we were ready to move on, and I went to the rear to see one of the loaded waggons start off to the southward. In the tail end of it the old woman sat upon her big bundle, done up in the old bed quilt. In one hand was her bird cage. The other was gripped on (I doubt not) the lieutenant's two gold pieces. In her lap reposed snugly two things—her clock and one of her hens, which I guessed the big black-bearded Sergeant had begged for her.

The waggon went away to the south ward, and we moved forward on our errand of mercy and pain; for we had to see that all the country for a certain area was empty of non-combatants.

Twelve hours later great flames were rising up in our rear. Then hen coop and the little farm were going up to heaven in smoke, along with many other, on the borders of the great Forest of Compiegne.

Healthy, Wrinkle-Free Skin Easy to Have

A dull, drab, muddy complexion, or an over-red, blotchy, pimply or freckled skin, can by a quite simple, harmless and inexpensive method, be changed to one of flower-like radiance and purity. One ounce of common mercolized wax, sold by druggists generally, will remove the most unsightly complexion in from one to two weeks. By its remarkable absorptive power, the withered, faded or discoloured layer of thin film-skin which hides the healthier skin underneath, is gradually flecked off in tiny, almost invisible particles. This is done so gently there is no inconvenience, and no trace is left on the skin except that of enhanced beauty. The wax is smeared on like cold cream before retiring, and removed in the morning with warm water.

If the skin be wrinkled or scarry, a face bath made by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pt. witch hazel, will be found most effective. Combining both astringent and tonic properties, this tightens the skin and brings up its succulent tissues.

WHEN SPITHEAD SAW BATTLE

Henry VIII. Watched Attack of French Fleet in 1545

Actual naval warfare has been witnessed by a King of England at Spithead. In July, 1545, Henry VIII. watched from Southsea Castle the attack by the French fleet upon the English fleet which was to have gone against the French shores. The two days of skirmishing had no decisive result, but the English fleet suffered one great loss. The Mary Rose, the pride of the navy, a four-castled 60-gun ship of 600 tons, overweighted by her ordnance, suddenly heeled over at Spithead, in consequence, says Raleigh, of "a little sway in casting the ship about, her ports being within 16 inches of the water." Some 600 men went down with her—about 100 fewer than those lost with the Royal George 237 years later.

HOW A HERO DIED

Captain Bartleiot Never Flinched Even When His Leg Was Shot Off

The finest story of the first big fight between the British and Germans in the North Sea is that of the Liberty as told by an eye-witness.

Her funnel was shot away and the foremast, too, which carried with it the wireless, and a German shot went clean through her bows, well above the waterline.

Commander Bartleiot stood on the bridge, though the shells were raining all around, and gave his orders as cool as if on manoeuvres.

Then a shell came and shot off one leg, but he seized the rail of the bridge, steadied himself, and continued giving his commands and directing the ship. He was fine.

Presently another shell struck the ship and killed him.

FRIENDS OR FOES

M. Georges Scott, a well known artist, who is a Frenchman in spite of his name, is charged with an important mission by the French Ministry of War, which is intended to make the French troops at the front sure as to who are their enemies and who their friends.

M. Scott is an expert in military uniforms. He was commissioned to prepare a series of colored designs showing the uniforms of all the troops against whom and with whom the French soldiers have to fight. German and Austrian Uhlans, Belgian infantry and cavalry are all shown with the exact colorings of uniforms in war. The colored sheets are distributed to the French soldiers. One side of the sheet is headed "Friends," the other "Enemies."

The object is to prevent the French soldiers from firing on their own friends. In the War of 1870 there were a number of melancholy occasions on which friendly regiments engaged each other owing to a lack of familiarity with each other's uniforms, and more recently in the Balkan War there were a number of cases in which allies fought each other.

RECRUITING IN BRITAIN.

London Leading the Way In the Empire's Cause.

Britons are rallying, and rallying splendidly. In fact, recruiting is on the up grade, and at every station there are daily to be seen rows of young men willing to serve their country in her fight for all that civilization means.

Village is vieing with village, town with town, and district with district, for the honor of sending most men to the colors in proportion to population.

If London can be taken as a criticism of the country generally—and messages from the provinces indicate that it can — the week should yield many thousands of recruits beyond any previous week. On Monday all records were beaten to the extent of 900 men.

Gratifying success has attended the meetings organised by the Parliamentary Recruiting Committee. Each of these meetings is addressed by speakers representing the Liberal, the Unionist and the Parliamentary Labor parties, and at each a number of recruits, varying with the size of the meeting, has been secured.

AT LONDON CENTRAL RECRUITING OFFICE.

North, south, east and west, the meetings are being held, and some of our most eloquent speakers are explaining to the people what the war really means, that if Germany wins England ceases to exist as a nation, and that her downfall means the domination of Europe by German barbarians.

The whole country is being systematically covered, and a great accession to the ranks of the army is certain to follow.

A government bulletin warns the public against anti-fat cures. There seems to be no specific for fatness of meanness.

WORTH REMEMBERING

If silver is to be stored away for some time, paint it with dry flour and it will remain untarnished.

* *

Before scaling fish, you should dip them in boiling water for a moment; they will scale much more easily.

* *

When the cream is too thin to whip, add the unbeaten white of an egg. You will have no trouble in whipping the cream.

* *

The edge of a silence cloth should be finished with a buttonhole stitch, not too close. A hem makes a ridge under the tablecloth.

* *

A delightful way to serve tartare sauce is to cut a lemon in half, clean out the inside thoroughly, and then fill the halves with the sauce. One is served to each guest. When fish is served, the little lemon cups are placed around the edge of the platter and one served to each guest. By this method the sauce remains firm instead of melting into a liquid when put into a warm plate.

* *

Sprinkle flour very sparingly on the top of a loaf of cake to stop frosting from running off.

* *

The best way is to write out after breakfast the menu for the next three meals and hang it on a nail in the kitchen. The maid can then plan ahead, and here again she feels that you have charge of everything and that she is there to follow out your wishes.

Chili Concarne.

Take one and one-half pounds of cheap beef, put to cook in just water enough to cover, first having cut in very small pieces. Cook until tender. Take about five cents' worth of nice suet and render out. In the grease fry two good-sized onions and a bit of garlic, if liked, both chopped rather fine. Pour all into saucepan with meat. If you can get chili peppers, add three or four, or in place of chili peppers add cayenne pepper to taste. The juice of half a can of tomatoes, a teaspon of carmino seed pounded fine, if you like. Cook for thirty or forty minutes and serve with or without stewed kidney beans. Some like onions (raw) chopped fine and served with the chili.

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

The Sleep that Men, Women and Children Should Have.

In conversation with one of our leading physicians we believe what he said to us worth the space in this department. In part he said:

"I do not think a person should be waked at morning, and for the reason when a man falls asleep he is in the shop for repairs, as the railroad men say. His frame and all his intricate machinery is being overhauled and made ready for the next day's work. The wear of the previous day is being repaired. Nature is doing that herself. She knows what the tired frame needs just as she knows how to make the heart throb and send the blood coursing through the veins. Then she takes that tired frame, lays it down on a bed surrounds it with the refreshing air of night, covers it with the soft darkness and lets the man rest. Tired nature's sweet restorer, balmy sheep, visit him, and as the hours wear by his energies are renewed, when morning breaks and the sunlight steals through the lattice, he opens his eyes and is himself again. Or if he is early to bed he awakes with the cock's crowing. Now who shall go to that man's side an hour before he opens his eyes and say to nature, stand aside and let him get up. He has had enough rest? 'Well,' Nature will say, 'you can take him if you will, but I will charge him with an hour's loss of sleep and I'll collect it out of his bones and nerves and his hairs and eyesight. You can't cheat me. I'll find a property to levy on.'

"A baby should sleep with its mother, a child should be sent to bed early and be allowed to wake of its own accord in the morning. As for school girls, many a girl who has a dozen studies would be better occupied chasing butterflies or training flowers or galloping a pony or dancing. I would prefer to have a daughter healthy, sweet-tempered, sensible and beautiful, with Latin, algebra and grammar than to have one ever so advanced in her humanities with her health ruined or perhaps lying under a marble urn in the cemetery; and as for man I would rather be able to earn $3 a day in the vigour and glory of perfect health than to draw rents from property for which I have exchanged the blessings of a sound constitution."

You have not learned the best lesson from your school or college if you have not discovered the secret of making life a glory instead of a sordid grind. When you leave your alma mater, my young friend, whatever your vocation, do not let all that is finest within you, your high ideals and noble purposes, be suffocated, strangled, in the everlasting scramble for the dollar. Put beauty into your life, do not let your esthetic faculties, your aspiring instincts, be atrophied in your efforts to make a living. Do not, as thousands of graduates do, sacrifice your social instincts, your friendships, your good name, for power or position.

* * *

In factories for making cloth a single broken thread ruins the whole web. It is traced back to the girl making the blunder and the loss is deducted from her wages. But who will pay for the broken threads in life's great web? We cannot throw back and forth an empty shuttle; threads of some kind follow every movement as we have the web of our fate. It may be a shoddy thread of wasted hours or lost opportunities that will mar the fabric and mortify the workmen forever; or it may be a golden thread that will add to its beauty and lustre. We cannot stop the shuttle or pull out the unfortunate thread which stretches across the fabric, a perptual witness to our folly.

The great difference between those who succeed and those who fail does not consist in the amount of work done by each, but in the amount of intelligent work. Many of those who fail most ignominiously do enough to achieve grand success; but they labour at haphazard, building up with one hand, only to tear down with the other. They do not grasp circumstances and turn them into opportunities. They have no faculty for turning honest defeats into telling victories. With ability enough and time in abundance — the warp and woof of success — they are forever throwing back and forth an empty shuttle and the real web of life is never woven.

Whether you make money or lose it, never sell your divine heritage, your good name, for a mess of pottage. Whatever you do, be larger than your vocation; never let it be said of you that you succeeded in your vocation, but failed as a man.

Beauty in dress is a good thing, rail at it who may. But it is a lower beauty for which a higher beauty should not be sacrificed. They love dress too much who give it their first thought, their best time or all their money; who for it neglect the culture of the kind heart, or the claims of others on their service; who care more for dress than for their character; who are troubled more by an unfashionable garment than by a neglected duty.

FACE LOTION.

Fill a pint bottle almost full with Epsom salts, then add one teaspoonful of camphor, five drops of glycerine and quinine and borax, each the size of a pea. Now pour in soft water until the bottle is full. First bathe the face with soap water until the skin is free from dirt and powder, then pour a few drops of this lotion into the palm of the hand, which should then be rubbed over the face until the pores of the skin have absorbed every bit of the magic liquid. This lotion is excellent to use in cases of pimply skins, blackheads, and sallowness. Should you wish to perfume it, use a drop or two of white rose extract.

Discretion.

A lion that had been ill asked a sheep if his breath was bad. The sheep said "Yes," and the lion bit off her head for a foul. A wolf, asked the same question—said "No." Him the lion killed for a liar. A fox in answer to the question said he had a cold in his head and could not smell.

She Made Him Happy.

THE TERRORS OF INDIGESTION

Disappear When the Blood is Made Rich, Red and Pure

The mistaken idea that laxatives or drastic purgatives provide a short cut to the cure of indigestion is largely responsible for the prevalence of dyspepsia and other stomach disorders. Indigestion calls for more than a makeshift. Your stomach needs tone it cannot absorb nourishment from the food you eat. To give new strength to your stomach so that it may perform the work of digestion without pain or distress, you must enrich the blood. This is the tonic method for strengthening weak stomachs. In cases of this kind Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are the best medicine known. Every dose makes new, rich blood, which not only strengthens the stomach but builds up every part of the body as well. Here is an illustration of what this medicine can do: Mrs. I. N. Brown, Dowville, N.B., says: "For three years I was a sufferer from chronic indigestion. I was hungry all the time, yet could take very little food, and what I did take was followed by great distress and nausea. My sleep at night was broken, and I often had profuse night sweats. The suffocation feeling which often followed eating would cause my heart to palpitate violently. At times my hands and face would become the colour of clay and I would be comparatively prostrated. I was under the care of a good doctor who finally told me the trouble was incurable and that the most I could hope for was temporary relief. I was in these straits when a friend advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I did so, and used the pills steadily for two months when I was again a well woman, and have since had no return of the trouble."

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Much interest was manifested last week in the passage of a large naval airship flying the red ensign over the city. It encircled St. Paul's and the Tower, and eventually went off due south-east.

Home Health Club

By DR. DAVID H. REEDER

RHEUMATISM.

Once in a while the students of ailments gets quite a jolt and all of his previous ideas of cause and effect are disarranged. The cause of rheumatism has ben a question about which there has been more discussion, contradictions, and flat denial, I presume, than any other ailment, and the end is not in sight.

Many years ago I noted the fact that severe cases of pyorrheas were nearly always followed by more or less rheumatism. Pyorrhea is a disease of the gums or teeth, in which pus is secreted and discharges constantly into the mouth. The teeth generally get loose, but are not always painful, so they are neglected. The sufferer realizes that his teeth are loose and that his breath is very offensive, and some realize that pus is constantly coming out between the tooth and the gum, but as long as there is no pain the neglect continues.

Another thing that I observed many years ago, and other physicians have observed the same thing, people who have frequently suffered from la grippe seldom if ever have an attack of it after having been operated upon for appendicitis. I have not had the time to personally study the connection betwen cause and effect further than to find that la grippe does not attack people that never are constipated, and neither does appendicitis, and while the removal of the appendix does not cure constipation it does appear to stop the attacks of la grippe.

It is now commonly admitted by many of the foremost investigators that the cause of rheumatism originates in a secretion of pus at some point, from which it gets into the blood, sometimes from Pyorrhea. In other cases it may be from diseased tonsils, from what may be diagnosed as post nasal catarrh or from other sources, but these are the most frequent and most readily located sources of infection, as well as the easiest to successfully treat.

Now, if you suffer from rheumatism, the wise thing to do is to find out just as quickly as possible and from a reliable source, whether or not any of these conditions exist in your case.

In talking with a physician the other morning, one who has been helping me in my office work for a long time he said that for many years he had ben able to trace certain cases of heart trouble back, first through rheumatism and from that to tonsilitis, then back to sore throats and a tendency to take cold on the slightest exposure, and from that to constipation. The same powers of digestion, assimilation, and elimination do not exist in any two individuals alike, so we see a man and wife or two brothers eating at the same table, of the same food for a period of years. One is quite fleshy, even to the point of obesity, while the other is thin, sometimes to the point of emaciation. One member of the family is constantly afflicted with constipation, while another is the reverse. Each case and each individual will exhibit to the eye of the careful and trained diagnostician an entirely different problem in dietetic treatment.

There is no hard and fast rule and one diet cure for all, just so long as human beings are different, the one from the other, so long will it be necessary to give various means of cure for sickness, and so long as such simple ailment as constipation and colds in the children are neglected, just so long must the adults suffer the penalty.

SOME RECIPES

Canned Sweet Red Pepers.

Take sweet red peppers, put in a greased pan place in a hot oven for twenty minutes, or until they are tender, remove and plunge into cold water, and peel off as scalded tomatoes would. Cut off stems, seed, and rinse well, pack into fruit jars, cover with water and a litle salt to taste, let cans get heated through in a boiler, and seal. These are exactly like those bought in tin cans in the stores.

Banana Fritters.

These are very fine. Beat with an egg-beater the yolks of two eggs light, then add, cut in pieces, two large bananas or three small ones, and beat again until the two are mixed to a light pulp; now add a teaspoonful of sugar, two teaspoonfuls of melted butter, a scant half-cupful of milk, the whites of the two eggs beaten stiff, and a cupful and a half of flour, with a scant teaspoonful of baking powder. Beat all well together with an egg-beater. Drop a spoonful in deep hot fat and fry a light brown. They should be like a puff ball. Serve with a whipped sauce.

Apple and Cocoanut Pie.

Line a deep pie plate with pastry. Pare and grate some apples, sweeten and flavour to taste, using a bit of cinnamon and either lemon juice or vanilla. Sprinkle the pastry generously with shredded cocoanut, cover with the apple mixture, and bake. When almost done sprinkle the top of the pie with cocoanut, but do not leave it long enough in the oven to brown.

Chicken Stuffing.

This requires one chicken liver, two shallots, one tablespouful of parsley (choped), one-quarter cupful of garlic, and one-quarter cupful of sausage meat. Chop the ingredients together until fine. Add soft breadcrumbs to make the required amount; then add a pinch of allspice and season with salt and pepper to taste. Moisten with water mixed with melted butter and stuff the chicken with the mixture.

Sunlight Soap

Dainty Garments—Fine Linen—

These are surely worth your best care and the use of nothing but the soap that cannot hurt the finest fabric—

Here's the Sunlight way:

First, soap the garment; then roll it up to soak. After a while, rinse well and the dirt practically drops out. No wearisome scrubbing, no hurtful rubbing—the gentle strength of Sunlight does the work almost without effort and entirely without injury.

Plain White Muffins.

Sift together thoroughly two cupfuls of flour, one teaspoonful of baking soda, two tablespoonfuls of cream of tartar. Add gradually one cupful of milk, one well beaten egg, and one-quarter cupful of melted butter. Bake in buttered and floured gem pans for half an hour in a moderate oven.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

MAKING DAD CAPITULATE

"What! Another new dress?" stormed Popslinger, as his daughter nonchalantly made her request. "Why, you had one not more than a minute ago!"

"The very idea!" said his daughter. "I haven't had a new one since—why, not for ages!"

"One minute ago!" repeated Popslinger, firmly. "The younger generation is going to the dogs! When your mother and I were young, the girls had two dresses a year—a calico one and a woollen one — and they looked just as pretty and had just as many beaux as you extravagant young things now. They thought of something else besides running their poor old father into bankruptcy. You get a new dress and wear it twice, and somebody who is envious of it sniffs, and then you say it's perfectly hideous and you would die rather than be seen in that disreputable old rag again.

"It's all because you have been allowed to read novels where the Lady Ermentrude Gewhillikens trails her pale satin gowns recklessly over the dewy turf and ruins her fairylike slippers to match when she steals out on the gold-plated terrace to meet the lovely Earl of Beaucatchet! And you want to do likewise!

"You want that Willie boy who's been hanging around you to cap his hand to his brow every time you float down the stairway and murmur, Ye gods! How beautiful she is! What a lovely dream! Don't deny it! Little he stops to reckon how much your father is set back to pay the bill! He doesn't even notice what you have on, my child!

"Why, when I went to see your mother, I was so interested in the way her hair grew in little curls at the nape of her negk and the manner in which the blue of her eye darkened at times that she could have worn a potato sack and I would not have been any wiser. I'll bet right now if he were asked to describe three dresses of yours or he shot the next minute the price of lead would go up. At the most he would be able to say that it was pink cheesecloth cut on the bias, and that you resembled a June rose.

"Why don't you buy cheesecloth, and sew it up yourself instead of letting that madame woman sell you something she's cobbled up in her back parlour? When your mother—"

"But girls didn't go to as many things in those days," protested the daughter. "They didn't need more than one dress."

"Huh!" said Popslinger indignantly. "Don't you fool yourself! There were weekly socials and barn dances and corn huskings and apple drying and many other social diversions at which a young lady wanted to look her best! It simply didn't occur to her that more than one dress was a possibility. She'd just as soon have expected a diamond tiara at her plate every Sunday morning.

"I suppose, if you got it into your head that you'd be ostracised by your set unless you had a complete change of jewelery each week, that I might just as well go off and die and let you collect the insurance money to spend upon your frivolities! What have you got to have a new dress for anyway?"

"There's a dance at the Club" said his daughter. "And I'm going with Mr. Biggins—"

"Mr. Biggins!" exploded Popslinger. "When you have the whole world to pick from, please tell me why you a young woman of a tremendous education, which has cost me much gold and many grey hairs, should select Willie Biggins? If you had planned from the day of your birth to fall in ove with the silliest, most egotistic flat-headed, no-account excuse for a man, you could find, you couldn't have hit it off better than with Willie Biggins! He—"

"I'm not in love with him!" protested his daughter.

"Then if you aren't it's all the worse for you to want to strip me of my last penny just to dazzle his eyes with a new dress! You haven't even the excuse of the delirium of love! If you don't care about Biggins why don't you wear a year before last's dress and be just as happy Biggins wouldn't have intelligence enough to recognize it."

"Aha!" cried Popsinger. "You're in love with somebody else, somebody who scorns you, and you are going with Biggins just to make him jealous. I refuse to allow you to work me for my hard earned coin if you are playing a double game like that. If he won't care about you in an old dress he won't give a hoot for a new one. Who is he anyway?"

"He isn't anyone!" cried his daughter, impatiently. "Honest, dad, if I can't have a new dress I'll have to stay home! I've nothing but a taffeta dancing frock that's in perfect ribbons."

"Can't you put some chiffon over it?" demanded her father. "When I was a young man I went crazy over a girl who was economical. Just tell your Willie boy how you saved me money and—"

"Do I get that dress?" insisted his daughter, doggedly.

"Oh, heavens, yes; I suppose so!" said Popslinger, reaching for his check-book. "And get it of cast iron or something durable."

Radway's Ready Relief

Mrs. J. Westervelt of Paterson, N. J., writes: "I have a large family of small children, and it has saved me many a doctor's bill. For quinsy sore throat it is a king over them. My little girl has sprained her ankle and is coming around fine without any other doctor than Radway's Ready Relief."

CURES SORE THROAT

Apply the Relief to the throat and chest until the surface smarts and reddens. Give Radway's Pills in such doses as will freely move the bowels. For a sudden cold, take a large dose of Radway's Pills, and a teaspoonful of Relief with a teaspoonful of molasses, in a tumbler of hot water. Retire at once to bed. A profuse perspiration will break out, and in the morning the cold will be gone.

Copeland's Cure For Consumption

WINS CONFIDENCE BY ITS WONDERFUL CURATIVE POWERS.

MR. W. R. COPELAND.

Dear Sir—Now that I am well and strong again, I write to state that the fact I am alive today witnesses to the merit of your medicine.

My doctor, a specialist, said that I had the worst kind of consumption and that it was impossible for me to live. He gave me only eight to ten days before the disease would terminate fatally. He also said that it was no use in treating me, as I was too far gone.

I was left to die, but a friend or mine told me about your medicine and procured me a bottle. Without much hope, I tried it. It did wonders. First the weakening perspiration stopped and the food I took stayed in the stomach. After a second bottle, I commenced to regain my appetite and was up in a few days of the time that the doctor said I should die. Five weeks later I was at work and have been working ever since.

I wish everyone could know the worth of your medicine, especially those afflicted with consumption as I was, for I undoubtedly owe my life to its use. I will at all times cheerfully answer any correspondence, and you are at liberty to publish this letter if you think it will help to recommend your medicine to others. I remain, Gratefully yours.

DAVID WARNOCK, Street Car Conductor,
203 Withrow Ave., Toronto.

The remarkable power of this medicine marks it as one of the greatest discoveries of this century. Its work is only just started, but it is safe to say that its reputation will grow world-wide.

It is a blessing, as all who have used it testify. To the real "down-and-out" consumptive, the chronic sufferers from bronchial and lung troubles—it is something more than a blessing. To them it means the difference between happiness and misery, and sometimes life instead of a grave.

It is a medicine that is honest. No false claims are made for it. It is good, most beneficiently good for the ailments specified above. There, even consumption, it will tackle, fight and OVERCOME. If you have a bad cough or cold—take this medicine. If you are a consumptive—take this medicine, for a greater medicine for consumption has NEVER BEEN KNOWN. If you are troubled with bronchitis and can't sleep at night for coughing—take this medicine. Your trouble will become a memory. If your throat or lungs are in any way weak or sensitive—take this medicine—and they will become strong and normal.

Cavities heal under its benign influence. Congestion is freed by its active to remove phlegm until the lungs are clear and work naturally without pain or distress. Emaciation, night sweats, poor appetite, inability to retain food in the stomach—all these effects of disease are mastered and the system built up under its curative and nourishing powers.

SCOTLAND, ONT., Aug. 25th. 1913

"Fruit-a-tives" are the only pill manufactured, to my way of thinking. They work completely, no griping whatever, and one is plenty for any ordinary person at a dose. My wife was a martyr to Constipation. We tried everything on the calendar without satisfaction, and spent large sums of money until we happened on "Fruit-a-tives". I cannot say too much in their favor.

We have used them in the family for about two years and we would not use anything else as long as we can get "Fruit-a-tives".

Their action is mild, and no distress at all. I have recommended them to many other people, and our whole family uses them".

J. W. HAMMOND.

Those who have been cured by "Fruit-a-tives" are proud and happy to tell a sick or ailing friend about these wonderful tablets made from fruit juices.

Victor Hugo.

Victor Hugo was born in Besancon, France, in 1802. He was the son of a colonel in the French army and received a classical education. After the revolution of 1830 his plays "Marion de Lorme" and "The King Amuses Himself" were performed at the Theatre Francais. He was created by Louis Philippe a peer of France, with the title of viscount, but he arose above this honor in being the author of "Les Miserables." He opposed Napoleon III and was banished from France, but returned on the fall of the empire. He died in Paris in 1885 and was buried in the Pantheon.

Crippled With Rheumatism

And Skeptical After Trying Many Medicines — Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Cured Him.

When the kidneys fail to purify the blood the poisons left in the system cause pain and suffering, such as backache, lumbago and rheumatism. Read how this skeptic was cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Mr. F. W. Brown, Kingsbury, Que., writes:—"I have been completely cured of backache and lame back by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I also recommended the pills to a man who was a cripple from rheumatism. He was skeptical, as he said that he had tried nearly everything on earth. Finally he consented to try them, and to his surprise was greatly benefited in the first week, and the pains left his legs until he was so supple he could walk without pain or difficulty. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have worked wonders in this place, and we think there is no medicine like them."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, 5 for $1.00, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

"Although the employment of our field artillery in battering down defended villages is thus hampered, another and very efficacious method of arriving at the same result has been evolved, and is proving most effective.

HOMESTEADS TORN TO PIECES.

"Parts of the region where this fighting has been in progress now presents a melancholy aspect. Many of the once prosperous homesteads are literally torn to pieces. Walls are still standing pitted by shrapnel balls, and in some villages churches are smouldering ruins. Dead horses and cows and pigs, caught in the hail of shrapnel, litter the village streets, and among the carcases and the debris wander wretched inhabitants, who have returned to see what they can save from the wreckage. Here, blocking up a narrow side street, is a dead horse still harnessed to a trap, and beside it is stretched the corpse of a Jager (a German sharpshooter). Close by in an enclosure, where a shell has found them, lie some thirty cavalry horses. A little further in is laid out a row of German dead, for whom graves are being dug by peasants.

"The work of burial falls to a great extent to the local inhabitants, who, with our soldiers, take no little care in marking the last resting-places of their countrymen and their allies, either by little wooden crosses or by flowers.

BURIED WHERE THEY FELL.

"Amidst the graves, scattered all over the countryside, are rifle pits, trenches, and gun emplacements, which those now resting below the sod helped to defend or attack. From these the progress of the fighting can be traced, and even its nature, for they vary from carefully constructed and cunningly placed works to the hastily shaped lair of a German sniper, or a roadside ditch with its sides scooped out by the entrenched implements of our own infantry."

BELGIAN KING ON FIRING LINE SHARES SOLDIERS' DANGERS

HAZEBROUCK, Northern France, via Havre, Oct. 23.—It was my privilege yesterday to see King Albert of Belgium in action at (name deleted by censor). Fighting with the remnants of his little army to defend the last strip of his native land still held by his own troops, he is unterrified and unconquered. Garbed in the field uniform of a general, he is constantly encouraging his men at every point.

Until the arrival of the British monitors which are now supporting them from the sea, the Belgians were subjected to attacks of so ferocious a character that the British officers who have since inspected the ground say it is hard to believe that they were able to hold their positions.

The King passed up and down the line of his army. Sometimes he uses an automobile. At other times he is on foot. Addressing his soldiers he uses the familiar "thee" and "thou" usually reserved for members of the same family. He is comforter to the wounded, cheerer to the downhearted.

When the fire became particularly hot at the position where it was my good fortune to see him, members of his staff suggested that he leave the trenches and go to a place of safety at the rear. He refused with a smile.

"My skin is of no more value to my country than is yours," he emphatically declared to the general who made the request. "My place is on the fighting line." And at that very moment a great German shell burst only ten paces away.

Realizing his position, his soldiers fought like demons. They literally slaughtered the Germans, riddling them with volley after volley from their rifles and then following with a series of desperate bayonet charges. The Germans lost enormously. Great heaps of their slain marked the line of their advance and of their retreat.

The impression of the Belgian and British officers with whom I talked was that if the present battle in the north is won the King and Queen will be able to spend the winter in their capital of Brussels. The aviators have reported that the Germans have established new fortified lines along the Liege-Namur line extending to Antwerp. These are believed to be intended for winter quarters should they have to fall back from their present positions.

As the King moved to his headquarters, following the repulse of the Germans, he was cheered everywhere. He was wet to the skin from the drizzling rain that had been falling for hours. His uniform was covered with caked mud. His hands and face were streaked with clay.

THE MARCH OF KITCHENER'S MEN

We are coming, Uncle William, and we're half a million strong,
We regret to keep you waiting, but we shan't be very long,
And soon the fields of fair Champagne shall hear our battle song.
We are coming Uncle William in the morning.

And are your soldier bandits free to plunder, burn, and kill,
To crush a tiny nation underneath your iron will,
While England stands for freedom? Don't believe it, Uncle Bill.
For we're coming, Uncle William, in the mo-orning.

We are more than half-a-million; there are many millions more;
Men whose voices always spoke for peace, whose hands now turn to war.

Do your bloody Brandenbergers hear the British Lion roar?
For we're coming, Uncle William, in the mo-o-orning.

The Lion's Cubs have heard the call; in every Ocean State
They don their khaki uniforms, for England wants a mate.
You'll never check the torrent now, it's very much too late.
They are coming, Uncle William, in the mo-o-o-orning.

Our footsteps thunder in the East; from India of old
Come Princes decked with jewels, clad in cloth of gleaming gold,
With elephants and men of might and myriads manifold.
They are coming, Uncle William, in the mo-o-o-o-orning.

Yes, we're coming, Uncle William, and we're quite a million strong,
We know that we are in the right and you are in the wrong,
And the streets of proud Berlin shall echo to our battle-song.
We are coming, Uncle William, in the mo-o-o-o-o-orning.

DANDRUFF ON HEAD IN DRY CRUST

Hair Came Out. Scalp Itched and Burned. Scales Like Sawdust. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Healed In Six Weeks.

The Pas, Manitoba.—"Four years ago I began to lose my hair. It used to come out any time that I combed it. I think it was because my head was full of dandruff. Whenever I brushed it the scales flew off like saw-dust. My scalp also itched and burned and my head was like a dry crust. The dandruff showed very plainly.

"I applied several remedies but found no improvement till I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After using Cuticura Soap and Ointment a few days I found a great difference so I continued with them six weeks and they completely healed me." (Signed) L. D. Lockwood, June 4, 1914.

RASH OVER BABY'S CHEST

99 Follis Ave., Toronto, Ont.—"From birth my baby grandson had a rash over his chest which prevented his sleeping and seemed to irritate him a great deal. They were a mass of tiny red pimples on his chest and arms. He was too young to scratch but was very cross and fretful.

"I used the samples of both Cuticura Soap and Ointment and they appeared to afford him relief immediately so I bought some. In three or four weeks he was entirely healed." (Signed) Mrs. L. Compton, May 23, 1914.

QUIT MEAT WHEN KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a Glass of Salts If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Troubles You

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which excites the kidneys, they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts or if the urine is cloudy, offensive full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

KAISER'S NAVY IS HARD UP FOR COMPETENT MEN

LONDON, October 17.—I learn from a former resident of Wilhelmshaven, who has much first hand knowledge of the subject, that the Kaiser's navy is going to be hard up to find competent officers and satisfactory men for its new ships. The dearth of personnel will handicap the Germans considerably.

Both Great Britain and Germany are rushing their shipyards and will soon be reinforced. It is known that three new German battleships, the Grosser Kurfurst, the Markgraf and the Koenig, are nearing completion, and perhaps have already joined the fleet. They have a displacement of 28,000 tons and carry ten twelve-inch guns. Their armour belt is fourteen inches thick. The Berlin Admiralty is confident that they will touch 25 or 24 knots.

To man these ships with competent officers and men will be a difficult question. There are a number of officers and men stationed on shore, but they are not nearly sufficient to provide full complements for these three new ships, the new battle cruiser, Derfflinger, and the reserve battleships, cruisers and light cruisers.

They will have to be manned by reservists who do not know modern ships, and are most probably peasants who have only done their three years compulsory service in the navy and have then gone back to their farms and endeavoured to forget that such a thing as the sea existed.

The greatest difficulty, however, will be to get competent senior executive officers for these ships. Those officers who are in short billets, with the exception of the junior officers, are mostly men who have demonstrated their unfitness for the higher positions afloat, and are allowed to disappear gracefully from the service by putting in a year or two in a post ashore before retiring.

To show how short of competent officers the German navy is, it may be mentioned that Captain Franck, of the light cruiser Ariadne, which was sunk in the Heligoland fight, had retired from the navy on account of very bad health a few weeks before war broke out.

The German navy has the call on the services of a number of mercantile marine officers, but these men are only given subordinate positions and cannot attain a higher rank than lieutenant commander.

It will further be extremely difficult if not indeed impossible to find sufficient engineer officers for these new ships. When war broke out there were at most thirty naval engineers holding shore appointments, and there is such a scarcity of naval engineer officers that of late warrant officers have taken the place of engineers in all torpedo-boat destroyers. Moreover, there are very few reservist engineers to be called up.

In this connection it may be interesting to record that the much-boomed German battle-cruiser Von der Tann, has proved a failure owing to her engines. When she was first commissioned she, made a speed of twenty-seven knots, but since then she has never done anything. Last year she had to be refitted twice, and the second time she was in dockyard hands for three months and could not take part in the summer manoeuvres. One of her engineers told me that every time they tried to force her the engines broke down.

Admiral von Ingenohl, who is in command of the high seas fleet, is not thought to be a genius by the officers of the fleet, and his appointment two years ago caused considerable surprise except to those who knew that he was a great favourite of the Kaiser.

Admiral von Pohl, who is now on the Admiralty staff at Berlin, was to have been appointed to the command, but at the last moment he incurred the Kaiser's displeasure, and as a punishment his appointment was cancelled. Von Pohl is looked upon in German naval circles as undoubtedly the cleverest of all the German admirals and before he went to Berlin was admiral of the first squadron. This appointment is now held by Admiral Von Lanz, who had been nominated to succeed von Ingenohl at expiration of his term of office this October.

BRITISH CASUALTIES.

LONDON, Oct. 24.—Among the British casualties is reported the wounding of the Duke of Roxburgh, who is a captain of the Scots Guards; also the killing of Lord John Spencer Cavendish, a major of the First Life Guards, son of the late Lord Edward Cavendish, and the youngest brother of the Duke of Devonshire. Lord Cavendish was a veteran of the Boer war, and was only 38 years old. Details are lacking regarding his death.

RUSSIANS MUST REINFORCE.

LONDON, Oct. 24.— The German claim of victory over the Russians west of Augustowo, Suwalki, following fighting reported by them yesterday in the direction of Ossowetz, south of Augustowo, shows that the Germans are attempting another advance from East Prussia into the government of Grodno, to the east of Suwalki, doubtless with the object of compelling the Russians to reinforce their army in that region.

BATTLE IN NORTH IS FIERCELY FOUGHT

GERMAN REQUEST FOR AN ARMISTICE TO BURY DEAD IS REFUSED

Fighting Around Thioncourt is Increasing in Violence---Germans Advancing Slowly at Dixmunde and Labassie While Allies Gain East of Nieuport and to East of Armeuberes---Official French Statement

Special Cable to The Examiner;

PARIS, October 24.—The Germans to-day demanded an armistice in the region of Thioncourt, in order to bury their dead. The demand was refused by the French general commanding, and the fighting in that section is continuing with increasing violence. This announcement was made verbally in connection with the issuance of the regular three o'clock communique. In the later it was stated that the Germans continue to advance slowly to the north of Dixmunde, and in the region of Labassee. On the other hand the French are advancing east of Nieuport and in the region of Longemarck, and to the east of Armentieres. Elsewhere on the battlefront it is stated that there has been but little change.

LONDON, October 24.—A private Berlin despatch according to a correspondent of the Central News at Copenhagen, states that the battle now raging between Nieuport and Dixmunde is the most violent and most important of the entire war. He adds that Zeppelins are said to have given the Germans considerable support.

The correspondent in Bellegard, France, of Echo de Paris, corroborates the foregoing by wireless, as follows: "Major Morath, in an article in the Berlin Tageblatte, asserts that the largest battle of the war is being fought between Lille and Dunkirk, just across in France from Dixmunde and Nieuport. He says it is a combat of life and death and that on its issue depends the fate of the operations in France."

LONDON, October 24.---The German fleet is again showing signs of activity. It is reported that scout cruisers have been sighted operating from Heligoland, while Heligoland reports declare that all of the crews have been recalled to the big warships anchored in Wilhelmshaven and Kiel harbours under the protection of the guns of the forts.

LONDON, October 24.—Lloyd's station on the Isle of Wight, reports that the French ship Marie Henriette, with wounded soldiers on board, is ashore off Cape Barfleur, 16 miles east of Cherbourg. It is understood the wounded were in process of transfer to the Isle of Wight. Whether the ship is in a dangerous position is not yet known.

LONDON, October 24.—In an official Austrian statement from Vienna via Amsterdam, is the following: "Returning from a successful action on the River Save our Monitor "Temes" struck a mine and sank; thirty-three men are missing, but the others were saved.

WASHINGTON, D. C., October 24.—Germany will respect the Monroe Doctrine, and the views of the United States regarding it, Ambassador Von Bernstorff of Germany affirmed this afternoon, stating that on September 3rd he had communicated a note to the State Department giving this assurance.

This is interpreted as intimating that Germany has no intention of attacking Canada in any event.

HIGH OFFICIALS OF GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY HERE

ON A LARGE SCALE

Such was the terse and complimentary remark of Chief Engineer Safford of the G.T.R., this morning on the occasion of the annual inspection. The officials, among whom were President Chamberlain, Supt. Bowker, Supt. Coyle, Chief Engineer Safford, Gen.-Supt. Beckingham of the Maintenance and Ways Department, and ten section foremen, came by special train from Belleville arriving at Peterborough about 11 o'clock, and left shortly afterward for Lindsay and Minden. Trainmaster McMillan of the local system was called to Hamilton and was consequently unable to be present.

Mr. Safford said that although the inspection was an annual event, this was the first run on such a scale. At the rear of the track is a coach containing a keyboard on which the track officials, five in number, register their opinions at the completion of every mile. This system of inspection is in the opinion of the engineer, calculated to give rise to a greater spirit of co-operation in the section foremen, to increase the general efficiency of the staff and as a natural sequence, the physical character of the track. Although it was primarily a track inspection, the buildings were also reviewed, and the officials were well satisfied with the general appearance of the local buildings.

The party left about 11:30, continuing their inspection through Lindsay and Minden.

Evening News Correspondent Reports the Enemy Has Been Driven to a Line 22 Miles From Dunkirk

ALLIES REINFORCED

LONDON, Oct. 24.—The Dunkirk correspondent of the Evening News wires that the Germans have been driven to a line twenty-two miles northeast of Dunkirk.

He adds that their retreat is growing more pronounced as the lines of the allies are strengthened.

Potatoes Down In Price

Owing to Recent Mild Weather They Are Very Plentiful

The recent mild and moist weather has been very beneficial to the potato crop and in consequence of their abundance, they were offered on the market this morning at 60c. a bag. The increased price in cauliflower, viz., 15c. to 2 for 25c. is accounted for in that they are now much larger than was the case a week or so ago. Tomatoes, although growing less plentiful, are still 25c. a basket. Grapes, too, are 25c. a basket. Apples remain at 20c. and 25c. a peck, but pears are 40c. and 50c. a peck.

In the inside market dairy produce was still plentiful. Chickens could be obtained at prices ranging from 50c. to 75c each. Ducks at 75c. and geese $1.25 to $1.40. Eggs are 32c. to 35c. a dozen and butter 30c. a pound.

Among the successful candidates were five young men from Keene, who drove up last night and were delighted to pass the ordeal. Recruiting is being continued at 4.15 this afternoon and at 8 o'clock tonight. It has not yet been decided what officers of the 57th will accompany the quota.

GERMAN LOSSES ARE INCREASINGLY LARGE BATTALIONS CAPTURED

Defeated Army is Still Being Driven Back and the Route of Retreat is Strewn With Abandoned Guns, Equipment and Dead and Wounded---Russians Have Crossed the Vistula

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, October 24.—The war office this afternoon declared that the defeated German armies in Poland, are still being driven back by the victorious Russian army. Their losses are increasingly large. Whole battalions have been taken and many heavy cannon. It is stated that the entire route of the retreat is littered with abandoned guns, equipment, transport, and dead and wounded Germans.

The Russians have to-day crossed the Vistula in strong force and it is believed here that the present operation marks another attempt on the part of the Russian army to start its general forward movement against the first line of the German frontier defences. This cannot be carried into effect until a final decision is reached in the battle now raging in Galicia, where the Austrians, heavily reinforced by German and Hungarian troops, are assaulting the Russian positions with great violence.

LONDON, October 24. --- Evidencing the fact that Germany already considers Belgium part of her territory, the official press bureau in continuing to-day its series of eye witness stories from the front, declares that the German cavalry patrols are now wearing Belgian uniforms. The report as received declares that this action on the part of the enemy is "inexcusable."

The reports to-day cover proceedings up to October 17, and are in many respects almost a duplication of the matter already made public along this line. The fact that the troops were again advancing toward the north after their long service in the trenches, fresh forces having relieved them there, has greatly cheered the men. All are declared to be very fit, notwithstanding the severe nature of the fighting and the trying weather that has prevailed. The report declares that the German advance posts are short of food, but pays a high tribute to the skill and bravery of the German troops as a whole.

LONDON, October 24.—Unofficial reports received by the news agencies here from Tokio say it is believed that the fall of Kiao-Chau cannot long be prevented. Some of the newspapers go so far as to claim that the German concession has already surrendered to the Japanese-British forces, but there is no confirmation of this. The latest official word from the scene of action said that the Japanese had mounted big guns at points commanding every section of the German positions and were shelling them at long range. Part of the city was reported as being burned, and great gaps had been made in the main fortified lines.

GERMAN SOLDIER, A PRISONER, SAYS HIS COMMANDER ORDERED "KILL ALL BRITISH"

THE HAGUE, October 24.—The Socialist newspaper of Chemnitz publishes a letter form a German soldier, in which he says his commander, a major, ordered the battalion not to make any British prisoners,

Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

SATURDAY, OCT. 24, 1914

THE BOARD OF TRADE AND BELGIUM.

One cannot qualify a commendation of the Peterborough Board of Trade for moving in the interests of the Belgian sufferers, with the charge that it has been premature in taking action. The Board deserves credit for the action it has taken in placing in the city banks subscription lists in the interest of the fund for the relief of Belgian sufferers from the war, the damnable invasion of their country, the destruction of their homes, and the theft of their provisions by the German bandits. Our hearts have been rent from day to day by the ghastly stories of outrage and wrong inflicted upon the Belgian people. The country has been laid waste, wide areas have been made worse than a desert, and in consequence hundreds of thousands of Belgians are destitute. We owe them relief and help. Great Britain's magnificent obstinency in standing the friend of Belgian neutrality, in befriending the weak, has brought the spite of disappointed force upon Belgium. Belgium is suffering that great principles may triumph. Britain has plunged into a mighty war on account of Belgium, and the Empire—Peterborough included—is in duty bound to help relieve the sufferings of the Belgian people. If Britain and the Empire can, as they are justifiably doing, spend thousands of millions for a principle—for the benefit of humanity and the world's highest civilization—it is incumbent upon as to provide relief for the sufferings of the Belgians who have been by the incidence of fate, made the greatest personal sufferers. Peterborough should do its share. If we want a precedent, we can find it in the village of Marmora which, with a population of 925, has raised $1,000 for the Belgian relief fund. The total assessment of Marmora in 1913 was $296,494, and the total assessment of Peterborough the same year was $10,535,022 Will Peterborough's contribution to the relief of the Belgian sufferers be in a reasonable ratio to her assessment, her wealth—as that of Marmora bears to her assessment—her wealth? In this event it would be $50,000. But it is not to be expected that any amount like this will be reached, especially when the means adopted to appeal to our citizens is so unobtrusive, and especially when one has regard to the modest proportions of our Patriotic Fund. To-day's despatches inform us that the town of Pembroke, whose assessed population in 1914 was 4,007, and whose total assessment—wealth—1913, was $3,169,730, raised in two days, $32,500 for the Patriotic Fund.

THE DUTY OF THE HOUR.

This is no time to be whistling party tunes; and one is surprised that a highly patriotic journal like the Toronto News" has the partizan stop of the organ pulled out to the full. Day after day it keeps at the partizan game and with a singular bitterness. It can't, apparently tire of saying "I told you so." It gloats over the existence of an "emergency" and seems really delighted that the Germans have been building concrete foundations in Scotland for mounting heavy guns—it proves the "emergency." Well, grant there was an emergency as recent and present events show. Great Britain didn't see it—her statesmen were not as previsionary as the News, or they would not have been caught with so small an army—that Britain had only 100,000 men to throw into the fight expeditionary force. Yes, there is an emergency; there is an emergency now, an emergency that calls upon Britain and the Empire to strain every nerve, devote every energy to the struggle for victory. There is an emergency and it forbids Canada and loyal Canadians, to take any course, that will divert attention from the duty of the hour; or to inject any irrelevant and frivolous issue like partizanship that will prevent our people from presenting a solid front to the enemy. This is no time for "back talk" on "emergencies," and failure of Canada to provide for them. The Government of Canada may have been mistaken in 1910 in adopting a naval policy that embodied the unanimous sentiment of Parliament. It did this from a sense of duty and not because it was stampeded by an "emergency"; but as recent events show it took the very best means of providing for the emergency that has arisen—to provide for defending our own coasts, and our own shipping, and thus incidentally strengthening the naval defence of the Empire. If the Laurier Naval Act of 1910 had been carried out and not abandoned we should have had several strong Canadian cruisers available for our defence and for helping the Empire, as the Australian navy is doing. The Borden Government, with perhaps an honest desire to take the better course, thought differently. But when the actual emergency came it had recourse to the policy it had discarded. Speaking in Parliament at the special session in August, Sir Robert Borden stated what the government had done in the matter of coast defence. He said:

"On the very day before the war broke out we purchased two submarines having first consulted with the Admiralty. Crews have been procured for both, and I believe the officer in command on the Pacific coast at the present time is an expert in such matters, and that the crews are already competent to make these submarines useful for the defence of our coast and of our shipping if occasion should require. The Rainbow, already in commission, was furnished with the necessary ammunition and stores and her crew was supplemented by a number of naval volunteers. I think that great praise is due to those in command of her for the courageous act which they undertook in going south in face of two modern German cruisers to assist in bringing back the small boats Algerine and Shearwater which were then in the south. The Niobe has also been put in commission as she possesses some fighting strength and she will be manned in part by the crews of the Shearwater and the Algerine and in port by British naval reservists. ALL OF THESE BOATS HAVE BEEN PLACED UNDER THE DIRECTION OF THE ADMIRALTY UNDER HE AUTHORITY CONTAINED IN THAT BEHALF IN THE NAVAL SERVICE ACT, 1910."

Thus the Government had to fall back upon the Laurier Naval Act, which they had discarded and fortunately had not the courage to repeal. Something like this would have been required if Canada had given Great Britain three Dreadnoughts. When the Canadian Contingent had to be escorted overseas, Great Britain did not send Dreadnoughts—she sent cruisers such as Canada would have provided under the Naval Act.

This is not said by way of reproach or in a party spirit. If both governments acted with the object of doing the best thing for naval defence, we must conclude that one of them made a mistake. Which made the mistake it is not to suggest now. We have really no parties in Canada now—none are for the party—all are for the state, even those few who let themselves be influenced by their partizanship. We have a big job before us, and we can't spare a man for any activity that does not directly or indirectly bear upon ending the reign of brute force as a factor in the disturbance of the world's peace and the peril of the interests of civilization.

KEEP THE PAY ROLL GOING.

It is evident that with all our other duties brought upon us by war there is the duty of keeping business going "as usual"—the commercial battle cry of the "nation of shopkeepers." That circular message of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association — "Keep Factories Running" —means that for the sake of prosperity the wheels should be kept going and the payrolls sustained. It expresses the truth that the basic fact about prosperity is the payroll. It says nothing about profits or dividends. It recognizes the dynamic efficiency of one thing only —the wages of labour. It is a set aggressive purpose to maintain in a state of earning efficiency the hundreds of thousands of men, who depend on the factories of Canada for their livelihood. But unless the people who buy spend their money for goods made in Canada, the payrolls can't be maintained.

The merchants of this country need the dollars of the workingmen. Cut off the wages of labour and you close the doors of business. Keep wages going at full strength and the buying power of the country keeps up the payrolls, and to insure your own income. Buy foreign goods and you work against your own safety. The going factory is usually conditioned on the home market for goods made in the country. If its products are bought by a world war. It's the dollars of factory can keep up its payroll. If not, it must shuot down, lay off hands, or reduce wages.

As believers in practical economy combined with patriotism, we can't practice the principle of self-preservation unless we buy goods made in Canada and keep the wheels of the great organism, symbolized by smoke-stacks and power-houses, running as near as possible to a peak load.

It's the going factory and the sustained payroll that keep the country united in a time of dislocation caused by a world war. It's the dollars of Canadians spend for goods made in Canada that guarantee the going factory, the sustained payroll, and a new era of prosperity to the whole country. And it's everybody's business, from the financial magnate to the man with the dinner pail, to see that the dollars of Canada are spent for this practical, patriotic purpose. Keep the dollar at home.

LOCAL FINANCING.

Saint John, New Brunswick, is making practical efforts to do business as usual. The city had $126,000 of its bonds for sale. From eighty-four of its citizens subscriptions totalling $230,000 were received, some at ¼ and 1/16 premium and the balance at par. —Monetary Times.

CANADA TRUE TO PROMISE.

We, in Canada, have frequently said that we would expend our last man and our last dollar in defence of the British Empire. We are now endeavouring to show that these were not mere idle words. We have already despatched our first contingent of some 32,000 men. It is our duty to immediately prepare for the despatch of a second contingent. It is our duty, immediately on the despatch of this second contingent, to prepare for the despatch of a third contingent, and until this terrible war is settled by the complete downfall of German militarism, there must be no relaxation of our efforts.—Halifax Chronicle

FINANCIAL STRENGTH OF FRANCE.

Not only had banking made the results of this situation felt, and had furnished the economic organism of Europe with sensory nerves, which guided its policy, as we saw during the Anglo-German crisis of 1911, but ia had also found means of utilizing a division of labour which made Germany dependent upon her weaker rival Because Geramny was a country of expanding population, and Germany were perpetually needing capital for starting a million fresh existences in the world every year, while France was a country of small families and stagnating population, not needing to use its capital in this way, and thus having much of it free for investment abroad, France had become the bank of the world. So that the very inferiority of France had helped to make it impossible for her larger rival to damage her seriously without damage to herself—to ruin her own bank, as it were.

NEARLY CAUGHT KAISER.

Russian Soldiers at Warsaw Say He Escaped In a Motor.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 24.—That the Kaiser, who was present on the field at the battlefront in the vicinity of Warsaw, whence the German troops had been retreating, was surrounded and nearly taken prisoner, but just escaped in a motor car, is the statement of soldiers who participated in the fighting in these parts.

There is no official confirmation of this report.

One of the Kaiser's generals, however, who was being sent with presents from the Kaiser to his troops, was seized by the Cossacks and brought into camp a prisoner.

Germans Preparing Lighters.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 24. — (Via London.) — Two shipyards at Kiel, the Germania and the Howard, are building thirty armored lighters capable of carrying 500 men each, and traveling at the rate of nine miles an hour, to proceed to the River Scheldt should eventualities permit the landing of German troops on the coast of England. Furthermore, it is asserted that three of these lighters are completed and already on their way to the Scheldt.

THE WAY OF THE BRITISH

(By Lilian Leveridge.)

It isn't the way of the British,
In the fight for country and king,
On the fair white field of their valour
The shadow of shame to bring.
There isn't a lad in the army,
There isn't a lad on the sea,
Would dim the light of his honour
By a deed of infamy.

It isn't the way of Britain
To grasp with greedy hand
And hold with a despot's power
Domain in a friendly land.
But she fights for "a scrap of paper,"
She dies for "an old coloured rag,"
When the one is her word of promise,
And the other her blood-stained flag.

It isn't the way of the British,
With ruthless hands of hate
The priceless things of a nation
To plunder and desecrate
Not 'gainst defenceless women
And children their guns are turned,
Not 'gainst the weak and fallen.—
That isn't the way they've learned

It isn't the way of the British
To strike like the heathen hordes,
To torture the hapless captives
They take at the point of their swords,
That was never the way with Britain,
Her strength is the strength of ten,
For her sons in her far-flung warfare
Fight ever like gentlemen.

There were thirty or more of our gunners—
It was but a week ago—
Were called to a post of peril
In the path of the furious foe.
It was certain death, and they knew it,
But the valour in each heart burned,
"Good-bye, good bye to you, fellows,"
They called—and never returned.

Again came the short,—sharp summons,
And there dashed through the sulphurous smoke
With the same farewell to their comrades,
While a wreath of smile out-broke
Thirty to follow the thirty:
And the eager ranks closed in:
That is the way of the British,
That is the way they win.

This is the way of the British—
In the strength of their righteous cause,
Upheld by the hosts of heaven,
They strike for their king and laws.
From what do they shrink—our soldiers?
They may lose in the fearful fray
Their lives, but never their honour,
Who fight in the British way.

Then here's to the lads in the army,
And here's to the lads on the sea,
To the hands that are strong and steady,
To the hearts that are true and free!—
Though long it be 'ere the dawning,
It cometh at last—the day
When all that you've fought for, bled for,
You shall win the British way.

Soldiers Were Starving.

LONDON, Oct. 24.—In a despatch from Warsaw the correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Co. says the German retreat from Warsaw was so precipitate that the soldiers had to abandon their food supplies. Many of the prisoners taken are exhausted from starvation. One complete unit of 800 men has been captured by the Russians.

Dutch To Evict Refugees.

LONDON, Oct. 24. — A despatch from The Hague says it is semi-officially announced that the Netherlands Government, in pursuance of its decision to free eastern and northern Holland of the burden of caring for the Belgian refugees will run many trains to-day from the various cities in these districts to Belgium.

Experimenting With New Gun.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 24—The newspaper, Broningen, states that experiments are proceeding at the Krupp Gun Works at Heppen, near the Dutch frontier, with a 52-centimetre gun, which is said to have a range of 25 miles.

Canada Bars Three Papers.

OTTAWA, Oct. 24. — The Department of Customs has prohibited the further importation into Canada of two English weeklies, Illustrated Bits and Ally Sloper's Half Holiday, and a New York bi-weekly, The Vital Issue.

The English publications are regarded by the Department as immoral and the American publication as untruthful and unfair in its anti-Britishism.

Aaron Comstock One Of The Few Pioneer Merchants Remaining

Was Eighty Years Old Last Sunday---Came to Peterboro' in 1852 and Became an Apprentice in the Art of Cabinet Making---Bought Out His Employer in 1873 and Built His Own Store in 1886---Tells of a Few of His Experiences

"The old order changeth. . ." The frequent repetition of this quotation tends to diminish its effectiveness. Particularly when our years form but a compartively short span, and our experience has not been sufficiently mellowed to prompt searching retrospection. But when you look back through a long vista of years with one who has journeyed down them, observantly, the ever changing customs and conditions, gradual though they have been, can be easily and clearly traced. Even in the stretch of half a century a world of progress is presented in revision, and the development of our own Peterborough has passed through phases most interesting, but too numerous to touch upon in a brief review.

In this regard, the Examiner recently enjoyed an interview with Aaron Comstock, the senior member of the George Street firm of undertakers and furniture dealers. Sunday, October 18th, was Mr. Comstock's eightieth birthday, and as a business man of this City during the past forty-one years, he holds the distinction of being a surviving link with the merchants of the Peterborough of the early seventies.

Both Parents Died.

He was born in Colborne on Lake Ontario, and at a tender age was left an orphan. When he was four years old he lost his father, and his mother died when he was nine. Mr. Comstock's uncle, John Cox, received him into his home, where he continued to live until he was seventeen. The late Hon. Geo. A. Cox was a first cousin to Mr. Comstock. The latter's mother was a brother of the late Senator's father, the first stock their native town, the first stock coming as pioneers to the settlement from England.

A Cabinet Maker.

Note the circumstances which guided Mr. Comstock into the occupation of cabinet making. John Cox had married a Miss Tanner. Her brother, George, had a cabinet-making shop, where D. Belleghem and Sons are now located. Mr. Tanner married a Miss Stewart, a Peterborough girl who had gone to Rochester, and after the wedding they visited Colborne. Mr. Tanner proposed that young Comstock accompany him to Peterborough, to learn the art of cabinet-making, and pressed the offer so warmly that the youth decided to go.

Arrived in 1852.

It was on January 2, 1852, that Mr. Comstock first arrived in Peterborough and immediately began to learn his trade. Everything went smoothly until June of that year when one Saturday the apprentice had a difference with his employer and threw up his position. That afternoon he had packed his belongings and was preparing to leave by boat for Harwood and cross to Colborne. While waiting in an hotel which decorated the corner of George and Hunter Streets, where Mr. Madill's store now stands, Mr. Comstock met a farmer who needed a helper to handle the hay crop. That casual acquaintance gave the young man an idea of practical farming, according to the methods then employed. Mr. Comstock remained "on the land" until the fall work was completed, and returned to Peterborough on his way home.

Winter at Railroad Building.

Once more circumstances disposed of him contrary to his plans. At that time the work of building the railroad from Port Hope to Beaverton was under way and the offer of work was thrust at Mr. Comstock the very day he returned to town. He thereupon engaged to drive a team in connection with the road building and remained at this work during the winter. On March 17th two sleigh loads of Irish Catholics were coming in to Church, and Mr. Comstock drove in with them, accepting the opportunity of getting back to Peterborough and of bidding farewell to railroad building.

Back to Cabinet-Making.

Thos. Poole, with his sons, Edwin, Charles and William, conducted at that time a large cabinet-making shop on the north side of Sherbrooke Street, directly over the creek. The flow of water was heavier than the present trickle and afforded power, which was harnessed and utilised in the factory. Even now there are traces of the wooden work of the ancient structure, but the younger set would require a keen imagination to picture the activity Sherbrooke Street once promised. At any rate, in 1853, Mr. Comstock was engaged by Mr. Poole (afterwards best known as Col. Poole who was one of Peterborough's prominent volunteers against the Fenian Raiders), and returned to complete an apprenticeship in cabinet-making.

First Advancement.

Mr. Poole had up-town showrooms and undertaking rooms, situated below the old Grand Central Hotel, or about the present position of the Bank of Nova Scotia, or thereabouts. Mr. Ryan conducted a leather business in the other section of the building. When Col. Poole responded to the call to repel the Fenian invasion, he took Mr. Comstock from the Sherbrooke Street shop and put him in charge of the retail business uptown. This advancement opened a new field to young Comstock, and the knowledge he gained provided the equipment with which he was ready to act for himself when the opportunity was presented. On the 29th day of December, 1859, he married, and in 1873, with twenty years' experience behind him he bought the Poole business.

Builds His Own Store.

In the meantime fire had swept out the Sherbrooke Street shop, and later, Mr. Comstock moved into a building south of where Moore's monumental works now stand. However, the owner would not give a long lease and at the expiration of every term there would come the announcement of a considerable rental increase, which finally forced Mr. Comstock to purchase his present property. Hence it was in 1886, that he built his own store, the north half of the present Comstock building. Some years later, when the growth of the business rendered it imperative, the size of the building was doubled. At the present time every foot of its space being required for the furniture and undertaking business that Mr. Comstock and his sons have developed. Looking back from the present flourishing business which Mr. Comstock steadily and industriously accomplished, one cannot fail to remark the influence of his uncle's marriage to the sister of a Peterborough cabinet-maker in determining his life work.

Development of Furniture.

The development of the design and manufacture of furniture in this country has been confined to the years of Mr. Comstock's experience. Down in the Poole shop on Sherbrooke Street, tables and chairs were made according to the pattern then in vogue. Plainness was their principal feature. Good furniture was not made in this country in those days, and, it might be remarked, the choice woods were not utilised. Quartered oak, mahogany, etc., were not employed as now, the labour-saving machinery had not been invented. There were a few turning lathes but that was about the limit. Hand work was called upon more widely than now. So, Mr. Comstock declares that in the vast majority of homes the tables chairs and beds were exceedingly plain and bare, and lacked finish. Basswood was largely used and finishing experts stopped with a coat or two of varnish. The contrast with the present-day furniture manufactured in Canada is apparent to everyone. Four-poster beds of the old days, without any iron in their make-up, and with ropes instead of wooden slats, are decidedly rare, but Mr. Comstock states that occasionally one is heard of in different parts of the country where they are held chiefly as heirlooms. The old four posters with the sides screwed into the top and bottom, with a straw mattress over the rope "slats" and a big feather tick composing the top surface was the design favoured in the earlier days, and they possessed their own features of comfort.

Good Furniture Imported.

Mr. Comstock states that the only good furniture in the town was brought from the Old Country by people of means, moving here. And the development of home furniture might be detailed in the same way, but the few examples mentioned suffice to show the vast changes that have taken place accompanying the growth of the business.

First to Little Lake.

Central Park, in the old days, was used as a burial ground, and having learned the business from Mr. Poole, Mr. Comstock had charge of funerals to that ground, and to the best of his knowledge, he had the first funeral to the Little Lake Cemetery.

Listening to his recital of the conditions of the City when the new cemetery was selected one must admire the work of the citizens who chose that beautiful ground. To begin with, George Street had its southerly limit about Dalhousie Street. At that point it was lost in whatever was left of the forest primeval. Of course it had been cleared out, but was not a regular highway. There was a knoll at the C. P. R. station site, but proceeding south, there was swamp land that promised big obstacles to circumvent. Also, the present Crescent Street was exposed to the water of the lake and every year was being gradually washed out.

Crescent Street Cribbed.

The late Jas. Stevenson was member of parliament at that time, and his advocacy of a proposal to protect Crescent Street with cribbing, and his work in the House secured a grant toward this venture. The Town had to pay a large share of the cost and the big, squared timbers were offered at a bargain price by George Hilliard, a lumber man then operating in Peterborough. Mr. Comstock did not remember the details of securing the Little Lake Cemetery, but in any case the wisdom of their selection will always be acclaimed by Peterborough's residents.

Roundabout Trip.

Road-building was doubtless known by the citizens fifty years ago but it was not widely practiced. Hence, at some seasons o fthe year the streets were reduced to the consistency of ploughed fields. Recalling the funeral of the late Sam Dickson, who was drowned in the year of the Peterborough flood, Mr. Comstock stated that to reach the cemetery he had to drive out Sherbrooke to the Boundary, south to Lansdowne street, and east to the Cemetery entering from the south side. For many years Aylmer Street was used until George Street was opened, south of Dalhousie Street.

A Big Distillery Plant.

Recalling the industrial promise of Sherbrooke Street, Mr. Comstock remarked that opposite the Poole shop John Glenn erected a distillery. At least the building was intended for that purpose. It was on the south side of the street and also over the creek. A big spread of a building, it was prepared for distilling operations but the actual work was never commenced. The lumberman, George Hilliard, secured possession of it, and converted it into a storehouse for his lumbering supplies. Behind it, he erected stables for his horses. With many other of the old wooden structures it disappeared in the maw of the voracious fire fiend.

George Street Buildings.

Those were the days when bricks were scarce. George Street, when Mr. Comstock was a youth, was but a collection of shacks. At least the buildings were little better than shacks according to present day standards. They were practically all of wood, and let none of the young people imagine that they were contiguous. There were open spaces of land between stores and taverns the latter being quite numerous. Nicholls and Hall, proprietors of one of the most flourishing general businesses of that time, boasted but a long, wooden building, where the Bank of Montreal now stands. Yet fortunes were gathered therein without the assistance of the present day methods so necessary to success.

Mr. Comstock a Fireman.

That entire block, bounded by Water, Hunter, George and Simcoe streets, was swept by fire during the time that Mr. Comstock served as a volunteer in the fire engine department. Only two buildings remained, that of Nicholls and Hall, and the other where the Bank of Toronto is located to-day. The Fire Department was a vastly different department then. Thos. Rutherford, the last Chief of the Volunteer Fire Brigade, was a young stripling in the hook and ladder section, when Aaron Comstock was one of the youths who manned the pumps. The big fire referred to was responsible for the purchase of a

For a good many years a lot of people have been fooled in the belief that tea and coffee were good for them—that they were harmless—even beneficial.

It was only when the scientific research of the medical profession began to lay bare the bones of the tea and coffee skeleton, that people awoke to the fact that much of the Nervousness, Indigestion, Heart Disturbance, Short Breath, Headache, Biliousness, Sleeplessness, etc., were directly due to tea and coffee drinking.

The proof came to these people when they tried the easy test of quitting both tea and coffee for a while and used

A SORE WHICH WOULD NOT HEAL

Policeman's Testimony to Zam-Buk

Constable R. B. Nunn, of Vernon, B.C., says: "I would like to bear testimony to the wonderful healing properties of Zam-Buk. For over two years I suffered acutely with a sore on my leg which, despite all treatment, turned into an open ulcer. I tried all kinds of medicines, ointments, liniments, etc., but notwithstanding, the wound seemed only to get worse. Finally it became so bad that I was on the point of going into a hospital, when a friend persuaded me to try Zam-Buk. I did so, and the first few applications made the ulcer less painful. By degrees the inflammation went down and there were traces of healing. To cut a long story short, from the time of first commencing to use Zam-Buk the ulcer improved and twelve boxes of Zam-Buk effected a complete cure.

"Altogther the ulcer was healed, I was still afraid that the healing would be only temporary, and that in a very short time it would break out again. To my extreme delight such has not been the case. It is close on a year since Zam-Buk healed the ulcer, and as there is not the slightest trace of any further trouble, I can safely speak of my case as a complete cure."

The above is but one of many instances where Zam-Buk has proved effective in healing old and obstinate sores after other preparations have completely failed. For eczema, piles, cuts, burns, and all skin diseases or injuries and as an embrocation for rheumatism, sciatica, stiffened muscles etc., nothing can equal Zam-Buk. All druggists and stores or from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price, 50c per box. Refuse substitutes.

AN ARMOURED CAR'S WORK

Cousin of Oscar Straus Has Spent Busy Time With New War Machine —Honoured by Joffre and Belgian King

LONDON, Oct. 22.—An American in the Belgian army, Lieut. Edward E. Straus, a cousin of Oscar Straus, of New York, has been doing remarkable work since the beginning of the war, and his exploits in his armoured car are talked about on the fighting lines from the channel to the Vosges. He is now in London at the request of the British war office, superintending the building of additional armoured motor cars for a British expeditionary force. I saw him at the Carlton hotel yesterday.

Lieut. Straus' parents are Americans. He was born there, too, but for the last eighteen years they have lived in Belgium. When the war broke out he volunteered and offered some designs for an armoured motor car to the government. They accepted both offers and he soon became the terror of the Germans from one end of Belgium to the other.

Lieut. Straus' car is entirely protected by armour and is bullet-proof. Several shots were fired at it from less than six feet without result. It holds a machine gun and four men and makes raids of ten to forty miles through the German lines almost daily. Straus' intimate knowledge of all the highways and byways of Belgium has stood him in good stead. He took care always to return by a different route.

When the Germans were building obstacles on the roads near Louvain he was reported near Namur. The next day he was blowing up horses and men attached to transports near Aerschot, while twenty-four hours later he was seen near Ghent.

Among his rewards to date are the Leopold order, which was pinned on him by King Albert, a lieutenancy and a mitrailleuse, the latter a recognition from the French government.

The Leopold order he won for blowing up three railroad bridges over the Wavre, ten miles inside the German lines, which retarded the advance of the Germans' head column for twenty-four hours. His promotion from a private to lieutenant came after he made a little jaunt of twenty miles to extricate two other armoured cars out of a tight corner.

For taking urgent dispatches from the Belgian general staff to the French commander-in-chief, on which occasion he drove, for ten miles almost between the French and German lines, Gen. Joffre offered him a decoration of whatever he would like to have.

"If it is the same to you," Straus said, "I would much appreciate a mitrailleuse, for my little knockabout."

Needless to say, it was given to him. Straus is attached to the Belgian general staff.

DISTRIBUTION OF SEED GRAIN AND POTATOES

Director of the Dominion Experimental Farms Makes Announcement

By instructions of the Hon. Minister of Agriculture a distribution of superior sorts of grain and potatoes will be made during the coming winter and spring to Canadian farmers. The samples for general distribution will consist of spring wheat (about 5 lbs.), white oats (about 4 lbs.), barley (about 5 lbs.), and field peas (about 5 lbs.). These will be sent out from Ottawa. A distribution of potatoes (in 3 lb. samples) will be carried on from several of the experimental farms, the Central Farm at Ottawa supplying only the provinces of Ontario and Quebec. All samples will be sent free, by mail.

Applicants must give particulars in regard to the soil on their farms, and some account of their experience with such kinds of grain (or potatoes) as they have grown, so that a promising sort for their conditions may be selected.

Each application must be separate and must be signed by the applicant. Only one sample of grain and one of potatoes can be sent to each farm. If both samples are asked for in the same letter, only one will be sent. Applications on any kind of printed form cannot be accepted.

As the supply of seed is limited, farmers are advised to apply early; but the applications will not necessarily be filled in the exact order in which they are received. Preference will always be given to the most thoughtful and explicit requests. Applications received after the end of January will probably be too late.

All applications for grain (and applications from the provinces of Ontario and Quebec for potatoes) should be addressed to the Dominion Cerealist, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa. Such applications require no postage. If otherwise addressed, delay and disappointment may occur.

Applications for potatoes, from farmers in any other province should be addressed (postage prepaid) to the Superintendent of the nearest Branch Experimental Farm in tht province.

J. H. GRISDALE, Director,
Dominion Experimental Farms.

AFTER THE CRUISERS

Allies' Fleet of 70 Warships Will Sweep the Seas in Search of Wandering German Vessels

BIG EXPANSE TO COVER

LONDON, Oct. 23, 7 p.m.—The admiralty to-night issued a statement outlining the steps that are being taken to round up the eight or nine German cruisers at large in the Atlantic, Pacific and Indian Oceans. These cruisers include the Emden, which has sunk or captured 20 British vessels to date in the Indian Ocean, and the Karlsruhe, which has taken 13 British ships in the Atlantic. The statement says:

"Searching for these vessels and working in concert under various commanders-in-chief are upwards of 70 British, Australian, Japanese, French and Russian cruisers, not including auxiliary cruisers. Among these are a number of the fastest British cruisers.

Big Expanse to Cover.

"The vast expanse of seas and oceans and the many thousands of islands offer almost infinite choice of movement to the enemy's ships. In spite of every effort to cut of their coal supply it has hitherto been maintained by one means or another. In the face of increasing difficulty the discovery and destruction of these few enemy cruisers, therefore, is largely a matter of time, patience and good luck. The public should have confidence that the commanders-in-chief and the experienced captains serving under them are doing all that is possible and taking the best steps to bring the enemy to action.

C.P.R. LINER ATHABASCA GROUNDED, BUT OFF AGAIN

SAULT STE MARIE, Oct. 23—During a dense fog early this morning the Canadian Pacific steamer Athabasca ran aground just above the rock cut at West Neebish Channel. The tug Sabin left at once for the scene and succeeded in getting the big liner off at noon after lightering a portion of her cargo. The Athabasca was apparently uninjured and was able to proceed on her trip down the lakes.

A dense fog has settled down over St. Mary's River to-night, accompanied by drizzling rain.

NEW BUTTER WORKER FOR THE CREAMERY

Growing Conditions of the Peterborough Creamery Demand Large Machines

It is pleasing to note that the increasing business of the Peterborough Creamery has necessitated butter-making machinery of greater capacity.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, the proprietor, has a clear vision of the good times ahead and the opportunities tending to the advantage of his butter, cream and milk industry. Last week he installed a new Alpha Cream and Butter worker of a new and improved type with a capacity for nearly double his former machine. It is built for heavy duty, with chain drive, and is calculated to meet the full requirements of this growing Peterborough industry.

This churn, as its name implies, has been specially designed for heavy duty, to the extreme of standing up under operation for the full twenty-four hours each day, if necessary. Special attention has been given sanitary features in the frame design, with the object of avoiding all corners or crevices wherein an accumulation of putrifying matter might lodge, with disastrous effects to the atmosphere of the butter room.

The principle here employed in churning and working has been proved by actual experience to be the most satisfactory. The butter is churned, worked and salted within a closed barrel or drum and is not at any time exposed to the atmospheric conditions or flies of the butter room. This enclosed system of churning and working also produces a butter of much finer texture, owing to the better control of temperature and moisture. The mechanical construction is designed for durability and ease of operation and is such that the churn is almost noiseless when in use. This is a decided advance in churn making over anything previously offered the creamery men of Canada.

FOUND VALISE IN THE RIVER

This morning an employee of the Fitzsimmons Auto Body Works brought a traveller's valise to Chief of Police Short which he had found in the river at Wellington Street bridge. The valise had been cut open along the side and the contents consisted of a pair of pyjamas, shaving brush, some Gillette safety razor blades, a shaving brush and five collars with "W. J. D." marked on them, presumably a laundry mark. The opinion of the Chief is that it is a valise which has been stolen and after the contents had been searched by the thief and had taken what he wanted, he threw it in the river. The valise couldn't have been in the river long as it was still floating when found.

This morning a "Post" reporter investigated the mystery, and discovered that the owner of the valise was Mr. W. J. Donovan of Peterborough, representing the International Correspondence School. He had left his valise at the Benson House yesterday and last night while he was out spending the evening, a sneak thief stole it from the hotel.—Lindsay Post.

THE GOLD FISH ATTRACTION

The interesting advertising device introduced by Messrs. McDermid & Jury of the "Rexall Drug Store" during the past two days, of giving live gold fish in a globe with purchases of Rexall goods was a real success. The gold fish were quite a new attraction to shoppers, and it is safe to say that the supply was too small for the demand. On both days, Rexall goods were in lively demand and "sold like hot cakes."

Germans Again on the Offensive But Experts Believe the Kaiser's Attack Has Passed Maximum Strength

YESTERDAY'S BATTLE

LONDON, Oct. 24. — The Germans have undertaken a general offensive movement along the line extending from the River Yser, on the North Sea, to the River Meuse, and while they have compelled the allies to give ground in some places they themselves have lost positions in others. This, in a few words, is what is gathered from official reports coming last night from the French and German headquarters.

The German attack yesterday was particularly severe in the west, where their right wing, strongly reinforced by fresh troops, attempted an advance against the Belgians, who are holding the allies' extreme left. This left rests on the coast and is supported by British and French warships and by Anglo-French troops, which form a front from a point somewhere in the vicinity of Dixmude southward to La Bassee Canal. Both sides claim successes, but the French alone admit that in places they have been compelled to fall back.

Generally, however, there is little or no change in the situation, the swinging and swaying of the lines being the same as has been going on for weeks.

The French yesterday captured Altkirch, Upper Alsace, at the point of the bayonet.

A heavy battle is raging in Belgium about 20 miles south of the Ghent-Bruges line and north of Roulers, according to The Telegraaf's correspondent in Suis, Holland. Roulers was again bombarded by the Germans on Thursday.

"Fugitives from Roulers declare," says the correspondent, "that forty inhabitants of that town were shot by the Germans during the invaders' occupation, and that all the prominent citizens were taken as hostages.

"There is no confirmation of the report that the allies have broken through the German lines near Eecloo."

Putting together the fact of the Kaiser's placing what is practically a mob of raw recruits on the battle front, and the special attention that is now being paid to plans for the sea and air forces, military experts have formed the opinion that the Kaiser's offensive plan of campaign against France has passed its maximum strength, and that from this time on the Germans' efforts will show a weakening.

Reinforcements of British troops are now being concentrated at a point near Havre as a reserve army, to take up the task of defending the sea coast should the Germans succeed in defeating the Belgian army at the River Yser. Such a defeat, it is argued, would enable the Kaiser to carry out his cherished project of hurling a huge army against Dunkirk, and possibly Calais. At present, however, the tide of battle is taking the other turn at the Yser, and the gallant little Belgian army, with an allied British and French squadron sweeping the Belgian seaboard, in defiance of submarine attacks, has won a victory for the allies by forcing the crossing of the Yser, where they aided in blocking German raids on Dunkirk and Calais, and are now firmly established on the right bank of the river.

Heavy reinforcements have enabled the Germans to attack with increased vigor the right wing of the allied armies in France, while continuing the violent attacks upon the Belgian, British and French armies, which are resisting their advance over the coast and canal region of Belgium and northeastern France.

The forces of Crown Prince William yesterday failed in a desperate attack on the French at St. Mihiel. In the Meuse region the Germans are striving to halt the advance of the French toward Etain, an important station commanding the railway to Metz.

Berlin's official day report says that the Germans were successful on Thursday along the Yser Canal, advanced south of Dixmude, and attacked with success west of Lille, occupying a number of villages. However, persistent but unconfirmed reports say that Lille has been recaptured by the allies.

TAKEN BY SURPRISE

British Monitors Play Havoc in the Ranks of Germans

LONDON, Oct. 24.—A special despatch to The Standard from the north of France says: The German losses on the coast from the fire of the British monitors, which, with their light draught, are able to go close in shore among the sandbanks off Ostend and Nieuport, have been enormous. The gunners obtained the exact range of the German camps during the night, mainly from the indispensable fires, and shelled them at dawn, before their guns could make any sort of reply, the horses stampeding in all directions. Tents were overturned or blazing, and hundreds of dead and wounded lay where they had been sleeping calmly, as complacent as conquerors.

Around Peronne the Germans appear to be concentrating an immense mass of troops on a movement towards Amiens and Rouen, to cut off the British and Belgian communications before proceeding southwards to attack Paris. They cannot leave the allies' army in the northeast on their right, so heavy fighting is taking place right up to the coast. The Germans are seeking to occupy Pas de Calais before they advance much farther into France lower down. That they seriously hope to attack England before attempting once more to invest Paris is hardly conceivable. The cheerfulness of the cosmopolitan population of Pas de Calais, now that the great exodus of refugees from Belgium is over, is altogether admirable.

BATTERIES DESROYED

French Artillery North of the Aisne Achieves Notable Success

PARIS, Oct. 24.—The French official communication issued last night says: "On our left wing the action continues with great violence, notably around Arras, La Bassee and Armentieres.

"The allies have lost some ground at some points around La Bassee, but have won some at the east of Armentieres.

"Generally speaking, on this part of the front the situation remains the same.

"To the north of the Aisne our artillery has destroyed three German batteries."

The afternoon's War Office communique says:

"On our left wing the very considerable German forces, whose presence was reported Thursday, have continued very violent attacks in the region between the sea and the canal of La Bassee.

"Generally speaking, the position of the allied forces has been maintained. If the allies have had to cede at certain points, they have advanced at others. The enemy also has evidenced very great activity in the region of Arras and on the River Somme. To the north and to the south of this stream we have progressed, particularly in the region of Rosieres en Santerre.

"In the region of Verdun, and in the region of Pont-a-Mousson we have had some partial successes. On the rest of the front there is nothing to report.

"To sum up: The enemy appears to be undertaking, along the major part of the front, and particularly between the North Sea and the Oise, new effort, making use of corps made up of new organizations. These are composed of men recently drilled, some of them very young, and others of middle age, and have staffs drawn from various parts of the army."

PINK PYJAMA GIRL MARRIED

And Her Husband is Leaving For the French Battlefields

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Oct. 24. — Pauline Chase, the American actress, and Alexander Drummond, son of George Drummond, head of Drummond's Bank, London, were married to-day at St. Martin's-in-the Fields. Miss Chase, best known to fame as the "Ping Pyjama Girl," from the role she played in musical comedy, is the daughter of Dr. E. B. Bliss, of Washington, D.C. Her husband is an officer in the West Kent Yeomanry, and their wedding was hastened by the war, as he is leaving for the front.

THE QUESTION DRAWER

Mr. E. O. Weber, the originator of the idea expressed in the Citizenship Campaigns, presided last evening, in St. Paul's Presbyterian Chruch, and made a stirring speech, in which he described the details of the work and the progress already achieved in Peterborough. He, good naturedly, urged the people to sit closer together, in order to accommodate those who were compelled to stand in the aisles and hall-ways. Hundreds stood during the service and scores were unable to secure admission at all.

Adjutant McElhiney of the Salvation Army, offered the opening prayer, while Mr. Albert E. Greenlaw, the coloured singer, favoured the audience with such selections as "The Plains of Paradise," "He Lifted Me" and "Tell Mother I'll Be There." The congregation joined enthusiastically in the chorus of the last selection. Mr. Edward J. Fisher presided at the piano and organ.

No meeting of the campaign will be held this evening. Two special meetings have been arranged for Sunday, at such hours as not to interfere with the regular services being held in the Churches of the City. At 4 p.m. on Sunday, in the Grand Opera House, Dr. Gordon will deliver his confidential talk to men. Only men will be admitted and boys under fifteen years of age will, of necessity, be excluded. Dr. Gordon has delivered this address before tens of thousands of young men on the continent of North America, and also in the presence of leading physicians and educationalists.

At 8.30 p.m. on Sunday evening, Dr. Gordon conducts a question drawer in the Grand Opera House. About twenty questions, bearing on the practical phases of life, and having to do with the application of the principles of Christianity to the affairs of everyday life, will be answered. This service will be a unique one. Mr. Greenlaw will sing at the Sunday evening service, and also at the meetings in the afternoon.

Aaron Comstock One Of The Few Pioneer Merchants Remaining

power pump much bigger than that which had been in use here. They were only fire engines then to the extent that they were used at fires. The present ideas were unthought of, but the force pump pattern, especially the big new pump, had long handles that required as many as twenty men to work. Quite a stream was thrown, but height was not seriously demanded for the reason that the buildings were only one and two storeys high. A few might have been loftier.

The Old Postoffice.

The first postoffice in Peterborough remembered by Mr. Comstock, was a small building on Simcoe Street, where the office of the Peterborough Cereal Co. is situated. It was only a little shack, about six feet square, with scarcely sufficient room for the Postmaster to turn around. J. S. Carver, father of Osway Carver North Monaghan, was the Postmaster. After a time, the office was moved to a building on Water Street on the ground now occupied by Bennett and Goodwill's office.

Some of the Merchants.

Contemporary clerks and business men remembered by Mr. Comstock were the late John Maloney, who conducted a grocery store; Robert Hamilton, flardware, about where Longe's fruit store is located on Hunter street; Robert Walton, general store, on the site of Payne's drug store; John Brown and a man named Chartrand in the furniture and undertaking business. The late Peter Connal was a clerk with Nicholls and Hall, and Mr. Richard Hall was with his uncle, William Hall of Nicholls and Hall, referred to above.

Other Recollections.

Mr. Comstock's recollections include the lumber wealth of this section. On occasions he has seen the Little Lake covered with huge squared timbers, floated down from the north country on their way to Montreal via the Trent River and Lake Ontario. The huge trees were felled and the squaring was done back in the woods. They were owned by W. A. Scott, who cribbed them to Montreal.

But the days when the City was a marsh, south of Dalhousie and all woods, west of Aylmer street, had its own compensations. To the pioneers were given many opportunities for work, and a fair reward for industry coupled with wise living. To-day Mr. Comstock insists upon following the work which he began more than a half century ago and takes pleasure in the fact that he is able to continue his life's occupation after passing the four-score mark. He bears his eighty years lightly and to him also will be borne the assurance that his friends extend to him their best wishes for the future.

Associated Charities

Rev. Mr. Turnbull of Toronto, Will Speak on Subject on Friday Evening Next

It is felt that in the city at the present time there is a great deal of charity giving that is haphadard, and with the idea of adopting some permanent organization, the local Council of Women have arranged for a meeting to be held in the parlours of the Y. W. C. A. on Friday evening next at 8 o'clock. This meeting will be addressed by Rev. Mr. Turnbull, who was for many years president of the Associated Charities of Toronto, and who will tell of the work carried on under their direction. It is hoped that a large number of men, and especially those officially in charge in charity distribution, will make an effort to be present. All citizens interested are invited to attend and there will be no admission fee.

RETREAT DISORDERLY

Russian Official Report Shows the Rout of Germans

LONDON, Oct. 24.—The following official communication was issued last night at Petrograd by the Russian General Staff:

"The energetic offensive of our armies, which have crossed the Vistula on a large front, encounter no resistance on the part of the Germans, who continue to retreat.

"In the trenches below Ivangorod we took large quantities of war stores and ammunition abandoned by the reserve corps of the Prussian guard in its hasty retreat.

"The Austrian armies continue to fight with stubbornness on the Vistula, on the San, and particularly to the south of Przemysl.

"In East Prussia there is no change in the situation."

The Petrograd correspondent of The Rome Tribuna thus desribes the latest phase of the fighting along the River Vistula:

"The combat is continued to the German left wing, where 600,000 Germans are engaged in battle with a million Russians.

"The fighting began on Oct. 7, becoming furious the 13th, and was finished on the 18th.

"The Russians drove before them ten cavalry divisions from Novo Georgievesk to a point west of Bsura, where was situated the extreme of the German left wing. The Germans were completely outflanked by the Russian cavalry, which appeared in their rear, producing a terrible panic.

"The order was given by the German commander for a general retreat toward Lowitz and Skierneviez, but the retreat soon degenerated into a disorderly flight, with the Russians still pursuing, and the flight momentarily becoming more disastrous.

"Emperor Nicholas has conferred the order of St. George, third class, on Grand Duke Nicholas, commander-in-chief of the Russian forces and the same order, fourth class, on Gen. Martinoff.

THE LIFE OF A WATCH

It should be cleaned and oiled once a year. Many good watches are allowed to go without cleaning and oiling, and the result is the oil is entirely dried up, the pivots become cut and rusted so badly that it costs nearly as much as a new movement to put it in proper condition again. The old saying "A stitch in time saves nine" holds good.

Profits Of Big Store For The Belgians

Business For the Day Will Be In the Hands of Patriotic Society

The first move to have something done locally to assist in the Belgian relief work has been the placing by the Board of Trade of subscription lists in the local banks. A number of subscriptions have been received.

Another important step in the same direction is announced for next Saturday, when a big George Street store will be turned over to the Peterborough Patriotic Society for the day and the entire profits will be devoted to the fund for assisting the Belgians. The project will be a novelty for Peterborough and a big day's business is looked for.

Avenue Of Trees Planted To-Day Along The Bank At T.A.S. Park

Members of St. Peter's T.A.S. left this afternoon for T.A.S. Park to begin the work of planting trees along the water front. The present plan provides for one row eight feet back from the top of the bank and a second row twenty feet further in. The trees in each row will be 25 or 30 feet apart and one line will stagger the other. On the interior of the Park property there are elm, oak and maple striplings. Hence, to-day's work simply means the locating of the two rows and the transplanting of the trees. Among those who made up the party were Geo. Ahearn, Sr., Arthur Sharpe, J. Dwyer, P. Kane, P. Hefferman, J. Condon, Geo. Ahearn, Jr., S. Houligan, Tom Gorman, D. Donoghue, A. Lebane, Jas. Drain, Art Coulin, D. McFadden, P. Heenan. It is understood that this is just the first step in the gradual improvement of the property. The trees along the bank will form a pretty avenue and will leave a wide athletic ground within.

PRAISE FOR GEN. HUGHES

Special Wire to The Examiner:

LONDON, Oct. 24.—Sam Hughes, motored yesterday to the south coast where he inspected the South Down Battalion of the Sussex Regiment. Introducing the visitor, Claude Lowther, M.P., said General Hughes was far more than the Canadian Minister of Defence. He would go down to posterity as the man who in the Empire's dark days undertook to provide Earl Kitchener with ten thousand men within a fortnight. That pledge he had more than fulfilled.

Another Son In The Spanish Royal Family

Special Cable to The Examiner:

MADRID, Spain, Oct. 24.—In the presence of the civil and military dignitaries of Spain, as is the Spanish royal custom, a son was born this morning to Queen Victoria of Spain, the grand-daughter of Queen Victoria of England. This is six children, four boys and two girls. She was married to King Alfonso in 1906.

FOUR PORT HOPE LADIES ARE LOUDLY WELCOMED HOME

According to private information and to the following paragraph from the Guide of Port Hope, that slumberous hamlet woke up on Thursday afternoon to welcome home four Port Hope ladies, who had been "prisoners of war" in Germany. They were in that country when hostilities broke out, and they came through great tribulation before getting back to their lakeside home, only reaching London three weeks ago. They were travelling in Germany when surprised by the war, and during the interval they have given their friends in Canada a great deal of anxiety, now happily ended. When they arrived in Port Hope on Thursday afternoon a jubilation of bell ringing, whistle-blowing and popular congratulation broke out. It is a matter of local interest to state that two of the party, Mrs. (Dr.) Brent and Miss Marion Bletcher, are cousins of Mrs. Henry Rush, 51 Brock street. The paragraph from the Guide reads as follows:

Mrs. Brent, Miss Holdsworth, Misses Tuer and Miss Bletcher who have been making a tour of the continent and who experienced great difficulty in leaving Germany, arrived in town by the flyer this afternoon. Every whistle and bell in the town sounded a welcome for the young ladies, and "Home Sweet Home" was given by Mr. Byers on the chimes.

FIGHTING NEAR SEA COAST NOT ON A REALLY EXTENSIVE SCALE

LONDON, October 23.—A Times' despatch from "Northern France" says:

"The fighting near the sea coast is not on a really extensive scale. The German occupation of Ostend was in reality a foolish dash for the narrow seas, but they are still in force in the neighbourhood. Their reported retirement in the direction of Bruges is a precautionary measure which the allied activities to the southwest have rendered necessary.

"There is no foundation for the suggestion that Bruges has been evacuated. The Germans in the neighbourhood of Dixmunde and Ypres are being pushed steadily north and east. The enemy is continuing, without success, his attempt to force our hand to the north of Arras."

EDMUNDS HAS RETIRED WILL NOT MEET HARDY OR ANY OTHER WRESTLER

The letter published below from Lou E. Marsh of the Sporting Staff of the Toronto Star, indicates that there is no chance of a match between Artie Edmunds, the "Pocket Hercules," and Alf. Hardie, the English featherweight wrestler. Mr. Marsh explains that Edmunds did not authorize Forbes to accept Hardy's challenge on his behalf. It is significant, however, that Forbes' letter to the Examiner was written on Edmunds' letter paper and was accompanied by a cut of the Toronto wrestler.

Here is Mr. Marsh's letter:

Sporting Editor, Peterborough Examiner.

Sir,—Artie Edmunds is ill and has retired from the wrestling game for good. He will not wrestle Hardy, Forbes, or any one else in Peterborough or any other place under any consideration. He did not authorize Forbes to accept Hardy's challenge, and there is positively nothing doing because he is not in shape to do himself justice and he refuses to throw his Peterborough friends down by wrestling any one in his present condition.

Yours truly,

Lou E. Marsh.

Clarke Griffith Is Charged With Conspiracy With Boston

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 21.—It is not improbable that at the next meeting of the American League, Clarke Griffith, manager of the Washington team, will have to do some explaining.

The open way in which Griffith gloated over the defeat of the Athletics was the scandal of the series. Not only that, but Griffith and several Washington players told Stallings everything they knew about the batting styles of Athletic players. He conspired in every manner possible to bring about the defeat of the Mackmen and it is probable that the advice he showered on Stallings was partly responsible for the licking the Athletics received.

It happens that Griffith is a stockholder as well as manager and his treachery can scarcely be overlooked by other stockholders of the junior league. In the official programme at Fenway park there was a picture of Griffith and Jim Gaffney taken together. "Clarke Griffith, the man who induced James Gaffney to enter baseball." A well known Boston sport writer said in the press box that the caption should be changed to read, "Clarke Griffith, who helped James Gaffney win the world's championship."

Last Tuesday night when the baseball forces were leaving Boston, Jim Gaffney flashes a telegram from Griffith, who missed seeing the last game. It read: "Hurrah for the Braves. Congratulations."

In contrast to the Washington man was the same attitude of Owner Lannin of the Red Sox. Lannin and Gaffney are warm friends, the former giving Gaffney the use of Fenway Park ever since the Braves went on their winning streak. Lannin rooted hard for the Braves to win the National League pennant but his attitude in the series was different. He went on record as saying that he was for the Athletics to win because of his American League affiliations.

Philadelphia won't soon forget the treachery of Clark Griffith, as he will find out when the Washington team visits here next season.

ADVANCE IN SUGAR WAS A BIG SURPRISE

Canadian Grocer Reviews the Market Situation

Canadian Grocer, dealing with the market situation in this week's issue, says:

Just when it had been considered that the high point of the sugar market had been reached, and with values further declining in New York, came a surprise to the trade in a further advance. The advance of last week had been predicted and it left the situation firm, but in view of the conditions, higher prices were hardly looked for. The Acadia refinery gave the first intimation when the figures were raised 50c and there was some buying, but this was mostly checked by the action of the others in taking the level up 30 cents. The Montreal basis is now $7.05. Opinions are now that there are not likely to be further advances until there is more information as to the future situation.

The advance is another indication of the price which refiners had to pay for raws when they were forced into the open market to compete with American speculators. Refined in the States to-day is down to 6 cents. Great Britain has turned her demands to Java, and this, coupled with the American beet crop, caused a violent reaction. Developments will depend upon the strength of the British demand for Cubans when the Java supply is exhausted in about a month.

There is a feeling in the trade that there is something doing in tea. This week's cable from London denotes an advance of 1d since the last sale, which puts the market about 2d above the basis before the war, and this is emphasized in Canada by higher transportation costs. At the same time Ceylons and Indians are down 3 to 4 cents at original sources—but the trouble in to get them forward. Until these cheap teas arrive it is expected that London will go still higher. Japan teas are hard to get and Germany is thought to be diverting supplies of China blacks.

Imported dried fruits are expected to arrive shortly and as prices are not so materially above a year ago, the situation is relieved to a large extent and figures go to a lower basis, although higher than the opening of a year ago by ½c to 1c a pound.

The strength of wheat maintains the position of flour without change, although the demand is very weak at home and the price is not satisfactory for export. Domestic trade is on a hand-to-mouth basis and volume is light with consumers heavily stocked. Bakers show a reluctance to renew contracts under existing conditions. Wheat deliveries have been very light, but price now means a dollar net to the farmer, and this should mean better business. Rolled oats and other cereals are strong.

Britain has again become a factor in the Canadian egg market, and shipments for export have relieved the situation to such an extent that there is a reaction of feeling from a week ago, although the strength has not as yet raised the price level materially. Butter deliveries are light and prices somewhat higher, particularly in the East. There is an opinion that higher prices for cheese—which by the way incline to a higher level—are turning more dairy products to this channel.

Provisions continue to decline, and Toronto quotes another cent off all round. Hogs are lower, cool weather is at hand, and generally there is a reluctance on the part of the people to buy high price foods. Lard is easier in sympathy, being a cent off in Montreal.

Apples are reported to be moving freely, and it is considered that the publicity which has been given the big crop is having an effect on the consumption, although there is a complaint in some quarters that the prices are not as low as the public is generally led to believe.

French Retake Altkirch Fort

Possession of This Alsace Town is a Protection to Belfort

PARIS, Oct. 23—The French to-day captured Altkirch, Upper Alsace, where the battle of the Vosges continued vigorously throughout the day. The French and German infantry came to close quarters at Altkirch, and this place, after changing hands several times, was finally captured by the French at the point of the bayonet.

Altkirch has changed hands more than once before since the war began its occupation by either side usually accompanying that of Muelhausen, 12 miles to the north-east. Muelhausen at present is supposed to be in German possession.

TO REVIEW THE CANUCKS

Lord Roberts Inspects Canadians at Salisbury To-day—Double Company Drilling

NO RIFLES YET

SALISBURY, Oct. 24.—Two days ago the camp roads were two feet deep of powdered dust. To-day they are a veritable quagmire which makes the work of the army service corps doubly laborious.

Hard work has begun in earnest now in every brigade, although the whole of the troops have not even arrived yet from Plymouth. The first brigade attained its full complement yesterday. The Canadian battalions have all adopted the double company formation for drilling. Nothing has yet been done in the way of rifle practice. The rifles, in fact, are only just arriving in camp. Route marches are undertaken three times weekly.

Several sergeants' messes became "wet" Thursday night in accordance apparently with the announcement made by Gen. Alderson earlier in the week, but wet canteens for the men have yet to materialize.

This subject will probably provoke more discussion in Canada than on Salisbury Plains. Officers of the contingent appear to be agreeable to the establishment of such an institution, seeing that such is the custom in every training centre of this country. One must wait events to see the extent to which the canteens will be patronized.

LORD ROBERTS.

Meanwhile it is worthy of note that the marquees erected by the Y. M. C. A. are invariable crowded. Pianos are provided in each marquee with ample facilities for letter writing. The Canadian emigration department van arrived yesterday bearing a big consignment of song books for these marquees, as the gift of Hon. Dr. Roche.

A lively interest is being manifested in to-day's visit of Lord Roberts. After inspecting the parade at Bustard, he will proceed to each of the other three camps. Lord Roberts has always shown a particular interest in the Canadian military, every year traveling specially to Bisley to inspect the Canadian team. "Bobs" will not see the contingent at full strength, leave for the officers and men having been granted extensively over the week-end.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—Immense export sales gave the wheat market today a big upward swing. The volume of trade was the largest since the excitement at the beginning of the war. Prices closed steady at 1¼c to 1 3-4c net advance. Other leading staples too, all scored a gain—corn 3-4c to 7-8c, oats 3-4c to 1-2c and provisions from a shade to 10c.

Only Two Ontario Cities Have Not Tax Rate Lower Than That of This City

Provincial Government's Official Report Puts Peterboro Third Last in the List

The Provincial Government's official report on Municipal Statistics, dated September 30th, 1914, gives returns regarding the population and taxes of the various municipalities.

In comparing the rate of taxation in different places the question always arises as to whether the basis of valuation is the same. In one place the property may be assessed up to or close to its value, while in another the assessment may be below actual value.

By taking the taxes collected per head of population, no question of the basis of the assessment arises in making a comparison, and as each place is taken on the same basis this method appears to be a fair one.

The Government return shows the taxation per head of population in the cities in Ontario to be as follows:

Port Arthur	$24.44	$ 4.09	$20.77
Fort William	22.76	5.05	27.80
Toronto	45.32	6.26	21.58

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. W. D. Parker, Montreal, is in the City to-day.

Mr. Norman Moore left yesterday for Quebec, where he has accepted a position.

Mrs. Langfeldt and little Kathleen are spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Peck East City, and Miss Audrey Langfeldt is the guest of the Misses Rogers, Hunter Street, East.

Next week Mrs. Langfeldt, with her children, goes to Boston to join her husband, Rev. Dr. Langfeldt who is a special representative of the Dominion Government at that port, in connection with the Immigration Department. Several Orillians, landing at or sailing from Boston this summer, have had a pleasant surprise in meeting Dr. Langfeldt. Hereafter, his family comfortably settled with him, the Doctor will find his work agreeable, and less of a drain on his nervous energy than the work of the ministry which he has been obliged for a time at least, to relinquish, owing to unsatisfactory health.—Orillia Packet.

Mr. H. J. Osborn, London, England, who lectured recently in Peterborough, is in the city again over the week-end, staying at 190 Brock Street. He has spoken recently on "England To-day—Conditions in War Time," at Hamilton, St. Catharines, Orillia and Lindsay. Last night (Friday), in Lindsay Town Hall, Mr. Osborn had an influential audience. Amongst those present, several of whom took part, were the local M.P.P., the Police Magistrate ,the County Treasurer, Councillors, the Rector, other clergy and ministers, a leading doctor, merchants, school principals, and the chairman of the local Patriotic Fund.

RUGBY.

The Grove School Rugby team Lakefield, played the Collegiate Seconds this morning and were badly beaten, the final score being 46 to 0. The Lakefield boys were lighter and smaller than their local opponents, but played pluckily.

The world is a case in which humanity is tamed.

FINED FOR SUPPLYING LIQUOR

Pays $25 for Supplying Blacklister With Liquor

A local man was charged before the Police Magistrate this morning with supplying liquor to a blacklister. He pleaded that he did not know he was supplying the liquor to one who was on the prohibited list. The blacklister in question stated that the accused went and purchased a 65c. flask for him. Before doing so defendant asked "Are you on the list?" to which witness said "Oh! That's all right," and defendant said he would take a chance on it. He came back in the evening with a 26c. flask, and witness' son said to him: "If you give him (witness) that bottle, it will cost you $25." He, the defendant, notwithstanding, gave the witness the bottle.

The Magistrate found the defendant guilty and fined him $25 and costs, in default of payment, thirty days in gaol.

The blacklister, himself, was fined $10 for being found drunk while on the prohibited list.

BOY GAVE HIM DYNAMITE CAP

And as a Result Has Had Three Fingers Blown Off

Joseph O'Donnell, the twelve-year, old lad, who lives [illegible], met with a shocking accident on Wednesday morning, by having three fingers blown off his left hand, by playing with a dynamite cap, near the corner of Princess and Regent Streets, was feeling quite downcast on Thursday morning when seen by a Whig reporter. The little fellow is a fruit bit of a boy, but has grit. He told the reporter that if he had his fingers on again he would like to give the other boy a terrible pair of black eyes for giving him this deadly weapon.

Young O'Donnell said that he could write with either hand. When using a pencil he was best with his left member, but with pen and ink he preferred his right hand. He was of the opinion, however, that he may be able to manage all right. The lad told the Whig reporter that the boy who gave him the dynamite cap worked in a boot and shoe store.—Kingston Whig.

JOHNSTON AND DUNCAN TO RUN FOR MAYORALTY

Whisperings of the next mayoralty elections are already being blown about with the October winds. Some of the citizens when they straighten out the war operations and decide upon instructions for the allied commanders, turn to the local field and dig out possible candidates. For instance, rumour has been travelling of late that Ald. George Duncan is the favourite in the next race. Some of the people were for entering him last year, and while he considered it for a while he finally decided to let Messrs. Muller, Gillespie and Hartley have the course to themselves. This year the card has fewer entries in sight. Mayor Buller since his appointment as Inland Revenue Inspector, is regarded as about through with the ardurous duties of the Mayor's seat. Personally, he states that he has not given the matter much attention and has really nothing to announce yet. Ald. Duncan is inclined to think that His Worship will not be in the field, and in any case he is going to line up at the barrier. The duties of the Mayor's position could not have been a great deal heavier than those of the chairman of the Board of Works, and a few extra responsibilities would not be regarded as the last straw.

At the same time, Ald. Johnston is looked upon by not a few as a possible candidate. He has been sawing a "lot of wood" during the past two years, has the Hydro attached to his name, and now shoulders the Finance Department, all of which indicates that he is a willing worker and might accept a little bit more. In any case, the man on the street has Ald. Duncan and Ald. Johnston entered for this campaign with Mayor Buller retiring upon the laurels of having reigned during the year of the street paving operations.

Ald. Johnston has admitted that there is a very strong likelihood of his being in the field.

The evening service will be of an informal missionary character and at that service the Bishop will give the last of his missionary addresses. In the afternoon a men's meeting will be held at 3 o'clock, and it is expected that the service will be of much interest to men.

A DEPOSIT NOT A "FEE"

Our evening contemporary is a little in error, in stating as it did a few days ago that

"There is a retail merchants' association here (in Peterborough) and it is necessary for a merchant to pay a fee of one hundred dollars before he can sell goods."

It is estimated in addition that it is an element in a combine to enhance local prices. The statement is erroneous or unfortunately phrased. There is no fee for doing business; but there is a deposit of $100 required from every one entering mercantile business. This deposit with the city treasurer is a guarantee of the bona fides of the business man and a protection against the operations of the "transient trader," who has not the responsibility of paying taxes or of having a substantial stake in the city. This deposit is applied to the first payment of city taxes and if that does not exhaust it to next year's taxes. The miscalled fee is simply paying taxes in advance, in addition to being a protection against unresponsible mercantile enterprises. The deposit required can be easily justified as being in the interests of the purchasing public.

Captured; Not Killed

Mr. F. M. Dela Fosse's Cousin is in Germany

Some time ago it was reported that eleven officers of the King's Own York Light Infantry had been killed at Mons in the early stages of the war. The names of these officers included Col. R. C. Bond, cousin of Mr. F. M. Dela Fosse, Public Librarian, and Lieut. Bertram Denison of Toronto. This morning Mr. Dela Fosse received the pleasant information that these officers had not been killed in action, but taken prisoners, and are at present in Germany, where, if not exchanged, they may be interned till the close of the war.

Summary of Local News

Dr. Gordon's subject in George Street Methodist church to-night will be 'The Fashion Craze.'

The first snow of the season was noticed this morning. We have had such a fine fall that we must accept without complaint what comes in the shape of bad weather for the next two weeks.

The anniversary services of the Mark Street church were held yesterday, and two large congregations were present. At both services the Rev. Dr. Griffin, Treasurer of the Superannuation Fund, Toronto, preached, and his discourses were eloquent and inspiring. Miss Mary Dickson of Campbellford rendered two splendid solos, and in the evening Mr. Albert E. Greenlaw, the noted coloured singer with Dr. Gordon, gave a much appreciated solo.

EYE INJURED BY BLANK CARTRIDGE

Chief Thompson's Son, Milton, Met With An Unusual Accident On Saturday—Sight May Be Injured

Milton Thompson, the 16 year old son of Chief of Police Thompson, may lose the sight of one eye as the result of an injury sustained on Saturday. He was shooting at a blank cartridge, which he was using for a target, and as it exploded, the metal shell rebounded striking him on one eye. The shell had only a short distance to travel as the boy was rather close to it. Two stitches were required to close the wound in the lid, but the eyeball was also injured. It is hoped that no permanent effect will result from the accident.

Anniversary Services of The Mark Street Church Yesterday

Rev. Dr. Griffin, Treasurer of Superannuation Fund, Toronto Preached at Both Services to Large Congregations.

SPLENDID MUSIC

The Rev. Dr. Griffin occupied the pulpit and took charge of the Anniversary services of the Mark Street Church, yesterday morning and evening. He delivered two inspiring discourses, and was heard by large congregations.

At both services the music was excellent. In the morning the Choir rendered a splendid anthem most acceptably. The choir is well balanced and well conducted and acquitted itself admirably in its work. Miss Dickson, Campbellford, sang at both services. She possesses an unusually fine soprano voice and her solos yesterday were beautiful. Her tone and flexibility were remarkable while her expression was good. In the evening Mr. Albert E. Greenlaw sang, his resonant bass, which has already become familiar to local music lovers, being as effective as ever last night.

In the morning the Rev. Dr. Griffin took his text from the 137th Psalm, 5th and 6th verses:

"If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning." "If I do not remember Thee let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth."

The captives had been asked to sing one of the songs of Zion. The demand had been made by their captors, in a spirit of derision and mockery. Their songs were songs of triumph and of thankfulness for God's blessing and here were the Israelites in the hands of their enemies and the enemies of God. How would their grand old songs have fitted in? They would not only have been out of place, but singing them would be a sign that they had forgotten Jerusalem—had allowed to pass away from them all love and respect for the Holy City. But the expression of devotion for Jerusalem is borne out by their refusal to sing the songs of Zion. The writer, in strong terms, claims to love Jerusalem.

When the British residents of Aniasiula were taken prisoners and thrown into a gaol, a British Regiment was despatched to free them, and punish their captors. Lord Napier was at the head of the small British forces which pushed its way toward the jail where the Britons were confined. If, as they had neared the dungeon, they had heard those interned there singing "God Save the Queen" would it not have been magnificent? Would it not show that they had not forgotten their native land that they retained their love of country and loyalty to the Sovereign? Surely. But as this act would be a token of faithfulness and allegiance to the same extent the Israelites singing their songs, would have been disrespectful and disloyal to Jerusalem.

"If I prefer not Jerusalem." There were acts of preference as well as words of preference. It was the law of nature that a man should love and prefer his native land and home. We all understood and were guided by the love of country constantly. The speaker had just come from visiting his home, where he and the other members of his family had been born and raised to become men and women. The place recalled the scenes of his earlier years and he lived again the days of childhood and youth; his veins pulsed again with the stimulating red blood of the young.

No matter if a man's birthplace was in the humblest cot in a thriftless village in some desolate rural region, the hills and plains, the valleys and the streams of that neighbourhood would be dear to him all the years of his life. Only by a process false education or the course of an evil life could his love for the scenes of his youth be diminished.

In continuing, Dr. Griffin spoke of the place the Church should have in a man's life. The Church should not be only a refuge; it should not only be a trench on the battlefield of life into which a man crawled and have been sheltered from the storm of shot and shell of the enemy. It should not be only a place to spend a few hours of worship and social intercourse during the week. A man should love the Church. There was no other thing in the world like it. The love we had for home should be but an illustration of the love we have for the place where we were spiritually born.

Nobody but a Christian could realise the life that lies before one after death. He looks beyond death and the grave and sees the golden hills and hears angelic songs and has rapturous experiences which cannot be told.

Those who had the love of God in their hearts would go and tell what a Saviour they had. God loved us. Our Heavenly Father, infinite to all eternity, above power and principalities, the maker and holder of all things. He loved us. He manifested for us a love that words could not express, an affection that was supreme and undying in its character.

In conclusion, Dr. Griffin made a stirring appeal for funds to help the work of the Church, and yet the conclusion of his sermon was far from mercenary in its character and just as inspiring or more so, than those parts of it with which money was not concerned.

Dr. Griffin said that he belonged to only one Society and that was the Methodist Society. In it was to be found Charity, Goodness, Benevolence, Devotion and Fellowship.

Romance of Rideau Hall Ended By Death In Action

OTTAWA, October 26.—A cablegram received at the Government House to-day announces the death in action of Major Sir Charles Rivers Bulkeley, C.M.G., M.V.O., formerly comptroller of the Duke of Connaught's household.

Major Rivers Bulkeley, who was a member of the Scots Guards, married Miss Pelly, who was lady-in-waiting to the Princess Patricia, and who is now in England with her infant son, on April 19, 1913. The marriage in London, which was attended by the members of the royal family, attracted wide attention, and the wedding gifts included many from Ottawa, where Major Rivers Bulkely and Miss Pelly had been most popular.

BELGIANS PERFORMED HEROIC FEAT OF ARMS

LONDON, Oct. 25.—"All the allies must take their hats off to the Belgian army which for several days held in check two entire German army corps near Dixmunde, frustrating the German designs on the strip of territory between Dunkirk and Calais," says a despatch to the Times from one of its correspondents in Northern France. The message continues:

"It is now permitted to explain how the Belgian army was able to take up a position on the Yser Canal in other words, how it was able to make a successful retreat from Antwerp in face of the elaborate plans of the Germans. The Belgian army escaped what might be called annihilation by a magnificent feat of arms. It sent a force of a few thousand men to the neighbourhood of Mullem (in East Flanders, 12 miles south-west of Ghent) with orders to hold back the pursuing enemy at all costs for a sufficient period to cover the retreat of the main army, which hugged the Dutch frontier on its seaward march. The Battle of Mullem eventually resulted in the virtual annihilation of the gallant little body of Belgian fighters, but it meant the salvation of the Belgian army and their allies.

"Lieut.-Col. Maritz (the head of the rebellion in British South Africa) attacked Kelmos (Cape Province) at 5 o'clock on the morning of Oct. 22, with a force of 1,000 men, including several hundred Germans and artillery and machine guns. Our casualities were ten wounded. The enemy left two dead, one a German and the other a native."

Russians Check Two Advances

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, OCT. 26—War office today definitely announced that it has recieved information from the front that both the German Advance on Poland and Austrian advance in Galicia have been checked. It states that the Germans have been using the Austrians to cover their retreat. The Russian centre and right continues to advance while left wing is maintaining new positions taken on left bank of San River.

The Badger, a sister of the Beaver, is of the ocean-going type of destroyer, and was launched in 1911. Her displacement is 782 tons, and her speed thirty knots. She has an oil capacity of 80 tons. She carries two 21-inch tubes.

No Verdict In Carman Murder Case

Jury Out Fourteen Hours—Prisoner Prostrated When Announcement Was Made—Bail May Be Given

FIVE BALLOTS TAKEN

MINEOLA, L. I., Oct. 25 — After having been out fourteen hours, the jury in the Carman murder case, unable to agree on a verdict, and standing 10 to 2 for acquittal, was discharged shortly after 11 o'clock this morning.

On hearing the result Mrs. Carman suffered a complete nervous collapse and had to be carried back to the county jail, where a physician attended her. She expressed herself as being bitterly disappointed.

The majority of the jurors were heartily cheered by the crowd, which insisted upon escorting them to the railway station, while the two who had held out had to be closely guarded to prevent hostile demonstration against them.

After the case had gone to the jury at 9.45 last night, the first intimation that the jury could not agree on a verdict came between midnight and 1 o'clock, when the foreman of the jury, Robert F. Ludlum of Oyster Bay, quietly sent a message to Justice Kelby, saying that the Jury was then standing 10 to 2 in favour of acquittal and that there did not seem to be any hope of an agreement.

Five Ballots Taken.

Five ballots in all were taken. Immediately after the verdict, Attorney Graham, for the defence, with District Attorney Smith, sought Justice Kelby. Attorney Graham asked that Mrs. Carman be admitted to bail and Mr. Smith said he had no objection. Mr. Graham said that if necessary he was prepared to offer bail in the sum of $50,000. Justice Kelly fixed to-morrow morning at his chambers in Brooklyn, as the time and place for the formal application for bail.

Whether Mrs. Carman will be tried again, Mr. Smith refuses to state.

William D. Bailey, husband of the murdered woman, who had remained outside of the jury room all night, today at his home in Hempsted said:

"Of course we wanted a conviction, but we are satisfied with the disagreement. I will not urge a second trial."

They Are Satisfied.

Mrs. Jennie Duryea, mother of Mrs. Bailey, said: "We will be satisfied with the disagreement. I realize that the only proof the district attorney had was the testimony of Celia Coleman, and while I believe she told the truth at the trial, it was but natural that a girl who had been treated kindly by her mistress would at first try to shield her. Mrs. Carman is a refined and cultured woman, and I had no doubt that this had an effect on the jury. Throughout the trial they had little Elizabeth Carman in the court room and always referred to Mrs. Carman as the mother of the little child. Why didn't they say something about my daughter's two motherless children?"

None of the jurors believed the testimony of Frank Farrell, the tramp," said Foreman Ludlum, "but Eaton and Hovey insisted that Celia Coleman told the truth. We would argue with them on the point, but they always found some reason for her evidence, in spite of the discrepancies in it."

Rabbi Met Death Holding Crucifix

LONDON, Oct. 25. — News has reached the Jewish world of the manner in which the Chief Rabbi of Lyons was killed on the battlefield. He was in the midst of the fighting, attending Jewish soldiers, when called to the side of a dying trooper, who was a Roman Catholic.

The poor fellow begged the rabbi, whom he probably imagined was a priest, to hold before his eyes the symbol of his faith and give him his blessing.

It was while holding a crucifix before the soldier and whispering him words of comfort that the rabbi fell the victim of a shot from the enemy.

Second Crop Of Field Peas

Mr. A. St. A. Smith, of Keene, showed the Examiner, on Saturday, some specimens of a second crop of field peas in blossom, rather an unique sight, on Oct. 24th. They were from the farm of Mr. Alex. Knox, in Otonabee.

SEVEREST FIGHTING OF WAR

Black Watch and Royal Irish in Thickest of Fighting—Casualties Have Been Heavy—Belgians' Good Work.

ALLIES WELL CARED FOR

PARIS, Oct. 25.—The hardest engagement since the commencement of the war is now on from the coast down to Arras. The principal scene of conflict is around La Bassee, virtually dominating Lille, where the German troops threw themselves in masses against the allies. For the most part British troops are engaged here.

Both sides have suffered terribly. The Black Watch and Royal Irish Regiments have been in the thickest of the fighting, and the British casualty list is very great, although much smaller than that of the Germans, who encountered them in solid formation.

There has not been a minute's respite in the conflict since Friday morning except during the darkest hours of the night, but even then the artillery of both armies kept up a continuous duel.

The Germans appeared at this point to have an inexhaustible supply of men, whom they did not spart. Everywhere where one man fell two seemed to appear to fill the gap. The allies, however, have at their disposal fresh troops, and succeeded in repulsing the Germans whenever they pushed a formidable attack home.

Allied Troops Well Cared For.

All the transport arrangements of the allied troops are working splendidly and the men at the front are kept well fed and supplied with ammunition. The ambulance services are admirable; the wounded are not left long on the field, but are transported to nearby hospitals.

The Government authorities have been making special efforts to attend the wounded; all the railways have joined in the organization and have placed sufficient ambulance cars at the disposal of the authorities to carry 70,000 men, while many can be transported by the river canal barges, which are fitted with beds and supplied with surgeons and nurses.

The battle right along the Belgian frontier is of the most violent character, and, according to latest advices brought in by officers from the front, the allies are holding their own well and the general position is considered satisfactory. Near the coast the valley of the Yser has been inundated by the allies in order to offset the offensive of the Germans, who are not able to advance through the boggy land, which at one time formed an arm of the sea.

1,700 Germans Killed.

The Belgians, in their encounter with the Germans, have thrust the invaders back, and at the conclusion of this fighting 1,700 German dead were found on the field.

On the Argonne and the Vosges the fighting has resulted to the advantage of the French, who are constantly advancing. A company of 75 Parisian reservists in the advanced trenches were subjected to a bayonet charge from two battalions of German infantry. After emptying their magazines several times the Parisians retired to another trench, where a French battalion was lying in reserve. The whole battalion delivered a counter-charge, but the Germans were in overwhelming numbers.

Thirty Parisian reservists became detached and hid in rifle pits until the Germans passed them. They then charged the German rear in the darkness, shouting loudly. The Germans believing that French reinforcements had arrived, and 53 officers and men surrendered, all that were left of the two battalions.

Limit Is Ten

Through an error in a small note regarding the partridge season in the Examiner a few evenings ago it was stated that the partridge limit was one bird a day. After the "1" there should have been a cypher to make the number "ten". The season is from Oct. 15th to Nov. 15, both days inclusive.

Half Right Wing Not Yet In Action

Joffre Is a Sparer of Men and Has Not Needed Them—No Discouragement Anywhere.

GERMANS REINFORCE

PARIS, Oct. 25.—The success of the allies in repulsing the furious attacks of the Germans, as indicated in Saturday's official statement, was the basis of encouragement to the French and English when the battle of the north was resumed to-day.

The Germans, in a mighty effort to gain a victory, continue rushing up all the reinforcements that can be spared.

Many of the German soldiers at Dixmunde have come from Berlin within the last few days. Arriving at the scene of battle they have been sent at once into the trenches, which were waist high with water. The Belgians, under cover of a fog, approached the trenches, and at the point of the bayonet made prisoners of a large number of the invaders. At the same time the contest was resumed at numerous other points, but the result was different and the casualty lists were large.

No Discouragement Anywhere.

The fact that the allies have advanced appreciably east of Nieuport, as officially announced, has helped to reassure them, since in this vicinity the British naval guns hardly could continue to exercise an influence in gaining ground. The slight retrogression at other points, which was counterbalanced by progress somewhere else, was considered as inevitable in a great conflict of this kind, and apparently it did not cause the slightest discouragement.

The strategic consequences of this battle of the north, it is felt in some quarters, will be greater to the Germans than to the allies. If it should be necessary for the latter to withdraw it would be upon the normal lines of the allies without risk, it is declared, and the bending of the left wing would not compromise the situation in general. The French also are confident as to the line at other points.

Half of Troops Not Fighting.

Fifty per cent. of the troops on the right wing have not had their baptism of fire, according to word received here. Gen. Joffre, commander-in-chief of the French forces, is said to be a sparer of men, by necessity, perhaps, but especially on account of humanity. His calmness on the field of battle is said to be extraordinary. He is precise in his orders, and has absolute knowledge of the ground and of his men.

The question of the return of the government to Paris from Bordeaux, in view of the necessity of voting emergency bills and credits, is being discussed. The suggestion is made that after the deputies have finished sitting here they should go back to Bordeaux.

"DARKNESS AND DAWN"

By Gen. Allen England

A murmur, doubtful, wondering, obscure, spread through the people. By the greenish flare-light Stern could see looks of wonder and dismay. Some frowned, others stared at him or at the smith, and many muttered.

"What's the devil and all I have broken now?" wondered Allan. "Plague take these barbarous customs! Jove, they're worse than the taboos of the old Maoris, in the ancient days! What's up?"

He had not long to wonder, for of a sudden H'vemba wheeled on him, pointed him out with vibrant hands, and in a voice of terrible anger, cried:

"The law, the law of old! No man shall be chief who does not take a wife from out our people! None who weds one of the Lanskaarn, the island folk, or the yellow-haired one of the Lanskaarn, the island folk, or the yellow-haired Skeri, beyond the Vortex, none such shall ever rule us. Yet this man, this stranger who speaks such great things very hard to be believed, scorns our custom. No woman from among us he has taken, but instead, that vuedma of his own kind! What? Will ye—"

He spoke no further, for Allan was upon him with one leap. At sound of the word, the most injurious in their tongue, the fires of Hell burst loose in Stern.

Reckoning no consequences, staying for no parley or diplomacy, he sprang; and as he sprang, he struck.

The blow went home on the smith's jaw with a smash like a pile-driver. H'vemba reeling, swung at him — no skill, no science, just a wild, barbaric, sledge-hammer sweep.

It would have killed had it landed, but Allan was not there. In point of tactics, the twentieth century met the tenth.

And as the smith whirled to recover, a terrible left-hander met him just below the short ribs.

With a grunt the man doubled, sprawled, and fell. By some strange atavism, which he never afterward could understand, Allan counted, in the Folks' tongue: "Hathi, ko, zem, baku—" and so on up to "Iomau" —ten.

Still the smith did not rise, but only lay and groaned and sought to catch the breath that would not come.

"I have won!" cried Allan in a loud voice. "Here, you people, take this green, this child away! And let there be no further idle talk of a dead law—for surely, in your custom, a law dies when its champion is beaten! Come, quick, away with him!"

Two stout men came forward, bowed to Allan with hands clasped upon their breasts, in signal of fresh allegiance, and without ceremony took the insensible smith, neck-and-heels, and lugged him off as though he had only been a net heavily laden with fish.

The crowd opened in awed silence to let them pass. By the glare Allan noticed that the man's jaw hung oddly awry, even as the obeah's had hung, in Madison Forest.

"Jove, what a wallop that must have been!" thought he, now perceiving, for the first time that his knuckles were cut and bleeding. "Old Monahan himself taught me that in the Harvard gym. a thousand odd years ago—and it still works. One question settled, mighty quick; and H'emba won't have much to say for a few weeks at least. Not till his jawbone knits again anyhow!"

Upon his arm he bolt a hand. Turning, he saw Vreenya, the aged counsellor.

"Surely, O master, he shall not live, now you have conquered him? The boiling pit awaits you. It is our custom—if you will!"

Allan only shook his head.

"All customs change, these times," he answered. "I am your law! This man's life is needed, for he has good skill with metals. He shall live, but never shall he speak before the Folk again. I have said it!"

To the waiting throng he turned again.

"Ye have witnessed!" he cried, in a loud voice. "Now, have fear of me, your master! Once in the Battle of Walls ye beheld death raining from my fire-bow. Once ye watched me vanquish your ruler, even the great Kamrou himself, and fling him far into the pit that boils. And now, for the third time, ye have seen. Remember well!"

A stir ran through the multitude. He felt its potent meaning, and he understood.

"I am the law!" he flung at them once more. "Declare it, all! Repeat!"

The thousand-throated chorus: "Thou art the law!" boomed upward through the fog, rolled mightily against the towering cliff, and echoed thunder-like across the hot, black sea.

"It is well!" he cried. "One more sleep, and then—then I choose from among ye two for the journey, two of your boldest and best. And that shall be the first journey of many, up to the better places that await ye, far beyond the pit!"

Straining his eyes in the night, pierced only by the electric beam that ran and quavered ripadly over the broken forest-tops far below, Allan peered down and far ahead. The fire, the signal-fire he had told Beatrice to build upon the ledge—would he never sight it?

Eagerly he scanned the dark horizon only just visible in the starshine. Warmly the rushing night wind fanned his cheek; the roar of the motor and propellers, pulsating mightily, made music to his ears. For it sang! "Home again! Beatrice, and love once more!"

Many long hours had passed since, his fuel-tanks replenished from the apparatus for distilling the crude naphtha, which he had installed during his first stay in the Abyss, he had risen a second time into that heavy, humid, purple-vaporued air.

With him he now bore Bremilu, the strong, and Zangamon, most expert of all the fishermen. Slung in the baggage-craft aft lay a large seine, certain supplies of fish, weed, and eggs, and—from time to time noisily squawking—some half-dozen of the strange sea-birds in a metal basket.

The pioneers had insisted on taking these impedimenta with them, to bridge the gap of changed conditions, a precaution Stern had recognized as eminently sensible.

"Gad!" thought he, as the Pauillac swept its long, flat-arc'd trajectory through the night, "under any circumstances this must be a terrific wrench for them. Talk about nerve! If they haven't got it, who has? This trip of these subterranean barbarians, thus flung suddenly into mid-air, out into a world of which they know absolutely nothing, must be exactly what a journey to Mars would mean to me. More, far more, to their simple minds. I wonder myself at their courage in taking such a tremendous step."

And in his heart a new and keener admiration for the basic stamina of the Merucaans took root.

"They'll do!" he murmured, as he scanned his lighted chart once more, and cast up reckonings from the dials of his delicately adjusted instruments.

Half an hour more of rapid flight and he deemed New Hope River could not now be far.

"No use to try and hear it, though, with this racket of the propellers in my ears," thought he. "The searchlight might possibly pick up a gleam of water, if we fly over it. But even that's a small index to go by. The signal-fire must be my only guide—and where is it now, that fire?"

A vague uneasiness began to oppress him. The fire, he reckoned, should have shown ere now in the far distance. Without it, how find his way? And what of Beatrice?

His uneasy reflections were suddenly interrupted by a word from Zangamon, at his right.

"O Kromno, master, see?"

"What is it now?"

"A fire, very distant, master!"

"Where?" queried Stern eagerly, his heart leaping with joy. "I see no fire. Your eyes, used to the dark places and the fogs, now far surpass mine, even as mine will yours when the time of light shall come. Where is the fire, Zangamon?"

The fisher pointed, a dim huge figure in the star-lit gloom.

"There, master. On thy left hand, thus."

Stern shifted his course to southwest by west, and for some minutes held it true, so that the needle hardly trembled on the compass dial.

Then all at once he, too, saw the welcome signal, a tiniest pinprick of light far on the edge of the world, no different from the sixth-magnitude stars that hung just above it on the horizon, save for its redness.

A gush of gratitude and love welled in the fountains of his heart.

"Home!" he whispered. "Home—for where you are, that's home to me! Oh, Beatrice, I'm coming — coming home to you!"

Slowly at first, then with greater and ever greater swiftness, the signal start crept nearer; and now even the flames were visible; and now behind them he caught dim sight of the rock-wall.

On and on, a very vulture of the upper air, planed the Pauillac. Stern shouted with all his strength. The girl might possibly hear him and might come out of her cave. She might even signal—and the nearness of her presence mounted upon him like a heady wine.

He swung the searchlight on the canyon swallowed by the dense forest, he flung his light once more ahead. With it he felt out the rocky barrens for a landing-place.

Not more than twenty minutes later, followed by Bremilu and Zangamon, Stern was making way through the thick-laced wood and jungle.

Awed, terrified by their first sight of trees and by the upper world which to them was naught but marvel and danger, the two Merucaans followed close behind their guide. Even so would you or I cling to the Martian who should land us on that ruddy planet and pilot us through some huge, inchoate, and grotesque growth of things to us perfectly unimaginable.

"Oh, master, we shall see the patriarch soon?" asked Bremilu, in a strange voice—a voice to him astonishingly loud, in the clear air of night upon the surface of the world. "Soon shall we speak with him and —"

"Hark!" What's that?" interrupted Stern, pausing, the while he gripped his pistol tighter.

From afar, though in which direction he could not say, a vague, dull roar made itself heard through the forest.

Sonorous, vibrant, menacing, it echoed and died; and then again, as once before, Stern heard that strange hollow booming, as of some mighty drum struck by a muffled fist.

A cry? Was that a cry, so distant and so faint? Beast-cry, or call of night-bird, shrill and far?

Stern shuddered, and with redoubled haste once more pushed through the vague path he and Beatrice had made fro mthe barrens to Settlement Cliffs.

Presently, followed by the two colonists who dared not let him for a moment out of their sight, he reached the brow of the canyon. His hand flash-lamp showed [illegible] rough path to the terrace.

With fast-beating heart he ran down it, unmindful of the unprotected edge or the sheer drop to the rocks of New Hope River, far below.

Bremilu and Zangamon, seeing perfectly in the gloom, hurried close behind, with words of awe, wonder, and admiration in their own tongue.

"Beta! Oh, Beatrice! Home again!" Stern shouted triumphantly. "Where are you, Beta? Come! I'm home again!"

Quickly he scrambled along the broken terrace, stumbling in his haste over loose rocks and debris. Now he had reached the turn. The fire was in sight.

"Beta!" again he hailed. "O-he! Beatrice!"

Still no answer, nor any sign from her. As he came to the fire he noted, despite his strong emotions, that it had for the most part burned down to glowing embers.

Only one or two resinous knots still flamed. It could not have been replenished for some time, perhaps two hours or more.

Again, his quick eye caught the fact that cinders, ashes, and half-burned sticks lay scattered about in strange disorder.

"Why, Beatrice never makes a fire like that!" the thought pierced through his mind.

And—though as yet on no very definite grounds—a quick prescience of catastrophe battered at his heart.

"What's this?"

Something lying on the rock-ledge, near the fire, caught his eye. He snatched it up.

"What—what can this mean!"

The colonists stood, frightened and confused, peering at him in the dark. His face, in the ruddy fire-glok, as he studied the thing he now held in his hand, must have been very terrible.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GREY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural colour dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and abundant. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old recipe which can be depended upon to restore natural colour and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two it becomes beautifully dark, glossy and abundant.

WHY GOD IS ANGRY WITH THE WORLD

Exposition of Justice of the Day of Vengeance.

"THE CONTROVERSY OF ZION"

Explains How Jehovah Balances the Books—Wrong Thoughts of God's Wrath — Preparations For the New Dispensation of World-Wide Blessings to Both the Church and the World — Terrible Frettings Now of False Doctrines Taught For Centuries.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its insertion.]

Oct., 25. — A splendid congregation listened spellbound to Pastor Russell as his address inquired into the reason why in God's providence the world is being ushered into "a Time of Trouble, such as was not since there was a nation." What special sign call upon Justice for extraordinary penalty? The Pastor's text was, "And the nations were angry, and Thy wrath is come."—Revelation 11:18.

After some introductory comments upon his text, the speaker read a number of corroborative Scriptures—Isaiah 24:1-6; Jeremiah 25:15, 16, 27-38; Isaiah 66:15, 16; Luke 21:34, 36; Revelation 6:9-11; 2 Thessalonians 1:3-10. Commenting on these Scriptures, the Pastor claimed that their united testimony referred to the present, mistranslated the end of the world; properly interpreted, the end of this Age, lapping upon and inaugurating the New Age—"the world to come."

The Pastor declared that the whole world are Gentiles, according to the Scriptural presentation, except the true followers of Christ and the loyal-hearted Jews, who are still God's people under their Law Covenant. In classing the great mass of Jews and of professed Christians as part of the world the Pastor meant no unkindness; but declared that to understand God's dealing in the present time, nominal Christians, or mere professors, must not be confounded with the "little flock" who have responded to the Gospel Call, "Gather My saints together unto Me saith the Lord; those who have made a Covenant with Me by sacrifice"—self-sacrifice. (Psalm 50:5; Romans 12:1.) If we shall recognize these saintly Christians of every nation and denomination as being the one true Church, "whose names are written in Heaven," and if we shall recognize all others as Gentiles, we shall be getting the eyes of our understanding into true alignment with the mind of God as expressed in the Bible.

Thus seen, God is not merely calling nations to war, to battle, as nations; but in a more particular sense the call is to this Gentile class irrespective of national boundaries. And it is worthy of note that throughout the Scriptures the great masses of India, China, etc., are comparatively ignored. Because they have not come into particular contact with God's Messages they are not so particularly included in the judgments, chastisements, troubles, foretold to be coming upon the earth at the close of this Age. In other words, unintentional ignorance of God is not a crime to be punished, but a defect to be corrected in due time by the blessings of Messiah's Kingdom.

When thinking of the wrath of God coming upon the world, we are not to think of the Almighty as having exercised great patience for centuries and finally losing His temper and wreaking vengeance upon His creatures. Such a thought might be gathered from some of the expressions of the Scriptures, because of adaptation of language to human comprehension, and more or less loss of the true sentiment in translating and through the mental gloss of the translators.

In any event let us remember that this wrath of God and the judgments coming upon the world are wholly different from the legends—namely, eternal torture at the hands of demons, taught us by our creeds. Instinctively, a part of the dread we have of death in every form—by war, famine and sickness—is the fear of that eternal torture nightmare thrust upon us from childhood, inculcated by all the creeds of Christendom, but without Bible foundation when the latter is properly translated and rightly understood.

Furthermore, we should remember that while God has foretold the troubles of the Day of Wrath for centuries and indicates that He will have to do with their precipitation upon the world, nevertheless elsewhere He also shows us that these troubles really come from ourselves, that they are the outgrowth of human wrongdoing, and that these dire penalties of sin would have wrecked our social and religious fabric long, long ago, had not Divine Providence forfended us—holding back the storm of human passion and avarice, and permitting it to come only "in the end" of the Age, at the time when Divine Providence has Messiah's Kingdom in full readiness to take control. Just so soon as the storm of human passion shall have taught humanity its needed lesson and shall have liquidated the long standing accounts, Messiah's Kingdom, with a clean slate, will be inaugurated.

In Jesus and in His saintly followers throughout this Gospel Age, the world has had God's Cause, the Cause of Righteousness and truth, more or less clearly manifested. Every persecution against these members of the Body of Christ is a crime against God and against righteousness. Of such sufferings the Apostle says, "If any suffer as a Christian, let him glorify God on this behalf; for the spirit of glory and of God resteth on such."

As a blessing rested upon all the Lord's faithful people who have suffered unjustly, so correspondingly a Divine curse, or penalty, has rested upon all persecutors of these, their responsibility being gauged by the degree of their knowledge, and their punishment proportionate. On the books of Justice, however, God represents that the lives of all His faithful ones cry out for vengeance; and that while mercy comes to all mankind through the sacrificial death of the Saviour, this does not alter the fact that Justice calls for punishments for crimes more or less wilful and therefore not included in the Saviour's atonement.

Thus it was in the end of the Jewish Age, which may serve us as a pattern, or Illustration of the ending of this Age. St. Paul, writing of that time, says, "Wrath is come upon this people to the uttermost, that all things written in the Law and the Prophets concerning them should be fulfilled." Notice, however, the vast difference between these Bible judgments and the eternal torment judgments falsely declared by every one of our creeds, which indirectly tell us that every Jew at death goes to eternal torment because he is not a Christian.

But the Scriptures declare that the punishments upon the Jews which culminated in the destruction of Jerusalem in A. D. 70 were, some of them, for sins committed long before. Notice Jesus' words, "The blood of all the Prophets, which was shed from the foundation of the world, shall be required of this generation; from the blood of Abel unto the blood of Zacharias, who perished between the Altar and the Temple."—Luke 11:50, 51.

Wherein was the justice in exacting all that of the people living in the close of that Age? We reply that those people had far more responsibility than all who preceded them. They had a great Light amongst them, shining from Jesus and the early saints. In their treatment of these lightbearers, crucifying them and variously injuring them, upon that last generation of the Jewish Age, "wrath came to the uttermost."

The Bible intimates that similar segregations of punishment are to be expected in the end of this Gospel Age. The great Time of Trouble, or Day of Wrath, is the "recompense of the controversy of Zion"—the saints, the true Church. For eighteen hundred years Man Jesus prophetically declared that the Kingdom class would suffer violence; and the violent have usurped the place of the true by-faces.

All the while, the violent have outwardly been posing as the True Church of Christ, while the saints of God in every epoch and in every century have suffered—"as deceivers and yet true; as poor, yet making many rich; as having nothing, yet possessing all things." (2 Corinthians 6:3-10.) "Heirs of God and joint-heirs with Christ" (Romans 8:17), they have been counted "the filth and offscouring of the earth," "of whom the world was not worthy."

But the sin of their persecutors must be liquidated, even though the persecutors themselves will all eventually be forgiven. From this viewpoint, the "Time of Trouble such as was not since there was a nation," and which is now beginning gradually to be consummated, will be the squaring of God's accounts with the world, preparatory to handing the Kingdom over to Messiah for the blessing of all.

An illustrative of this principle, note the lesson of Revelation 6:9-11: The cry is, "How long, O Lord, holy and true, dost Thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth?" The message for all these martyrs of Jesus was, Wait a little season, the vengeance will come, but not until all of this class shall have experienced their share of "the sufferings of Christ."

To these martyrs the suffering brought nobleness of character, faith, "of Faith," Divine approval and an increased glory on the spirit plane as members of the Bride of Christ—the blessings to be given to them in the First Resurrection—the chief Resurrection, referred to by our Lord in Revelation 20:6. Then will be accomplished the binding of Satan; and then Messiah's Kingdom, with all its blessed and uplifting influences, will bless the whole world with the long-promised "Restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all the holy Prophets since the world began."—Acts 3:19-23.

We do not say that the persecutions of the last members of the Body of Christ will be by literally cutting their tongues out, by literally burning them at the stake, by literally crucifying them or beheading them, as was done with some of the other members of the Body in the past. In our day there is a more refined process often used. Some are gibbeted by the pulpit, some are "roasted" in the public press, some have their tongues cut out in the sense that their words are misrepresented, and that they are denied a hearing. And yet there are things in the Scriptures which seem to imply that there may be a literal mutilation and destruction of God's faithful people in the end of this Age, as well as a figurative one. But the Lord's grace will be sufficient for them; and the more they shall suffer for His sake, for the Truth's sake, the greater will be their glory and station in the Kingdom.

What shall be punished for these crimes against the Saints of God? We answer, Babylon; and Babylon signifies what is to-day known as "the Christian world"—a very anomalous term; for the world has no identification with Christianity nor Christianity with the world. The so-called "Christendom" of our day corresponds exactly to the Jewry of Jesus' day. Then Scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites, were banded together with the Sadducees and the Herodians, the worldly and infidel politicians. Their object was one, namely, the perpetuation of their own institution, regardless of God's arrangement. So here, the civilized world, misnaming itself "Christ's Kingdom," is intent upon the preservation of the great Babylon which it has constructed, and willing to do anything to avoid its foretold destruction.

Taking into account the persecutions endured by God's saints throughout this Gospel Age, there must be a heavy account on the book of Justice to be settled. Saintly Catholics, saintly Presbyterians, saintly Baptists, saintly Methodists, saintly people in and out of all denominations have suffered; and Jesus' words still stand true—namely, that whosoever would give to the least of His followers even a cup of cold water would not fail of reward, and that injury to even the least of these would be punished.

Are we asked what are the special sins of our day? We reply that here, as in Jesus' day, hypocrisy is the greatest of all sins. There were thefts, murders, adulteries, and injustices of various kinds in Jesus' day; yet while denouncing all these in spirit, He practically ignored them all in His denunciations of the hypocrisy of the religious rulers of His time. We believe that His judgment of so-called "Christendom" to-day is the same.

There was a time when the world generally thought that the kings of earth were ruling as part of Christ's Kingdom. There was a time when men really believed that their everlasting destiny was in the hands of the clergy, Protestant and Catholic, and that unless they had the good offices of these in baptism, marriage, funerals, etc., they would be eternally tormented; but that day has passed—a more enlightened day has come.

Our Bible is better understood; the clergy are no longer deceived. They know that the word Sheol of the Old Testament and the word Hades of the New Testament represent the state or condition of death, into which the whole world goes—good and bad. They know that these words could not represent torture or fire in any sense of the word. They see God's character more clearly; they perceive that the kingdoms of this world are merely political institutions permitted for a time, waiting for the glorious epoch of Messiah's Kingdom to bring in the New Order of things.

But notwithstanding this knowledge, the Divine character is still blasphemed. The kings of the earth, told during the "dark ages" that they were the sword of the Lord and servants of the Church, have not been undeceived. Hence the Czar of Russia, the Head of the Greek Church, believes he is working out a Divine destiny; the British under King George are equally convinced that they are working out a great destiny as God's Kingdom. The German Kaiser is similarly deceived into thinking that he is the sword of the Almighty, as indicated in his reported proclamation to his army in Poland.

These false doctrines of the "dark ages" are bearing a terrible fruitage in the present war. Similarly the teachings of eternal torment, misrepresenting and blaspheming God's character, are bearing an evil fruitage. Millions of people are being turned away from faith in a God of Love and from faith in the Bible as His Message by the most monstrous blasphemies of the "dark ages." I charge the responsibility of all this against the sects and creeds of Christendom.

A great fraud, a great hypocrisy, you say? I answer, Yes; the most astounding the world has ever known. Two hundred thousand professed ministers of God and Christ are standing before the world to-day telling the legends of the Dark Ages and seeking to hinder the people from coming to a knowledge of the Truth, meanwhile receiving the people's money and reverence. Does not such hypocrisy, such blasphemy against God, such deception of the people, such keeping of them in darkness, deserve a great punishment?

What shall we do, do you ask? I answer: Be honest! Be true! Come out of Babylon. Stand free from all such slandering of the Almighty God and His gracious provisions. Stand for the Bible, the Truth, the God of Love and Wisdom, Justice and Power. "Come out from among them, and be ye separate, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you."

METHODISTS PROTEST.

They Object to Gen. Alderson's Authorization of a "Wet" Canteen.

MEDICINE HAT, Oct. 24. — The Methodist Church, through Rev. Dr. S. D. Chown, has sent to Sir Robert Borden a strong protest against the order of Gen. Alderson, authorizing a "wet" canteen for the Canadian troops.

In the message of protest sent from here yesterday Dr. Chown reminds the Prime Minister that Russia has forbidden vodka and France abstains for the army, and in asking Premier Borden to make an emphatic protest to the Home Government that the order be withdrawn, he questions the moral right of Gen. Alderson to authorise a canteen in the face of the practice of the Militia Department of Canada and contrary to Canadian public opinion, and the tacit understanding with Canadian motherhood.

"CROWN PRINCE'S FUNERAL."

Words Occur In Letter Found on a Captured German General.

PARIS, Oct. 24.—(Via London.)—Two aeroplanes were seen above Compigne yesterday, and when they were discovered to be Germans, French airmen immediately left to meet the Taubes. The invaders fled in the direction of Marseilles.

The German general, Von Freise, has been captured by the Turcos and taken prisoner to Fort St. Nicholas. A letter found in his possession, written by a woman in Berlin, says that everything is quiet in that city, except on the day of the "crown prince's funeral, when all turned out to see it."

HOSPITALS SHELLED.

German Artillery Spared Nothing In Bombardment of Arras.

PARIS, Oct. 24. — The Germans on Wednesday again bombarded Arras and finished their work of destruction. The town hall and the town itself suffered frightfully from the heavy gun fire. None of the hospitals was spared and priests and nurses were among those killed. The cemetery was continuously shelled to prevent the burial of bodies, which will now have to be burned.

The Academie des Belles Lettres, at the end of a long secret session, passed strong resolutions condemning German atrocities and German "intellectuals."

French People In Need.

PARIS, Oct. 24. — The greatest problem for France this winter probably will be to take care of the people at home.

The army will have the first call on the national resources. The thirty-seven million people at home must get on as best they can. A wonderful spirit of gentleness and kindness is moving the French people to create a community of interest in everything they have, in which every person shall share. All private interests have shriveled up. Nevertheless contributions from the outside world are sorely needed.

Canada's Food Goes To Belgians.

LONDON, Oct. 24.—The Standard states that 250,000 bags of flour and 4,000,000 pounds of cheese, a war gift to the Mother Country from Canada, has been lying on the London docks for the past two months because of the difficulty in discovering who is responsible for its handling. It has now been ascertained that the Local Government Board is responsible and its members are busy considering what is to be done with the food. It is possible that some of it will be given to the hungry Belgians in London.

Gold Brocades, Spangles and Fur in Winter Evening Wraps

NOW that the Paris importations, after many vicissitudes, have arrived safely in America one can look over the lot and decide which of the new styles will be the most becoming. Though it is my pleasant duty to tell you the ultra-fashionable, the fashionable and the popular fashion lines—and it is always interesting to know fashion's latest tendency—do not be misled and think you must only choose the last new thing. Choose that which is the most becoming to your figure.

Beyond a doubt the ultra and most advanced fashion lines are found in the newest imported coats of the tailored suits. There you find the short coat that was anticipated early in the season as a menace to the long circular redingote. The short coats have raised round waist line seams, and to these are attached very flaring peplums that are seldom longer than thirty-two inches. The odd part of these coats is that they appear to fit down to the waist line, except that they are a size too large for the figure. It is probably the first intimation of the fitted short coat of another season.

The redingote coat, long and very full and circular in the skirt, is generally attached to the upper part of the coat by a hip line seam. The longer this coat is the more distinguished its air, and the more it flares the more ultra-fashionable it becomes. Fur collar, cuffs and an edging on the hem seem to be necessary to its style, and long sleeves added by inset or raglan sleeves. Many of these coats have high round necks.

As for skirts in the fashionable and ultra-fashionable models they are frankly bell shapes, approaching in appearance, by their shortness, the amusing short skirts worn in the thirties. Indeed, in one imported model, a hoop skirt, made of featherbone and tape, is hidden between the outside and inside skirts.

Featherbone is also hidden in the hems to get this bell shaped contour. This full skirt is simply the outcome of the long tunic, that, dropping little by little in past seasons, has now become the skirt, regulating the drop skirt to a lining. In some models this drop skirt shows when the tunics open in front or fly back as the wearer walks.

The ultra note in a corsage is that it shall be high necked, but this may not become fashionable for a while, as we are too comfortable with our necks free. It is only the long necked woman who has felt and sometimes looked like a giraffe with the low cut dresses who will [illegible] this change to neat lines.

While the average low corsage remains unopposed, it is now built over a skeleton lining, which, however, does not include sleeves. The corsage itself, of lace or chiffon, does, and the slight fullness is gathered in with a bracelet band cuff, wide or narrow, leaving a bit of a filmy ruffle to fall over the hand.

The dress corsages resemble the elaborate afternoon separate corsages in form, and skirts are like those of the tailored suits, bell shaped. They are adorned with deep flouncings of lace or overlapping tupics placed over an accordion pleated drop skirt. A new note in corsages is struck by certain models that have a polonaise effect with strictly fitted tendencies. This does not mean necessarily that these new overdresses that open in the front are plain.

White gentle curbes are held to give the long waisted look to the figure. They are wound about the figure so that any defect in the wearer's proportions is concealed. Short waisted persons are made to look long waisted and the long waisted woman, after donning such a dress, finds she is suddenly better shaped.

Evening dresses and wraps include spangles and metal laces and tissues. Evening dresses of satin are fairly covered with lace flouncings, not merely white, black or cream lace, but laces of gold and silver, of both bright and dull lustre. Evening gowns still stay sleeveless, but the newest thing is a tendency to veil their bodices, which often have fitted lines, with lace or tulle berthas or pelerines. Flowers still have their place on evening gowns, placed in new ways and new places.

Evening wraps, glinting with brocades or with iridescent coats of mail, are more capelike than coat shaped. This is probably because of the distended skirts underneath, for even the long evening coats have a full circular ruffle attached to a long or short waisted upper part. Fur and lace add to their elegance, laces such as are used on the afternoon dresses and the furs in vogue, monkey, kolinsky, ermine, blue fox, &c.

Various weaves of velvet are used for tailored suits and dresses, satin and taffeta for afternoon frocks, and serge and satin for morning one piece dresses. The widest tunics measure about five yards about their lower edge, the narrowest about two and a half or three.

Feathers are the new note in millinery. They are mostly colored and the newest are multicolored. While the long and short tips are used, novelty combinations and shapes are considered very smart.

There are velvet hats of dark colors to match the suits and dresses—crow blue, Russian green, magenta and dark wine, tete de negre, brown and dark taupe, and, of course, black. Some of the afternoon and evening hats are of the metal laces with a dull finish.

The shapes are either very large or very small. In both the crowns are small to harmonize with the new hair dressing, which is flat at the sides and back and built up on top.

The small barrel muff has returned in furs, being seen in the new three piece sets—hat, tippet and muff. These come in seal and monkey. They are adorned with metal flowers in dull finish and with swathing bands of ribbon and loops.

Lacings, instead of buttons, is the new note in afternoon boots and shoes. In corsets there is more shaping toward a waist line, though this is done as yet in a most conservative manner.

"GOOD MANNERS ARE MADE UP OF PETTY SACRIFICES," SAYS EMERSON

MIRANDA was drawing on her evening gloves as I entered the room.

"Miranda," I said, "are you sure those gloves are the newest dance shade?"

"Newest dance shade?" queried Miranda, with an amused glance at me. "They are the correct shade for evening, if that's what you mean. You remind me of Mrs. Dink. She is forever seeking 'tango tints.' The other day, however, she met her Waterloo. She went to the silk counter at Blank's for taffeta. 'Have you any tango shade?' she asked. 'Madame,' said the clerk, 'I live in New York, and I speak all kinds of slang, but I've no idea what kind of a shade that may be.'"

"I laughed, and surveyed Miranda's perfection of costume with renewed interest.

"Never try to be extremely stylish," pursued Miranda, "or you will end by being eccentric. Things that are in best vogue are not always those boldly so labelled. The eccentric woman sets the styles, the well dressed woman adapts them to her individuality."

"Dress and dancing," said I, "rest alike on instinct."

"So do all things feminine," Miranda said, "but one may increase an instinct by training, and in dancing this is a vital item."

"You mean," I hazarded, "that self-consciousness is synonymous with awkwardness?"

"Certainly I do," replied Miranda. "Selfishness of any kind is fatal to social success. It was Emerson that remarked, 'Good manners are made up of petty sacrifices.'"

"The new dances," I observed, my mind somewhat on bad manners, "are either ridiculous or sublime."

"Which exactly proves my point," said Miranda, "namely, that the beauty of the dance rests with the dancer. Take, for instance, the Maxixe"——

"The what?" I questioned. "How do you pronounce it?"

"You may choose," said Miranda, "any way of three or four. As far as I go I prefer a plain American pronunciation. It seems less of an attempt, less of an affectation. But whatever pronunciation you choose, stick to it, don't flounder nor look embarrassed. That is so uncultured."

"Yes," I murmured, "like stepping in a dance when you make a mistake."

"That," agreed Miranda, "but calls attention to the error. Did you ever notice," she said suddenly, "how often people get in their own way."

"I certainly have," I replied, "and I've also noticed that people who pick up a dance too quickly are usually very slovenly in its execution. Six times out of seven the person that acquires slowly does best."

"Well," said Miranda, adjusting the ribbon that held her slipper in place, "I wish people would learn that when they dance on their head it is wholly unnecessary to take a piece out of the floor. Also that the toe need not be pointed straight up like a flagpole. A little tilt to the foot is much more perfect as a line of loveliness."

"Why not try steps before a mirror?" I suggested.

"A very excellent way," said Miranda. "A mirror is a woman's best adviser if she will only face its facts with calm calculation."

"In the new steps it seems to me that the essence of grace is repose," I said.

"In a degree, yes," said Miranda. "One must practise, practise, practise—and pray for grace. So many prance about as if at a cakewalk. In fact, Mrs. Brown told me that her colored maid (brought from the South) had never seen the new dances till the other evening. Finally she went to one of the other maids and excitedly stated, 'I done see dem dancers, now where am de cake?'"

"Speaking of poor dancers," I said, "you know the Dowager Mrs. Smith is taking lessons from Mr. Rector."

"Well," said Miranda, "what about it?"

"Well," I echoed, "the other evening the old lady exclaimed, after she had stumbled through a half hour's gyrations, 'Oh, Mr. Rector, I could dance to heaven!' 'Reverse, please,' said Mr. Rector."

Miranda laughed. "I hope," she said, "some one poured oil on the wound of her vanity. But nowadays when offering first aid to the injured one really cannot tell which is the sufferer."

"Yes," I replied. "Most men have to act as life preservers, at which a woman seizes."

"One thing that makes a woman awkward," said Miranda, "is the wrong kind of dancing frock. Just such little items, as, example, arm room in the blouse—as much as a swimmer needs—adds to her general poise. There are a dozen such points to regard, and, speaking of poise," continued Miranda, "you will never gain it until you stop looking at your partner's feet. It positively is mortifying to see you do it."

"I do try not to," I blushed.

"Why," said Miranda, "you wouldn't watch a man's feet if out walking with him. Take dancing as naturally and observe the amenities of civilization just as you would in daily life."

"Well, when one walks one does not have to do it in time," I protested.

"In time, you mean," said Miranda with annoyance. "Because Tennyson made the mistake of describing 'The dancers dancing in time' is not a reason for you to commit the same atrocity."

"I think you are right," I said, striving to ignore the correction and bring conversation back to a less personal standpoint.

"I believe I will try the method recommended by an eminent teacher, and 'practise walking in time to music.'"

"Whatever you do, keep time," said Miranda. "Know intelligently when to take a slow step and when a quick one."

I made another attempt to drag Miranda's attention to an impersonal viewpoint.

"Don't you think the modern dances very coquettish?" I queried archly.

"Only when well done," said Miranda. "Did you ever see a coquettish elephant?"

"But I'm not an elephant," I pouted.

"Size doesn't make an elephant," answered Miranda; "its heaviness, and slouching that most suggest one to me. Not that you manifest either, but we were speaking generally, I thought."

"If we continue to speak," said I, "we shall not have much evening to dance in."

Just then the butler announced the arrival of the car.

As we descended the stairs Miranda's thought shaped itself around a final warning:

"Remember," she said, "that a celebrated actress decrees rest for youthfulness; hence be sure you know when to stop dancing."

MRS. BROWN'S NEW DINNER GOWN AND THE EFFECT IT HAD UPON HER HUSBAND'S PROSPERITY

By Bessie Carroll.

Characters.

Mrs. Brown.....Any Wife
Mr. Brown, an architect....Any Husband
Mr. Smithson....A Wealthy Architect

ACT I.

Scene:—Sitting room, any apartment.
Time:—After dinner.
Mrs. Brown—Jack.
Brown (without looking up from his paper)—Yes?
Mrs. Brown—The Griscoms are giving a dinner Friday. We're invited.
Brown (without looking up from his paper)—Yes?
Mrs. Brown—The Smithsons will be there.
Brown (putting down his paper)—Smithson, the architect?
Mrs. Brown—Yes.
Brown (picking up the paper)—We must go.
Mrs. Brown (after a silence)—Jack.
Brown—Well?
Mrs. Brown (timidly)—I ought to have a new dinner gown.
Brown—What for?
Mrs. Brown—For the Griscoms' dinner. I haven't had a new gown in a year.
Brown—What is the matter with your pink one?
Mrs. Brown—It's out of mode now. Much too tight. And any way you spilled a glass of wine on the train the last time I wore it.
Brown (grudgingly)—Can't you cut it out?
Mrs. Brown—Of course not. It's right in the middle of the train.
Brown—[illegible] off them.
Mrs. Brown (insulted)—What, the train?
Brown (decidedly)—Yes.
Mrs. Brown—Why I can't do that. Imagine a dinner gown without a train.
Brown (grudgingly)—Well, get a new one then, but don't pay much for it. Remember, I haven't any new contract—now, if Smithson would only give me that contract I could go South on that hunting trip. And it's ten to one I could afford to buy a hunting lodge of my own.

ACT II.

Scene:—Same as Act I.
Time:—Two nights later.
Mrs. Brown (timidly)—Jack.
Brown (yawning)—Yes?
Mrs. Brown—I got my new dress. Would you like to see it?
Brown (without enthusiasm)—Yes, of course.
(Mrs. Brown leaves room and returns with dress.)
Brown (without interest)—Rather pretty. How much?
Mrs. Brown (nervously)—Two hundred and fifty.
Brown (violently)—What?
Mrs. Brown (weakly)—It's imported.
Brown (stormily)—What do you think I am? A millionaire? What do you mean by paying $250 for a dress? How do you think I am going to get ahead in my business? All a wife means is expense! Just blank expense! One bill after another!
(Brown goes out and bangs the door. Mrs. Brown sits down for a good cry.)

ACT III.

Scene:—The Griscoms' drawing room after the dinner.
(Mrs. Brown in distance in new gown.)
Smithson (in earnest conversation with Brown)—Then we'll call the matter settled. I'll send the contract up to you to-morrow to be signed.
Brown—Thanks. I'm sure we can make a success of the work. But—er—by the way, Smithson, how did you happen to decide on me for this?
Smithson—Why, I don't know that there's any reason why I should tell you—but—well, frankly, I knew no man could afford to dress his wife as yours is dressed to-night unless he was making money, and nowadays one can't make money unless one can do the work. Simple reasoning, eh?

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

TOO MUCH DELAY

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

When I was a young detective I was sent from New York after a man who had given the slip to every officer of the law who had been sent to take him. One detective had got him cornered in a house, surrounded the house and went upstairs to nab him. A maid received him and admitted that the man he was looking for was in a back room. The detective went there, and the man jumped down on to the roof of a porch and started to slide down by one of the posts. The watchers collected under the porch to take him when he came down, and while they were doing this the maid walked out the front door. The maid was the man they were after, and the man they took was his wife.

There were other escapes equally ingenious, and I resolved to profit by them. I was told where I would find Ethan Hardwick, which was one of the names he used, and took a train for the place where he was or, at least, was reported to be. It was a three hours' ride. It occurred to me that if I arrested him I would have to bring him back over the same route, and I would have to watch him continually lest he give me the same kind of a slip he had given others.

On arriving in the city where Hardwick had taken up his abode I didn't go at once to his lodging to arrest him; I hired a room opposite and observed him. My object was to learn all about the approaches and exits that he would have to rely on when I should pounce upon him. I also desired to become familiar with his personal appearance so that I would know him under any disguise.

I saw him go into and come out of the house in which he was stifling several times. I had a photograph of him borrowed from the rogues' gallery and by it knew him at once the first time I saw him. In coming and going he made no attempt to appear to be anything else than what he was. He never looked at the house I was in or in any way gave evidence that he suspected an enemy lodged there.

I was puzzled to know how to catch him, for he had chosen a retreat from which there were [illegible] avenues of escape. It was [illegible] of twenty houses; all the same height, and if he could get on the roof of any of them, not counting his own, there were nineteen roof scuttles down any one of which he could pass to freedom. To watch so many outlets would require a considerable force, which I did not have at my command and did not like to hire. I therefore concluded to watch my chance to take him outside of his quarters.

On several occasions I followed him on the street, but just as I was getting ready to run up to him and clap my hand on his shoulder he would suddenly disappear in some alley or basement, where I did not dare follow him lest the only result would be his getting on to the fact that I was after him. So sure was he to thus evade me that it seemed as if he must know who I was and what my errand was, and yet I could not see how he could have found out anything about me.

One day I saw him go out and followed him as usual. He went to the railroad station. To my surprise he went to the ticket office, where I followed him and saw him buy a ticket for New York. I considered myself in luck. All I had to do was to telegraph for a force to be at the station to take him when the train arrived. I bought a ticket for the same place and followed my man on to the train, getting in the same car with him. The telegram I gave to the conductor of the train to send for me.

Hardwick showed no suspicion of me whatever. My eyes were on him every moment from the time he entered the station till he got on to the train, but he never once looked at me. As soon as he took his seat he opened a newspaper and began to read. I would have taken a seat behind him, but he sat in the last seat in the car, and I was obliged to sit in front of him. But till the train moved out I kept him in sight.

There was but one stop for that train, Trenton. I didn't think it necessary to keep turning to watch my man while the train was running at the rate of fifty or sixty miles an hour, and after leaving Trenton, knowing that we would not stop again till we reached Jersey City, I refrained from close observation. As we approached the terminal I looked for my quarry.

He was missing.

I went through the train looking for him, but did not find him. He must have jumped off while the train was moving at least forty miles an hour. If so, I supposed he had been killed. At any rate, I returned without my prisoner, but made a resolution never again to delay an arrest.

Several years later Hardwick was arrested, and while he was being tried I asked him what had become of him on that memorable journey.

"I had seen you before," he replied, "and knew you were after me. But you surprised me by coming on the same train with me from Philadelphia. Not far from Trenton a train moved side by side with our train, and I simply went out on the platform and stepped aboard of the other train. It was a rare chance for me, for I was sure you had wired to have a force at the terminal to take me."

When the Liver Gets Torpid

There is Nothing Like Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to Set it Right.

Mrs. C. L. Cook, 248 Tenth street, Brandon, Man., writes:—"I have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for the last four years for liver trouble, and can say that I have had great satisfaction and help from them. I find that I do not need any doctor if I use them when the liver gets torpid, and believe that they are exactly suited for my case. My husband has used them for kidney trouble with good results, and my daughter in Winnipeg has been helped a great deal by the use of these pills. We say we can't keep house without them, and have cheated the doctors here out of a good many visits. I think Dr. Chase's medicines are just the thing, and have recommended them to many people who have used them with good results."

By keeping the liver active and the bowels regular Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills prevent and cure such disorders as biliousness, constipation, chronic indigestion and headache. One pill a dose, 25c a box, 5 for $1.00; all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

GERMANY MUST PAY AN ENORMOUS PRICE FOR PEACE

(By Herbert Corey.)

LONDON, Oct. 26.—"England will not demand that Germany be dismembered or disarmed when the allies win. Europe's interests will be best served by the retention of Germany as a sound and virile unit in the rank of nations. But she must give up her dream of world empire. She shall no longer be a menace to peace."

This is an absolutely authoritative statement of the attitude the British government will assume in the event of a victory by the allies. It is to be qualified by the following statements:

"There is no thought [illegible] early—of a premature—peace. England will fight on, if she has to fight alone, until peace is made on her terms.

"No member of the government has as yet given serious thought to the formulations of these terms. It will be quite time enough to do so when Germany is defeated.

"Germany's resources are so great that the war office considers it probable that the war will last another year. When the invasion of Germany begins another phase of the conflict will open, which will be quite as desperate as any of the preceding phases."

It must not be assumed that this is an interview with any single member of the government. Rather it is a consensus of government opinion. The members of the government have discussed the nature of the peace terms which will be offered—if the allies win—with a certain amount of candour from the beginning of the German retreat from the gates of Paris. But these discussions have only served to vaguely outline the English policy. They have not yet extended to details.

Germany Must Give Up Colonies.

"Two things England will insist upon," said the gentleman who may be taken as the spokesman for the government in so far as this article is concerned.

"One is that the German colonies must be given up. We do not want them—but who else is there to take them. We only ask that they be taken from Germany, in order to remove her as a disturbing element in world affairs.

"The German navy and the German coastal fortifications—such as those at Wilhelmshaven—must be smashed. We hope the British navy will attend to this before the war ends. It is highly improbable that the war will end before there is a test of strength upon the seas. But if the improbable should happen — then the German warships must be sunk. The forts must be blown upu. We can no longmust be blown up. We can no longpower."

At the present there is a disposition to frown upon any suggestion that England shall demand an indemnity from Germany. It seems fairly certain that no punitive indemnity will be asked. It is distantly possible that a comparatively small sum will be exacted. Complete financial reparation must be made in Belgium, so far as that is possible. Not only must the state be fully recompensed, but those individuals who have suffered in pocket through the German invasion, must have their losses made up.

"We fully recognize the invaluable aid rendered by Belgium at the outset of the war," said the gentleman who spoke. "We propose to show our appreciation by exacting such terms from Germany that in the future the violation of the neutrality of small and peaceful nations shall be regarded as ultra-dangerous. Such repayment of individual losses would also stiffen the backs of other small neutrals in situations which may arise in the future."

Banks have been looted, homes pillaged, jewelry stores robbed by the Germans. England and France will insist that all such losses be made good.

"We have no information that France will demand a monetary indemnity," said the speaker. "Nor have we any assurance that she will not. There has been no discussion of this point between us. The war has not yet reached the stage which would justify such discussion.

"But there is a determination on the part of the allied nations that uniformed aggression against peaceful civilians shall be punished. The English and French are paying for supplies as they go. The Germans must likewise pay. Wherever it is possible to establish the identity of officers who have directed outrages against individuals we shall insist that these officers be punished."

Territory Germany Will Lose.

As to territory, Germany is to be trimmed as follows:

France will regain Alsace and Lorraine.

The Slav and Polish provinces of the East are to be divided between Russia and Servia. Perhaps the ancient kingdom of Poland will be reestablished. Little consideration has been given this as yet. Generally speaking, an effort is to be made to rearrange the map of Europe along national lines.

The Duchy of Luxemburg will be turned over to Belgium.

Denmark will be given Schleswig-Holstein.

Italy may be given Trieste.

What remains of Germany and Austria-Hungary—and a very considerable empire both in population and wealth, would remain—will be permitted to rearrange itself to suit itself.

"Our belief is that the new Germany would have a stronger and saner national solidarity than at present," said the spokesman for the government. "For years it has been holding what are in effect conquered provinces by its great army. Its colonies have called for a navy. Deprived of the need for a great army and a great navy, Germans may devote themselves to the pursuit of material welfare, and cease to vex the world by continual aggressions."

All of this is promised, of course, upon an anticipated victory of the allies — a victory which shall be of so overwhelming nature that they will be in a position to impose their own terms of peace. Those terms are to be framed, not with an eye to the enrichment of political aggrandizement of any nation, but to the preservation of the future peace of Europe.

"We shall have no arrow sticking in Germany's side," said the speaker, "which shall demand a bloody revenge in the future. That was the mistake that Germany made when she took Alsace and Lorraine from France. While those provinces remained German no lasting peace could be hoped for."

Therefore no serious thought is being entertained by English or French leaders that France will demand a slice of the Rhine provinces of Germany. Not only will France not ask this, but she does not desire it. This statement may be taken as the absolutely authoritative expression of the present French cabinet, which reflects public opinion with rare fidelity:

"France does not desire to rule over a foot of German land or a single German subject. All that she wants is her own again—and peace."

WHEN BLOOD IS POISON

The blood must be filtered, otherwise you are poisoned. If the kidneys fail the liver is overworked, and becomes torpid. By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you get both these filtering organs working right, and thus secure healthful action of the bowels. For this reason these pills are an ideal family medicine. They cure biliousness, constipation, chronic indigestion and kidney disease.

HOW THE BRITISH LINE HELD THEIR POSITION FOR FIVE LONG WEEKS

New York Correspondent Describes the Bull-Dog Courage of Sir John French's Force in the Battle of the Aisne—Fooled Germans With Fake Batteries

NEW YORK, Oct. 26. — The World publishes a story from a staff correspondent who describes at first hand the battle of the Aisne and the bull-dog courage of the British troops who held the left centre of the allies' line, while the French left pushed back the German right. He says in part:

Sir John French, the British commander, undertook to hold this vital point of strategic necessity where the Germans were gathered for a second plunge toward Paris.

With an army of less than 100,000 under his command the British general succeeded in holding his position on a fighting line of twenty miles for five weeks, until the French had swept the flanking movement so far to the north that the immediate danger of German success had passed. With this accomplished, both the French and English have assumed the aggressive.

Fiercest of Modern Battles.

The official statements conveyed but an incomplete idea of the tremendous undertaking of the British and French troops. The statements did not give the real picture of how the British held against the onslaughts of the Germans a battle line twenty miles long, and for thirty miles on both ends of it the French held up their end.

They did not tell how the battle, raging day and night, turned into a continuous nightmare to the men who were engaged in it, every one of whom knew that upon the issue of it rested one of the great deciding factors of the war.

Between both lines of battle there is a narrow strip varying from seventy yards to a quarter of a mile which is a neutral valley of death. Neither side is able to cross that strip without being crumpled by fire against which no army, no matter how great, could stand.

Streets of Craonne Littered With Dead.

A number of small towns are distributed in this narrow strip, the most important being Craonne. The Germans and French have reoccupied it six times and each in turn has been driven out.

The streets of Craonne are littered with the dead of both armies. The houses, nearly all of which have been demolished by exploding shells, must also be full of bodies of men who crawled into them to get out of the withering fire and have there died. Many of these men died of sheer exhaustion and starvation, while the battle raged day after day.

Under the shelter of its buildings both the Germans and French have been able at times to rescue their wounded. This is more than can be said of the trap of death between the battle lines. There the wounded die and the dead go unburied, while the opposing forces direct their merciless fire a few feet above the field of suffering and carnage. I did not know until I looked upon the horrors of Craonne that such conditions could exist in modern warfare. If a man is wounded in that strip between the lines, he never gets back alive unless he is within a short distance of his own lines or is protected from the enemy's fire by the lay of the land.

Germans Are Treacherous.

I have been compelled to believe that the Germans have misused the Red Cross waggons. I have no reason to doubt the statement that the Germans have used Red Cross waggons and Red Cross corps to bring up machine guns. I have very good reason to justify the statement that the Germans have sent their armed forces wearing Red Cross badges.

The British took one German prisoner suffering from typhoid, and all the circumstances surrounding his capture inspired suspicions that he had been sent over to spread typhoid among the British troops.

Shelled Leg Batteries.

The correspondent tells of his success in reaching the battle line by way of Soulis and the plateau across from Vesle fort, and continues:

Beyond a forest that ran to the edge of the plateau overlooking the Aisne the Germans were shelling the woods, so I did not enter it. I kept in the open till I noticed a tall tree. Climbing this, I hid in the branches. From this coign of vantage I commanded a view of about six miles of firing line for three hours. It gave me an idea of the British battle plan.

Somewhere in the rear, probably across the Vesle, were several batteries of howitzers dropping heavy shells constantly on the few points held by the Germans. One of these was Fort Conde. Directly opposite me and half a mile apart were two other British batteries directing their fire at points where German troops were massed. Along the northern slope of the plateau these batteries directed their fire at the German line over a distance of from two to four miles.

There were also several British batteries firing both shell and shrapnel from a spur across the Aisne. There were also batteries of shrapnel apparently searching the patches of woods beyond the German lines and presumably worrying the trenches.

I could see the British trenches on the steep side of the plateau beyond. I could also see an occasional soldier through my glasses. The German guns were returning the heavy fire from the British, dropping both shell and shrapnel along the edge of the plateau. Some of these shells fell within two hundred yards of the tree from the branches of which I viewed the scene.

These missiles were being directed at a clump of brush back from the heavier grove. Scanning this brush through my glasses I thought I saw a heavy artillery piece which the British soldiers call "Long Tom." After a while I saw that this and three others like it were log batteries which had fooled the Germans. I learned afterward that the Germans had been shelling that fake battery for more than two weeks.

The range of the British guns seemed to be perfect. From the first shot I could see the ranks of the Germans break and then close again. I could see the bodies lying in the field after the fleeing Germans had passed. There were four companies in that woods and they must have lost fifty men in the open. Others were undoubtedly killed in the woods.

Tree a Dangerous Spot.

If I had known when I climbed that tree that the English lines were full of spies I should never have done so. I never took a chance like that before and will not again, for about this time it became evident to the British that their movements were accurately known. Every time a British general travelled along the road it was shelled. As soon as a line of troops or train of motor trucks took the road it was shelled.

Many spies were caught. The British are not suspicious enough, while the French are over suspicious. The British permitted refugees, or pretended refugees, to pass through their lines on the north, held by the Germans. They also did not search the woods and caves carefully enough. Spies were taken from some of these places who had been there a month, and in some instances were equipped with wireless apparatus and telephones, manipulated with very fine wire.

Sir John French constantly passed along the front of his troops. I saw him one day near Fismes in an automobile. In a machine that followed was a convalescent soldier, who told me that "Uncle French," as the soldiers called him, visited the field hospitals constantly, talking to the wounded.

No Friction Among the Allies.

In every way the British troops are very popular in France. I have not witnessed a single case of friction between the English and French troops. They drink and fraternize together, singing each others' songs, and even seem to be able to make each other understand.

Sir John A. J. Murray—Chief of Staff of Sir John French. He served both in Zululand and in South Africa.

WHAT CATARRH IS

It is estimated that every third person is troubled with catarrh in some form.

Science has shown that nasal catarrh indicates a weakened condition of the body; that the secretion of the mucous membranes are quickly affected, and local treatments in the form of snuffs and vapors do little, if any good.

To succeed catarrh you should drive its cause by enriching your blood with the cod-liver oil in Scott's Emulsion which is a medicinal food and a building tonic, free from harmful drugs or opiates. Try it. 10-26

Mrs. Carman Swears Maid's Story Untrue

Broke up Under Cross Fire of Examination—Shows Nerve in Fighting For Her Life in Witness Box—Her Husband's Testimony—Prosecutor Not Friendly

THE STATE'S CASE

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.— Warned by the District Attorney that her cross-examination would be a lengthy one, Mrs. Florence Carman entered the court at Mineola to-day steeled to fight with all the force of her personality literally for her life in the crucial ordeal.

With her word against that of her negro maid, the trial revolves itself into the issue of credibility. Celia Coleman, the maid is a girl to whom life has meant nothing but drudgery for white folk and enforced respect for white folk. The only good time she ever had in her twenty odd years, she admitted, was when she was in the hands of the State's detectives during the past few months awaiting this trial. She is just a plain "colored girl," with all the limitations enforced by lack of education and of social rank.

Made Prisoner Blanch.

But for all that her story blanched the cheeks of her massively gowned former mistress.

"Mrs. Carman came into the kitchen where I was," the girl swore. "She sent her little daughter away from there. She had on a kimono, a lace shawl and a house cap. She walked fast through the room and went out to the lawn.

"I heard breaking glass, and then a shot. She came back again a minute afterward and said, 'I shot him!' She said, 'See!' and pulled a revolver from under her shawl. She went into Dr. Carman's office and saw Mrs. Bailey's body. I tried to stop her from going there; told her not to go in. But she did.

Hoped For Forgiveness.

"The next morning she came to my room and said, 'Oh, why did I kill that woman? Will God forgive me? I hope God will forgive me!' I told her God would forgive anything but self-murder.

Would Get Rid of Revolver.

"Two days afterwards she told me she wanted to get the revolver out of the way. She had me get her father, Mr. Platt Conklin. She talked to him. He got a hammer. Then he went out to the barn. She had me make a wood fire in the stove and she burned some letters there."

She swore, too, that Mrs. Carman had afterwards given her $5 "for keeping her mouth shut," and that Dr. Carman had promised to look after her if she told before the grand jury the same story she had given at the preliminary inquiries.

For hours after the Coleman girl had narrated her brief story, John J. Graham, called the best criminal lawyer on Long Island, hammered at the slim little coal-black negress with all his skill and strength.

Why She Lied.

He made her admit that just after the shooting she had given an affidavit to George Levy, the Carman family attorney, saying she hadn't seen her mistress downstairs that night; that at the coroner's inquest she had lied under oath when she repeated this declaration; that she hadn't told all she knew to the first grand jury before which she appeared on July 13.

She lied, at first, she said, because she was told to lie by Mrs. Carman. Every one in the house knew of the doctor's wife's guilt, she vowed. Mrs. Carman said she would care for Celia's little boy if she lied for her. Mr. Carman told her he would pay her wages regularly to a Texan cousin in case she should be arrested as a witness. Before the first Grand Jury she didn't tell all she knew, because she wasn't asked certain questions.

Prosecutor Not Friendly.

District Attorney Smith gave a hint of his attitude when Mrs. Carman, during her testimony yesterday, smiled pleasantly at him and casually asked him to corroborate a bit of her evidence. He bluntly and coldly reminded her that she was testifying, and by his manner intimated that he was for the time merely the prosecutor. The accused when called to the stand, walked steadily to the box.

After Mrs. Carman had told of the incidents in connection with the purchase of the dictograph, which she had concealed in her husband's offices, Attorney Levy began to question her regarding events on the night of the shooting.

"Now, Mrs. Carman, on the following day, July 1, was the dictograph taken out of the house?" he asked. She said she had taken it out before breakfast-time. "I thought the doctor had enough trouble on his hands, and I did not want him to know I had become suspicious of him," she explained.

When She Used It.

"On the night of June 30, were you listening on the dictograph?" "No sir. The only time I had ever listened over it was when women patients came to visit the doctor who came frequently."

"Did you know Mrs. Bailey?" "No, sir."

"Did you look at her body after she was dead?" "Yes, sir, at the undertaker's."

"Had you ever seen her before that time?" "I had not."

Did Not Shoot.

"Did you fire any shots through the window?" "No, sir."

"You heard Celia Coleman testify that she had a talk with you in the kitchen. Is that true?" "No, sir," she replied, and gave similar responses when questioned on each point of the maid's testimony. She admitted having once had a pistol in her hand, a small one she had found in cleaning out drawers. This had been turned over to the authorities.

"Did you tell Celia Coleman to say that you were not downstairs on the night of the shooting?" "No, sir."

"Did you tell Celia you wanted to get your father there, to get the revolver out of the house?" "No, sir."

Under Cross Examination.

This morning Mrs. Carman appeared in the court apparently cheerful and refreshed, and stepped smilingly into the witness box to undergo the ordeal of cross-examination.

Broke Down.

Mrs. Carman faced her ordeal with lips parted in a smile. Once as the district attorney turned home intimate questions as to the jealousy that had stirred her heart concerning her husband's relations with women, she appeared to lose her splendid self-control and to falter. But smelling salts, self administered, soon revived her.

She broke down after it was all over and cried. The reaction came when her aged mother was on the stand.

State's Case.

The State's case rests on the testimony of Celia Coleman, negro maid in the Carman home, who swears her mistress admitted the murder to her, and that of Frank Farrell, a Bowery tramp, who says that he saw a woman descend to Mrs. Carman's window, face from the window into the house after the shot.

Husband's Evidence.

Dr. Elgin Carman, husband of the defendant, corroborated the testimony of other members of his household as to who was in the house the night of the murder. He said there were several persons, among them Mrs. Bailey, whom he did not know at that time, sitting in the waiting room. One was a man he did not know. "He told me he would come back later; he did not do so," Carman said.

"After I had talked to Mrs. Bailey," the witness continued, "she prepared to go home. Then the glass in the window was broken and a revolver fired through it. I had my hand on the door knob, I dropped behind the operating table. Then there was a shot. Mrs. Bailey said 'I'm shot.' I told her she was all right and then I saw blood. I grabbed her and pulled her back in the chair out of the range of more bullets. Then she died."

Woman There Previous Night.

Dr. Carman said Celia Coleman, the coloured maid, was in his office once that night, but that Mrs. Carman was out.

When asked if he had ever seen Mrs. Bailey before she called at his office on the night of the murder, he testified: "I think she was in my office the night before." This was the first time Carman had indicated that he had seen Mrs. Bailey before the night of the murder.

"What did this man who came into your office do?" District Attorney Smith asked.

Mysterious Man.

"He shook hands with me and said he had someone whom he wanted me to see."

"Did you ever take the trouble to find out who that man was?"

"Yes, I tried to find him. I saw him one day and told the assistant district attorney about it."

"Did you tell Mr. Quinn, a friend of Mr. Bailey, that you were sure it was a woman's hand that held the revolver?"

"I don't remember."

"Will you swear that you did not?" shouted the district attorney.

"No." This ended the cross-examination.

GROUP PICTURE OF CHILDREN

Parents will be interested in learning that the Examiner will, at Christmas, publish a "Children's Group Picture." This will consist of all the photographs of children taken by the toy Studio, between the present time to the 1st of December. The picture should prove one of beauty and interest and will doubtless be prized by parents.

Germans In Poland Are Running Yet

Have Not Been Able to Gather Their Forces Since Their Repulse Near Warsaw

LONDON, Oct. 26.—All reports to-night indicate that the German army in Poland has not yet ceased its retreat from the Vistula River between Warsaw and the Pilitsa, where the Russians are keeping up a close pursuit. Berlin, as usual, contents itself with announcing that there is "no definite news" from this section of the war theatre.

On the other hand, it appears that violent fighting is in progress in Galicia, where the Russian forces, depleted for the defence of Warsaw, are having no little trouble in preventing the rejuvenated Austrian army from crossing the San River. Petrograd reports, however, say that the Czar's lines are being well maintained. Further to the south-east Vienna declares that the Austrians have repossessed themselves of Czernowitz, the capital of the crown land of Bukowina, where the Russians were reported to have established a civil government after th victory at Lemberg. This new Austrian claim lacks confirmation from independent sources.

In East Prussia, where comparative quiet has prevailed since the Germans were frustrated in their invasion of th Suwalki Province, Russian Poland, Berlin says that fighting has been resumed and intimates that a battle is in progress in the neighbourhood of Augustowo.

THE POPULATION OF GREECE

With Her New Provinces She Probably Has Over Four Million Inhabitants.

A provisional census of population in Greece's new provinces, gives the following results: Macedonia, 1,340,716 inhabitants; Epirus, 244,368; islands including Crete), 645,585; total, 2,230,669. The figures given for Epirus are only approximate. Old Greece had a population of 2,631,952 in 1907, an increase of 7.34 per cent. over the preceding census. At the same rate of increase, the population at the end of 1913 may be estimated at 2,750,000 Greater Greece, therefore, has a population of about 4,761,669.

INTERNATIONAL COURT AND POLICE FORCE

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—It has been proposed to organize a great popular movement, international in scope, which would take advantage of the most unhappy conditions most of the world labours under, and present a remedy for the future, based on past experience.

Under present paralleled systems of defence, any nation so dominated by ambition and greed may launch the world into enormous expenditures in armaments, ruinous, and an ever-present menace in peace times, and with a finally certain result, as the present great war, the effect of which is felt to the uttermost parts of the earth.

Germany is not the last country which may be so exploited; more teeming millions still are just beginning to receive the mark of our European civilization.

The great mass of the people of any nation stand for peace, normally speaking, and what is more effective than to crystalize the voice of the people, that governments which are constituted to register and execute their will, may know that we have outgrown militarism, and when its present greatest exponents, the Germans, will abolish national armaments, will abolish national armament which makes it possible to exploit one people against another, to the detriment of both.

This could more easily be done than to reach an agreement as to limitation of armament which could not be enforced, for if the principle remains that a nation may arm, then she, herself, may set her own limitation until met, force to force.

An International Court in which the nations would have to settle their disputes just as individuals do in our civic courts, and an international police to maintain the peace, not a Dual Alliance or Triple Entente, helpless during preparations of an avowed enemy, but an alliance of the best elements of all the nations, to repress the very beginnings of disorder.

The world is ripe for this movement and every nation which ejects itself into the world war would make it easier to finally effect its object.

No system could have more dire results than arbitrament of war. We might with supreme confidence support anything to supplant this method, so contrary to Christian, moral, and natural laws.

Canada is ideally situated to begin this movement, living as we are in the freedom of a hundred years of peace, and now taking our proper share of a conflict which should free Europe as well.

The lower orders of life do not fight amongst those of their own order unless in extremities, and man has greater and nobler struggles requiring all of his energy.

This would be a "fight to a finish" movement, and yet its vigorous conduct might well have effect in shortening the war. Adversity may clear the vision even of our enemies.

If at the end of this war force be not international, then you will see a more feverish struggle than ever in preparations for what must be a still greater war. In this, Canada and American could no longer exclude themselves.

It is a God-given opportunity of emancipation.

Yours very truly,
JOSEPH S. BELL.

FEW PRISONERS TAKEN STRUGGLE TOO DEADLY

Fighting on the Vistula Marked by Intense Hatred — Germans Are Smoked Out.

LONDON, October 26.—Relatively few prisoners have been taken in the fighting along the Vistula. This is explained by the mutual hatred of the contestants and their determination to come to mortal clutches. During a fight at Rashin, near Warsaw, the Germans were strongly entrenched in a forest. The Russians set fire to the woods, smoking the Germans out, and then turned their artillery on them.

THE FRENCH TROOPS MAKE PROGRESS ON THE RIGHT

GERMANS LOST HEAVILY IN CROSSING THE YSER RIVER

THE GERMANS ARE HELD ALL ALONG THE NEW LINE OF BATTLE IN NORTH

Meanwhile the French Are Pressing the Fighting on the Extreme Right, Taking Advantage of the Weakening of the German Lines by the Withdrawal of the Bavarian Troops

THE GERMANS SACRIFICED THOUSANDS

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, October 26.—The Germans are being held all along the new line of battle in the north, while the French are pressing the fighting on the extreme right in an effort to force a change in the German plans.

This was the interpretation placed to-day on the announcement that severe fighting has taken place in both the Woevre and Argonne regions. The Germans in order to make their operations from the north successful withdrew Bavarian troops from their left, and sent them into action in Belgium, supported by fresh levies from Cologne and Berlin.

The French have taken advantage of this, and as a result it is believed they are now maintainng so stern an offensve on their right that the pressure on their extreme left must shortly be relieved by forcing the Germans to send some of their forces from the Belgian front back around to the Woevre district.

That the advance of the Germans across the Yser has not been followed up with any further offensive movement is believed to be due to their terrific losses in gaining their success at this point. All reports from the front agree that the Germans sacrificed thousands of men in this movement, and all along the front the ground is reported to be covered with both dead and wounded Germans.

The fleet continues its operations along the coast from Nieuport to Ostend, and the naval guns are constantly raking the German positions, which have now been withdrawn inland from two to five miles.

OTTAWA, October 26.—It is probable that 1,000 men comprising the Royal Canadian Regiment now doing garison duty at Bermuda, after having relieved the British regulars for the front, will themselves go forward at an early date, to be relieved in turn by new troops from Canada. It has now been definitely decided that the complement to be recruited for the second draft will number 16,000 instead of 10,000, as was at first contemplated.

The reports from England to the effect that some of the first Canadian contingent will go to Egypt is not generally credited here. It is certain that any such move would be received with resentment by the Canadians enlisted for active service.

PARIS, October 26.—The Germans who have crossed the Yser in heavy force, have failed to follow up their advantage, according to the official communique issued at three o'clock this afternoon. It is stated that the allied lines opposing the enemy at this point are intact, while the French lines everywhere else ar maintained. The government characterizes the German losses in the recent battles as 'considerable.''

GERMANS BUILD ZEPPELIN BASES AT GHENT, BRUGES, BRUSSELS AND ANTWERP

LONDON, October 25.—"The Zeppelins will surely get us if we don't watch out!" A special cable from Brussels reports that workmen are building sheds at Bruges, Ghent, Antwerp and Brussels as bases for a squadron of Zeppelins which are to invade England, or at least attempt to. Count Zeppelin is said to be supervising the work, with headquarters on beard one of hos own air ships.

NOW OUT ON BAIL

Mrs. Florence Carman Released This Morning on Account of the Disagreement of the Jury

CASE IS CLOSED

Examiner Special:

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—Mrs. Florence Carman left the county court house in Brooklyn early this afternoon a free woman. She was released on $25,000 bail, following the disagreement of a jury which tried her for the murder of Mrs. Bailey in her husband's surgery. It is generally understood that she will not be tried again, and that the case, so far as the State is concerned, is closed.

Business Men Support Idea

Are Buying Tickets For Banquet in the Oriental Hotel, When Dr. Gordon Will Address Them

The business men of the city are taking kindly to the idea of hearing Dr. J. L. Gordon at the Oriental next Wednesday at noon. The tickets are selling fast and all who wish to be present are advised to secure tickets at once, as only a limited number are to be sold. There can be no doubt that Dr. Gordon will have something very interesting to say to the business men on Wednesday, and the two noted musicians, Mr. Edouard Hasselberg and Mr. Albert Greenlaw will be in attendance to render musical selections.

Jack's Lake Fishing Club

The members of the Jack's Lake Fishing party returned home this morning, after one of the most pleasant outing in the history of the camp. During the first week or ten days of the camp the fishing and partridge hunting was excellent, but the last few days turned out to be poor. When the fish were plentiful, a large number were smoked by members of the camp and brought home. Mr. John Trombley, who had charge of the cooking, made a most satisfactory provisioner, everybody speaking in various terms of his ability as a chef.

The following gentlemen comprised the party:

W. H. Denham, Mr. Kearns, of the Quaker Oats Company, Chicago; B. H. Prack, of Hamilton; M. J. McIlroy, of Hamilton; Mr. Mathewson, of the C.P.R., Toronto; G. W. Hatton, A. H. Stratton, D. O'Connell, W. E. Lech, R. Kingdon, R. Hicks, W. J. Thompson, Alex Elliott, and Mr. Davis, of Foley and Gleeson Company. His Honour Judge Huycke and Mr. R. M. Glover spent a few days with the party.

FISHING CLUB RETURNS HOME

The Ketchecum Lake Fishing Club has returned after two weeks in the north, and report that while the weather was a little too open, the fishing was fine. The party were eminently satisfied with the way in which the commissariat was handled. They visited several of the northern lakes in their pursuit of the members of the finny tribe and all agree that the outing was one of the best. One of the notable things about the camp which sends a chill through the reader, even at the fireside, was that every morning the majority of the fishermen took a dip in the lake. Even on Saturday a number of the men took the usual morning swim. Among those who went with the party, (which returned intact) were E. A. Peck, Will Comstock, E. F. Mason, H. Nesbitt, W. H. Dunsford, W. Turner, R. Gibbs, R. J. Munro, J. Collins, Wm. Boyd, Bobcaygeon; J. Edwards Lindsay; and A. Jackson, chef.

FIVE GERMAN AEROPLANES HAVE BEEN DESTROYED

French Aviator Disposes of Two Taubes by Accurate Work With His Revolver

IMPORTANT CAPTURES

Examiner Special:

LONDON, Oct. 26.—According to the Paris correspondent of the Express, five German aeroplanes were destroyed by the French on Saturday. Two Taubes were brought down at Rheims by a single French aviator he says, who succeeded in getting to a higher altitude than the Germans and then fired on them with a revolver. Two other German "birds" were hit by the guns of the Maigrierourt forts near Mandliger and a fifth German airman was wounded by a rifle shot at Gravelines a seaport 12 miles east northeast of Calais.

Farmers Advised To Breed Horses

OTTAWA, Oct. 26.—Reports to the department of trade and commerce from England show that the food supply in some respects at least is not seriously affected by the war. In Manchester, the supply of fresh fruit and vegetables is abnormally large and prices are lower than in former years. One firm of fruit preservers is packing 40,000 pots, or 225 tons, every day for the soldiers at the front and in training. British authorities on live stock are advising the farmers actively to turn to horse breeding, because of the enormous sacrifice of horses in the war, and the great demand for them that is bound to continue after the war.

BRITISHERS IN BELGIUM ROUNDED UP

Germans Are Preparing Defensive Operations and Wish to Hide Their Movements

SOME ARE EXPELLED

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Oct. 26.—All British subjects have either been expelled from Belgian territory or are held to determine whether they are to be treated as prisoners of war or spies. This action on the part of the Germans became known on the arrival in Holland to-day of the first of the refugees. They reported the conditions in Belgium indicated that the Germans are putting into effect plans of a defensive nature, and that in order to hide their operations they have ordered all Britishers rounded up.

Because of the increasingly severe censorship imposed here since Saturday, it is believed that another important movement against the Germans is in progress in northern France and along the Belgian coast.

PATRIOTIC DAY FOR THE BELGIANS

Profits of Elliot's Store on Saturday Will Be Devoted to the Fund

The plucky Belgians have been the means of bringing disaster to the great German hordes.

Had the Germans been allowed to race through Belgium, so thoroughly prepared as they were, as one of their high officers said, "even to the last button," they would have caught the French just half prepared and the British unready. They would have taken Paris and placed a garrison there and rolled back to deliver a staggering blow upon Russia. Then would have come Britain's struggle for life, and who can say that this continent would not have bled for her dearly prized liberties.

But plucky little Belgium was there. She bore the weight until her back almost broke, like grim death she held on until the others were ready to take up the burden.

It is not too much to say that Germany was defeated before she crossed Belgium. The delay disarranged her plans, she did not take Paris, she could not send the full force back to fight Russia, Britain's army hung on like the symbolic bulldog and Germany is being worried to her doom. The military German incubus will be crushed and the German citizens will be lifted to higher levels, to a liberty they have long forgotten how to enjoy.

The Belgians have freely given their lives, their homes, their means of living for the liberty of the civilized world. They are hungry, homeless and in need.

There are many ways of helping them, but there is a way that will also help yourselves. Eliot's store, on Saturday next will give over the entire control of their store to the Peterborough Patriotic Society and the entire profits of the day will be donated to help the Empire and the brave Belgians.

Great preparations are being made to make next Saturday live in the memory of all, as being one of the greatest banner bargains ever seen in Peterborough.

An Illustrated Lecture at Knox Church To-night

At Knox Church to-night a lecture will be given by Rev. J. McPherson Scott, of Toronto, under the auspices of the Women's Missionary Society. His address will deal with missionary conditions in the East from which Rev. Mr. Scott recently returned.

His experience was obtained through his duties in connection with the foreign missions in the East of the Presbyterian Church. Rev. Mr. Scott recently completed a tour of the world, and with the illustrations that accompany the lecture a large attendance should greet him.

42 of The 57th Have Already Been Accepted

Recruiting Continues at the Armouries This Evening---No Orders in Regard to Leaving City Have Yet Been Received---Overseas Contingent Will Parade at the Armouries To-night

Peterborough's contingent for the Second Canadian Overseas Force, now numbers forty-two men, a number having been added on Saturday. Recruiting continues to-night and each evening until the seventy-five quota of the 57th Regiment has passed the medical examination. That is the rock against which the hopes of many who wished to go have been dashed. Many aplicants have failed to quali-fy, but there is still a steady stream of recruits, and it is expected that before the orders are given to leave for the mobilization center, Peterborough's contingent will be complete. The men who have passed so far are physically fit in every sense of the word as a minor defect was enough to result in the rejection of a candidate.

The percentage of native-born Canadians among the recruits who have been successful in passing is larger than in the first contingent, and there are fewer married men among the lot, the average age being noticeably younger.

The Overseas Contingent will parade at the Armouries at 8 o'clock to-night.

TIDE WASHES PILES OF GERMAN DEAD ON TO BELGIAN BEACH NEAR NIEUPORT

LONDON, October 25.—J. M. N. Jeffries, a Daily Mail, telegraphs from Flushing:

"Heavy firing was again heard this morning from the direction of the seaboard. As a result of severe fighting amid the dunes the allies advanced further upon Ostend. Their lines are now running from the coast, through Lombartsyde and Mannikxveere, to between Slype and St. Pierre-Capelle.

"The Germans between Westende Village and Westende Bains, were exposed to to fire from three sides. The British ships are now off Middelkerke.

"The light and railway service between Knocke and Ostend has been suspended and a large number of the supply trains have returned to Bruges. English cavalry is reported to be active, working up from Thourout. The Germans placed artillery between Thourout and Tabbeke last night. The enemy is still occupying Thieult. Ghent and Bruges are quiet."

"A battle has been fought in the extreme right of the German wing in the region of Nieuport, with extraordinary violence. The Belgian troops, helped by the vessels of the British fleet, literally massacred a German force which had attempted to push out a column to the south toward Dunkirk. At high tide the waves were washing piles of German dead up on the beach."

A. F. WILDING PROMOTED ON THE FIELD; SEQUEL TO EXCITING EPISODE ON THE OISE

LONDON, October 25.—A despatch received here this morning says that A. F. Wilding, the tennis champion, has been promoted to a lieutenancy for gallantry on the battlefield. It is believed that he was with a detachment of cavalry, which after pursuing a German attack, started a game of water polo in the Oise. As the enemy was near by, the horses were left harnessed. The approach of a patrol of Uhlans was signalled, and the British, having no time to dress, jumped on their horses naked, and charged the enemy, who fled.

THIS IS VERY KIND!

WASHINGTON, D.C., October 26.—Although Germany contends that Canada, by sending troops against Germany, has violated the spirit of the Monroe doctrine, Germany has no intention of attacking Canada, nor attempting to colonize the Dominion, according to the statement issued here to-day by the German embassy.

"The German point of view is that by joining in a European war, Canada has put herself outside of the pale of the Monroe Doctrine, but Germany has no intention of attacking Canada, or colonizing Canada."

This is an amplification of the view expressed yesterday by Count Von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, that by taking part in the war, Canadians justified an aggressive campaign against themselves.

IS WAR MURDER?

Are we corrupted in sentiment by the cruel fact of war. We read with comparative equanimity, stories of the tremendous toll of war in the field—of thousands killed, wounded and missing. Yet if a boy is run down and killed by a street car or auto, the whole city is stirred. A French hospital-ship with a large number of wounded on board goes ashore and we read with shuddering solicitude the danger of the ship breaking up and the wounded going to death by drowning—an easy death compared with death on the battle-field. Certainly war and its horrors harden the heart. We are carried away by the glamour of its magnificent horror, the thrill of heroic deeds done by brave men, in compassing the deaths of their fellow-men. When we come to analyze the situation we shall see and say that a life is a life. Whether it is destroyed on the battlefield, by battalions or singly amid the casualties of peace, some wife or mother, some sister or brother, is bereaved and the heartache is as great for the soldier lying stark on the battlefield or sleeping in a nameless grave. Murder is no less murder because it is wholesale; and war is murder.

THE CARE OF STREET TREES.

Even in this time of war and war troubles, the motto of solid John Bull is "business as usual." Because we are enlisting soldiers and equipping armies in Canada, that work will be useless unless we keep the sustaining industries and activities of the city and country in productive operation. We must continue "business as usual" and the activities of civic and national life must be fostered. We must keep our roofs shingled; we must put up the storm windows; we must put in bulbs, and inter our tulips. We must see that our lawns are put in shape to realise the promise of another season. And we must look after our trees, one of our most precious possessions, as far as the beauty and summer comfort of the city are concerned.

Trees, except in the forest where nature does the planting and pruning, need constant attention, from the time they are planted in the streets. This attention to be of the best value must be an attention of knowledge of the habits of tree growth.

A correspondent writing in Friday's Examiner, referred to the proper or rather improper pruning of certain street trees. Without knowing the circumstances one can infer that the trees referred to were improperly pruned; for improper and injudicious, not to say ignorant, pruning is the rule, not the exception.

This arises from the fact that nobody is responsible; that is, nobody that knows. The individual planters of trees in the streets — for the city has never been guilty of planting a street tree—cannot be expected to have expert knowledge of the proper way to prune a street tree.

When the city wants special service done in respect of the streets, it employs a man that knows, for it is not to be supposed that aldermen will know about street matters that involves scientific knowledge. They employ an engineer—somebody that knows. They wouldn't employ a carpenter to do the work of an engineer or man familiar with road construction, any more than they would employ a navvy to lay a hardwood floor or wainscot a dining room in fumed oak.

Yet the aldermen violate this principle in the pruning of street trees.

They employ possibly a retired farmer to do the work. Now a retired farmer may be as most of them are an excellent man, as a man; but in the doubtful if he knows the first principles of the work he is employed to do.

Such a man, a season or two ago was encountered on the street merrily butchering and mutilating street trees without any eye to the future welfare of the tree—its growth or symmetry. Asked what experience he had had, he naively replied that he had "trimmed a good many apple trees."

This was an experience that tended to disqualify him for pruning street trees. The chief and primary objects of pruning the two kinds of trees are opposite. A fruit tree is pruned to thin the foliage and let in the sunlight into the top and sides of the tree. A street tree should be pruned in order to thicken the foliage so as to produce shade; to preserve balance of branchage. A man to do this must have studied shade trees and learned their habits of growth and needs. A man who had studied fruit trees so that he could prune one to "the king's taste," might, and would doubtless, make a botch of pruning a shade tree.

It is vain to trust to the average citizen to properly prune street trees. In the first place he doesn't know how and he has the virtue—all right in its place—of hating to cut off a single limb from his pet trees no matter how badly they may need it. He thereby does the same injustice to a tree that a man would do his child by postponing trimming it—training it—till it was eighteen or twenty. Trees like children should receive attention in the way of training and pruning every year from the time they are planted. Only in this way can a proper trunk and symmetrical growth of branches, be secured.

This work is too often delayed — till it is forced and then the tree is barbarously mutilated. On the south side of Hunter street, East City, two or three large street elms were neglected in their infancy; and, at length, huge branches were lopped off leaving big scars nearly a foot in diameter that will require years of growth of the trunk to cover. These big limbs should never have been allowed to grow so large; they should have been removed when they were small.

We can never have satisfactory conditions of our street trees till the city takes upon it the responsibility of tree planting and pruning; and only then if the work is put under the care of a commission, composed of men who know and care. A private citizen is under no more obligation to plant trees in the streets for the benefit and pleasure of the public than the city has to plant trees on private property.

We shall never have the regular lines of symmetrical street trees—of the variety, suited to the soil of the vicinity, till tree planting and care are placed under the charge of a properly qualified commission. Individuals plant all sorts of trees, suitable and unsuitable—mostly unsuitable—on all sorts of lines; and the result is—well, unsatisfactory.

What public-spirited citizen will lead in this matter? Every day's delay to do something in this direction is dangerous, not only to the welfare of existing street trees, but to future growth. We are, even, in this war time in other directions trying to attend to "business as usual." Then why not in the matter of street tree planting and care and civic beautification generally? The war will be over in two or three years, and we need not allow them to be wasted years. The war is working great destruction upon the countries where it is waged. Buildings, trees and vines are "shot up" or trampled down ruthlessly. While this destruction is going on, let us create new beauty of trees and park and boulevard at home, glad that we are left in peace to do these things instead of suffering in the infernal welter of war.

TWO KINDS OF NATIONALISTS

There are Natiqnalists and Nationalists, for instance, John Redmond, rallying the Irish to the colours, and Blondin, Bourden's new colleague, who declared, if it was necessary, to shoot the Union Jack full of holes.—London Advertiser.

HOW THE WAR HELPS

A brisk demand for the product of the paper and pulp mills in the interior of Newfoundland has resulted from conditio a growing out of the war in Europe. Steamers are rapidly arriving to take on board cargoes for England. It is expected that the mills will be obliged to supplement their present equipment, and it is anticipated that new pulp and paper concessions will shortly be in operation. —Conservation.

Will German Warships of The Air Be Able To Capture Great Britain?

Some writers have been declaring that a Zeppelin invasion of Great Britain could never be undertaken with any hope of success, since Germany could not transport by airships sufficient men to constitute an effective invading arm. These writers misapprehend the purpose of the Zeppelin fleet, which is not to transport an invading army, but to prepare the way for such an army by destroying ships, fortresses and arsenals, and by terrorizing the inhabitants. The Kaiser is credited with the idea of launching a fleet of fifty Zeppelins against Great Britain. If this aerial armada could overcome the resistance that would be offered to it, it could do enormous damage. Every Zeppelin has a bomb magazine containing 500 bombs, and mechanism for dropping 12 bombs from each side simultaneously. Thus the aerial fleet would carry no fewer than 25,000 bombs, which properly placed, would do inconceivable damage.

The London Times, in its engineering supplement, recently gave some interesting particulars of the Zeppelin fleet. It shows that it is by no means necessary to get a base as near England as Calais or Ostend. The range of effective flight of these craft must, of course, include the return to the base; the latest type of Zeppelin has a radius of over 1,000 miles, so that a flight to England and return could easily be made from Brussels, 250 miles from London; from Düsseldorf, 380 miles; from Frankfort, 500 miles; or from Hamburg, 570 miles. Airships of this type have already made long voyages with their full complement on board, that of the Ilchutte-Lans on April 20 of the present year, lasting twenty hours, during which a distance of 1,060 miles was covered, while sufficient fuel for a ten hours' flight remained at the end of the journey. Thus a Zeppelin raid on England has no impossibilities of that nature to prevent it, whatever may be the other risks ahead of it.

Recent cables have spoken of a fleet of fifty being assembled for the purpose. There has been a tendency to name larger figures in discussing the strength of the Zeppelin fleet, but it must be remembered that these vessels are not collapsible, and that the approximate number may therefore be estimated by that of the sheds for housing them, even apart from the efforts in the same direction of the secret service. The following list gives the ships and sheds at each of the towns named, and though probably not complete gives a fair idea of what Germany possessed before war broke out:

Towns	No. of Airships.	No. of Sheds.
Berlin	6	2
Hanover	2	1
Dresden	2	1
Cologne	2	2
Dusseldorf	2	1
Darmstadt	2	1
Mannheim	2	1
Metz	2	2
Friedrichshaven	2	2
Koenigsburg	2	2
Graudenz	2	1
Schneidemuhl	2	1
Strassburg	2	1
Leipsic	2	1
Potsdam	2	1
Gotha	1	1
Baden Oost	1	1
Cuxhaven	1	1

To the 37 airships here enumerated must be added ten that are privately owned, but subsidized by the Government and available for war purposes. Many new ships were in course of construction and have been or will shortly be completed, but the loss during the war may so far be put at 12 vessels, so that 50 would be a fair estimate of the number likely to be available in the near future.

The great size and power of the machine, as well as their vulnerability may be judged from the particulars which the Times gives. It says a Zeppelin is a cigar-shaped, rigid gasbag, 520 feet long, 52 feet in diameter, with a gas capacity of 25,000 cubic metres. It has a carrying capacity of 23 tons, and is fitted with four motors of 205 horse power each, which gives it an easy average speed of over 55 miles an hour. Fitted with an upper and lower deck, it carries tanks large enough to hold over 500 gallons of petrol and oil, besides an accommodation for a crew of 24 men with bomb-dropping appliances. The top deck is reached by a spiral stairway through the centre of the airship. On this deck are fitted machine guns and anti-aerial guncraft, and a promenade from the bow to the stern is wired off and made secure for aeronauts to walk on.

In repelling a Zeppelin raid, the British are relying on anti-aircraft guns, for which Zeppelins would present excellent targets, but more particularly on aeroplanes. The British have a great and ever growing fleet of aeroplanes, while the Navy is supplied with what is regarded as the most effective aircraft in existence. The points which give the British aircraft the superiority over those of the enemy are their speed and ability to climb rapidly. The power of the aeroplane to climb rapidly to a great height is especially necessary when fighting Zepelins, since it is only from above that they can be effectively attacked. The authorities in Britain fully appreciate the possibilities of a Zeppelin raid. Whether Germany appreciates the extent of the preparations made by Britain for combatting such a raid there is no means of knowing. But seeing how much the Kaiser is wrapped up in his beloved Zeppelins we can hardly believe that he will allow the opportunity presented by this war to pass without launching them upon this supreme adventure.—Montreal Herald-Telegraph.

Is The Province of Ontario To Be Ruled By The Ghost of Whitney?

Is the memory of Sir James Whitney forever to be used to keep the Conservative party of Ontario in line and in power? Do the present Conservative leaders calculate that disruption and defeat may be avoided only by frequent reminders to the people of the works of the dead premier Does the new regime at Toronto propose to win the next provincial election on its own record or does it believe that the public appetite for results may be satiated with verbal manus representing the deeds of him who has passed on?

These, and other questions of a similar nature must present themselves to anyone who attended the nomination meeting at Dutton, Wednesday, when Hon. F. G. Macdiarmid was re-elected without opposition as member of West Elgin. They were forcibly brought home in the remarks of Thomas W. McGarry, member of the Legislature fo the historic riding of South Renfrew. Mr. McGarry dilated at length upon the splendid record of Sir James, making especial reference to the late premier's activity in the hydro-electric project. If Mr. McGarry spoke the truth, and far be it from us to question his veracity, we must believe that Sir James was the real maker of the great hydro scheme, and that in comparison with him the work of Sir Adam Beck as the father of hydro, pales into insignificance.

The Conservative politicians in the Legislature, of which Mr. McGarry is one of the foremost, well realize the attitude of the people at large toward the recent cabinet changes. So far the government has failed to make any satisfactory explanation of the withdrawal—or was it dismissal?—of Sir Adam Beck from the inner circle. The popularity of the "Minister of Power" is too well-known for comment, and his political strength, though he is far from being a success as a politician, is remarkable. The present rulers of Ontario know what the opinion of the people must be of any government that would attempt to put London's member in a secondary place. With no satisfying explanation in readiness for the electors and with regard to the political needs of the situation, they now apparently have gone one step forward and determined to credit the success of the hydro project to the dead premier. From the tone of Mr. McGarry's Dutton speech this deduction may be very reasonably drawn.

There is every reason to believe that latterly Sir James was a hearty supporter of the whole hydro plan; there are many evidences to this conclusion. And no doubt the late premier devoted more or less time and energy to the project. But the whole province acknowledges that Sir Adam Beck is the "man who made hydro." To argue in any other direction is idle. Therefore no one can deduce nothing else but that the attempt of the member for South Renfrew to credit Sir James with the success of hydro, is but another evidence of the government's intention to rest on the laurels of the Whitney government and gloss over the relegation of the man who was generally regarded and favoured as the next premier.—St. Thomas Journal.

Villagers Scan the Sky For Shells As For Weather Signs

SOISSONS, Oct. 19.—(By mail to New York)—At Soissons as elsewhere in France, only the aged and the women and children are left. These spend their days and nights in cellars, coming out during lulls in the fighting. They eat and sleep underground, but in periods of comparative calm children are seen playing in the streets, appreciating little of what it is all about. They wonder for a brief minute why the houses have reeled into the streets, then their wonderment is lost in the joy of climbing over the ruins, while mothers shout out warning to them to be careful lest they go too near the tottering walls.

Smoking is too much of a luxury for many to indulge in. The soldiers of several great armies have passed through the country and all forms of tobacco are long since gone. Meat is the greatest rarity; chickens, eggs, butter and milk not to be had. Bread there is in sufficient quantities, and there is little wine, which the inhabitants succeeded in hiding from the invaders. There is no brandy, no tea; little coffee. But the people get along and do not complain.

And they are optimistic. They are firmy convinced the allies will win. Even while the shells begin to fall about them like rain and they are forced to take to their cellars again, they go stoically; it is all a part of the preparation for victory. Women call to their children to come in out of the shells, quite like Canadian women call their children out of the rain — models of cheerfulness and hope.

About noon a lull came in the firing and the people came out of their cellars and from behind their shutters, but timidly, like squirrels from hollow tree trunks. Venturing to the middle of the streets they looked into the sky, to see if shells were bursting there, quite as I have seen farmers do when looking for signs of rain.

REAL ESTATE AND BUSINESS CARDS

21,375 FORDS SOLD IN SEPTEMBER.

The Ford Motor company announces that in the month of September there were sold and delivered 21,375 Ford cars. This was a gain of 11,429 cars over September 1913. This is significant, not only because it shows that the Ford production is rapidly being increased to meet the stupendous influx of orders, but also because it demonstrates that the Ford Motor company is maintaining the 300,000 car schedule necessary to give Ford purchasers between August 1, 1914, and August 1, 1915, a share of Ford profits.

Peterborough's representative of the Ford car has done his share in helping forward this increase of sales for September. Mr. Duffus' achievement in earning the title to being the selling agent who has sold the largest number of automobiles this year for the Ford Co. stands unchallenged.

"SHAG" HAS GREAT LITTLE RUGBY SQUAD IN LOWER CANADA FIRSTS

Frank Shaughnessy's abilities as an athletic coach, particularly in Rugby, have been manifested by the work of McGill in the Intercollegiate Union. Lower Canada College down Montreal way is another example of what he has been doing. This team of young chaps, nearly all sons or brothers in Quebec football families, have played five games this fall and won all of them, with an aggregate score of 261 to 5 points. Lower Canada fans have the following players: W. Molson, P. Dunford, E. W. Ambridge, F. Beverly, C. Slater, D. Baillie (capt.), Y. J. Picott, W. Clark, ... F. Sheriton, K. G. Blackager, B. Claston, F. J. Nichol, R. McLagan, C. Flanagan, T. Lyall, B. Brown, A. W. Gilmour.

Lower Canada College is having a great gridiron season this fall. Under "Shag's" coaching their teams have jumped into the lead in both the local and inter-city Leagues. The Seniors have done exceptionally well. Here is the season's record to date. Won 5, lost 0.

The games were:
St. Albans, Brockville, won, 128-2.
Ashbury College, Ottawa, won, 51-2.
Montreal High School, won, 46-0.
And the return match, won, 29-0.
Westmount High School, won, 18-1.

PETERBORO' BOY IN LIMELIGHT

Wilfrid Stratton Played Quarter for 'Varsity Seniors

Wilfred Stratton, of Peterborough, made his debut with the 'Varsity Senior team on Saturday against T.R. and A.A., and evidently made good. The Mail and Empire Says: 'Varsity lined up without "Red" McKenzie on the back division, the latter being under the weather with a bad knee, while Gamey Stratton, of the intermediates, was tried at quarter, and made good. In fact his work was the feature of the game, he being slippery as an eel, and always in the thick of the play. Like Pete Campbell, the former quarter, it looks as if Peterborough will again be represented at quarter for 'Varsity.

Two other Peterborough boys were in the game. Dick Sheehy with 'Varsity and Frank Heffernan with T.R. and A.A.

BATTER HAS A BETTER CHANCE IN THE MAJORS

Lee Magee, who is hitting around .300 with the Cardinals, declares that any one who has any real natural, native-born batting ability can hit far better in the major leagues than in most of the bush company, and several other sluggers think the same. "In the minors," says Magee, "you are handicapped two ways: By the dangerous wildness of the pitchers and the wildness of the umpires. These ferocious little leagues seem to think that their passport to major promotion is over the strikeout route and that the bigger their fanning record the surer their chance to rise. So they drive them in with fearful speed, averaging, I think, far faster than the average pitching you face in the majors. That would be only logical, for the big league pitchers are the same men who formerly ran wild in the bushes, with their ideas toned down and in many cases with their arm and shoulder muscles showed up from that early exertion. "They send in the balls hit or miss with headlong speed, and keep the batter too busy dodging to do much effective hitting. Meanwhile the umpires are helping them all they can. In the smaller leagues the umpires give the pitchers away the best of it. In the big leagues, the umpires favour the batters. Consequently, between ducking the bean-dubious strikes, the minor league batsman has a fierce time of it and is lucky rather than skillful if he hits 'em often."

Hon. Colin Campbell Dead.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 26.—Hon. Colin H. Campbell, formerly a member of the Manitoba Government, in which he was successively Attorney-General and Minister of Public Works, died on Saturday at 9.40 p.m., after a long illness.

KITCHENER'S NEW ARMY WILL BE OF TEETOTALERS

LONDON, Oct. 14—Lord Roberts has said, "Give me a teetotal army, and I will lead it anywhere."

The dictum evidently appeals also to Lord Kitchener, for he has forbidden the forwarding of any presents of wine or spirits to the troops He allowed his men no spirits during his campaign in the Soudan, and the victory at Atbara was won on similar lines, for he sent back all the beer which had been ordered to the front for the soldiers.

It is very little realised what a hold temperance has on the British Army. Over twenty years ago the Royal Army Temperance Association now an officially recognized body, subsidized by the War Office, was started by Earl Roberts, who still remains the chairman of its council, and largely due to the labours of this association the old conception of "Tommy Atkins" as a hard-drinking beer-sodden, "ne'er-do-well" has had to be abandoned.

"Tommy" is now sober, intelligent, and well-behaved, and the morale of the Army has shown such a marked improvement in late years that the military prisons' vote decreased from £13,000, in 1909, to £500 in 1912, owing to the lesser number of men sent to these institutions. As a matter of fact "Tommy" cannot afford to drink now-a-days, if he wishes to make any thing like a success of his Army career. The physical training is so severe that the least over-indulgence in alcohol makes him unfit and, consequently, a less valuable soldier, and one who draws less pay than his more temperate companion.

Advantages of Sobriety.

The soldier is very quick to see the advantages of temperance. At every station abroad the British Army authorities provide well-fitted temperance rooms which the soldiers run themselves, and the profits made in these places go mostly to swell the Regimental Prize Funds, and to provide bonuses to the members of the R.A.T.A. when they leave the service and return to civil life.

At home there is not sufficient accommodation in many of the barracks to give such facilities, and the canteen system of catering prevents the temperance societies from catering for the wants of their members; but in all large stations palatial temperance institutes, such as the Smith-Dirrien institute at Aldershot, cater specially for the needs of the temperance soldier, and every encouragement is given him to use these comfortable and well-furnished buildings which are a great contrast to the canteen with its bare walls, rough tables and benches.

In India, 75 per cent. of the soldiers are members of the association, and in the Home Army, before the war, the proportion was over 50 per cent. In ordinary times no difficulty was experienced in keeping up this proportion and even, occasionally, exceeding it.

But when Kitchener's new army came into being the officers were faced with a huge body of men who had received no education in temperance principles and whose training, unless this were remedied, would be a lengthy and costly job. As the first step towards enforcing temperance on the men, the public houses in the vicinity of the temperance camps were closed for a greater part of the day and evening, exemplary punishments were meted out to offenders, and the R. A. T. A., at the instigation of the War Office, undertook a vigorous campaign to get the new men to take the pledge for the duration of the war.

Special Pledge Cards.

Small pledge cards, printed in blue and red, were issued, bearing on one side the pledge with a space for the name, regiment, and station of the man, and on the other side, in bold lettering, flanked by the Union Jack, are the words, "Don't ask me to take intoxicating liquors. I have decided to be a total abstainer on active service for my country."

Special representatives have been appointed by the Association to deal with the great masses of troops and facilities have been given them to carry on their temperance work in the new army. The result has been that Kitchener's men have signed the abstinence pledge in large numbers and it is more than likely, when the new army takes the field, it will be even more temperate than the Regulars it will meet at the front.

CAN INVADE CANADA.

Monroe Doctrine Is Inoperative, Declares Von Bernstorff.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24. — Germany's right to land tropos in Canada, if possible, and thus secure at least a temporary foothold on the American continent, was upheld yesterday by Count Von Bernstorff, German Ambassador here, who declared this would not be a violation of the Monroe doctrine. The Ambassador suggested that, as Canada was sending soldiers to Europe to fight against his country, the United States should not consider it in any sense an infringement on the Monroe doctrine if Germany should land an armed force on Canadian soil.

Discussing his now much talked of note of Sept. 3 to the State Department here, explaining the attitude of the German Government towards the Monroe doctrine, and giving assurances that Germany was not contemplating any South American colonization scheme in the event of victory over the allies the Ambassador said only South America was referred to at that time because there had never been any question raised as to possible German attempts to seek colonization in any other part of the American hemisphere.

MACK MAY NOT PLAY IN 1915

NEW YORK, Oct. 26. — When the Athletics take the field next year, it is reported, Connie Mack will not be on the bench directing the attacks of the former world's champions. The veteran, it is said, has obtained control of the Athletic club's stock and will be soon elected president instead of Benjamin F. Shibe. Mack is said to own 51 per cent. of the stock, having recently secured 1 per cent. from A. J. Reach, so the story goes. The tall manager is 54 years old and is beginning to show the wear and tear of his long career as a team leader. He has made a fortune out of the national game and can well afford to take a rest.

As president of the Athletics, Mack will have a grip on the helm, but Harry Davis, it is reported, will be the actual manager on the bench, with Ira Thomas as his right hand advisor. Davis was a failure as manager of the Cleveland Naps several years ago, but it is true that his heart wasn't in his work.

COLLEGIATE BEAT LINDSAY BY 9 TO 6

The Collegiate Institute Rugby team journeyed to Lindsay on Saturday and played their annual games with Lindsay Collegiate, winning after a hard-fought game, by 9 points to 6. The half-time score was 6 to 6. Knapman, the Collegiate quarterback, was out of the game with a twisted ankle and his place was taken by Art Huycke. Skuce of the Collegiate seconds played a fine game at outside wing.

SURVIVOR OF THE CRESSY KEPT HIMSELF AFLOAT IN THE NORTH SEA FOR HOURS

Grasped a Mess Table and Was Unconscious When Rescued—Comrade Rolled From the Float into Depths—Discipline of Men Superb.

SEA ALIVE WITH MEN

The following vivid story of the destruction of the three British cruisers, Cressy, Aboukir and Hogue in the North Sea on Sept. 22nd, 1914, is contained in a letter received by Mrs. J. H. Hargraves, 872 George Street, from her brother, W. K. McKerrow, an employee of the post office, Bradford, England. The information was obtained by the writer from a survivor of the ill-fated Cressy, W. Moore, A. B., an intimate friend of Mr. McKerrow and a fellow employee in the Bradford post office. The survivor was a naval reservist who was called out on the declaration of war. His story is tersely and modestly told. It will be noticed that he omitted many details as to what he personally did. However, he confines his recital to the principal details.

He says: "We, the Hogue, Aboukir and Cressy, were engaged in cruising in the North Sea on the morning of the 22nd of September, 1914, when we were attacked by what seemed to be a flotilla of German submarines. When the Hogue and the Aboukir were struck, we sent all our boats to their rescue, and also threw overboard everything possible which would help to save any man from going under.

"We thought that we were getting out of it all right, when we were rammed by a torpedo which pierced us below the water line in the forepart of the ship. I was sent to see the carpenter and ascertain the damage. When I was returning to give my message to the captain and I had arrived at the foot of the steps leading to the bridge, the ship was again struck in the engine room. Our captain calmly exclaimed, 'That's finished us! Now, it's each man for himself!'

"Not one of us seemed to realize any immediate danger until the ship began to keel over.

Dead and Dying Afloat

"By this time the water was alive with the dead and dying mixed up with wreckage from the other two ill-fated ships. We had no boats to look to as they had gone to help the others. Then I made up my mind to have a go for it, so I made a jump for the water. It was awful. Moans and cries on every side. I swam away from it all. When I looked around I spotted a sail which was a good long way off so I made for it. I thought that I would be picked up, but to my horror the boat actually turned around and went away. I afterwards learned that it was a German smack used as a covering party for the submarines.

Grabbed a Mess Form

"Anyway, I kept going, every now and then bumping up against wreckage or a big wave, came across a chap who seemed to be fairly comfortable on a mess form, so managed to get a chance by holding on to one leg of it. tried to cheer him up a bit, but he did not answer me. The look on his face was past all human description. After a while a chum of mine got hold of the other leg of the form, and we exchanged greetings. This put new life into both of us. But still we could not get an answer from our friend in the middle of us. Then we had a surprise. We were horrified to see the poor fellow roll over, and then topple to a watery grave. Poor chap! The bodies of our poor lost comrades were washed past by the dozen.

Became Unconscious

"I have no recollection of being picked up. The next thing I remember was on board the Titan. They told me that I was unconscious when rescued about 11.15 a.m. so that I must have been nearly four hours in a heavy sea."

Perfect Discipline

He concludes by saying that he could never have believed that a system of discipline could have been maintained when circcumstances like those arose if he had not been an actual living witness. The cool manner in which all orders were carried out was superb.

It becomes a fitting tribute (out of respect for those brave men who died at duty's post while trying to maintain the supremacy of the sea) for us to meet the needy circumstances by helping to eliminate the sufferings of those who are left behind to mourn their loss, and bare our heads and bow to those who still remain to uphold our National Supremacy.

French War Office Reports Victory Over Germans in Argonne--Three More Batteries Gone

PARIS, Oct. 26. — The chief announcement of the day in Paris concerns the hard fighting which is going on near Dixmude.

The following official communication was issued by the French War Office last night: "The action has continued under the same conditions as on preceding days. A battle of a very violent character is in progress between Nieuport and the River Lys. The German forces have succeeded in crossing the Yser between Nieuport and Dixmude."

"To the west end and south of Lille, spirited attacks by the enemy have been repulsed.

"Between the Oise and the Argonne there is nothing to report, except several small advances by our troops to the northwest of Soissons and in the region of Craonne.

"On the heights of the Meuse there is an artillery engagement. In the Woevre region our heavy artillery holds to-day under its fire the road connecting Thiacourt, Nonsard, Brussels and Jonville, which is one of the principal lines of communications of the Germans near St. Mihiel.

"It is reported that yesterday in the Argonne region an entire regiment of German infantry was annihilated during an operation which was extended to the wood to the north of La Chalade."

The Sunday afternoon French official communication follows: "There is no change to report between the sea and the region around Arras.

"In the Argonne region our situation is maintained under the conditions announced yesterday.

"On the upper Meuse our field artillery has destroyed three more German batteries, one of which was composed of guns of heavy calibre."

The last previous French official statement, issued late Saturday night, said that from the sea to the region to the south of Arras violent attacks of the Germans had been everywhere repulsed, and that "west of the Argonne region we have carried the Village of Marie-Louise, which commands the road leading from Varennes to the valley of the Aisne."

RUSSIANS HAVE DRIVEN THE ENEMY 40 MILES FROM WARSAW

Austrians Are Opposing the Russian Advance and Are Fighting Desperately—Czar's Troops Are Ready to Fight All Winter.

GERMANS WEAKENED

PETROGRAD, Oct. 26.—The Russian General staff yesterday issued the following statement:

"Our troops beyond the Vistula are pressing the armies of the enemy in full retreat. North of the Pilitsa river the Germans are offering only feeble resistance; they have been driven back as far as Skiernievice.

"South of the Pilitsa on the roads to Radom, we have forced the Austro-German rear guards who were attempting to hold positions along the Rivers Ravka, Skernevka and Rylka.

"Lovina, Skiernievice and Rawa were taken by day net attacks.

"The Austrians in retreat with the Germans on the roads below Radom, having received reinforcements, and profiting by the wooded and rolling character of the region, offered stubborn resistance to our offensive, which developed into an engagement of considerable dimensions. At that place we captured prisoners, cannon and rapid firers.

"Along the River San and south of Przemysl, desperate fighting continues. An attempt by the Austrians to turn the Russian left wing south of Przemysl failed, the Austrians suffering great losses."

It is declared that the nearest point to Warsaw held by the troops of the Kaiser and the dual monarchy is 40 miles distant from the Polish stronghold. Seemingly the Russian tactics in retiring to the Vistula and encouraging the Germans to attempt an assault on that city, have met with complete vindication. The invaders' lines are bent out of all semblance to a strong defensive, and both armies are declared reeling from the effects of Russian blows. The rejuvenated Austrian corps on the right wing are exposed to a particularly deadly fire and victory rests with Russian arms all along the front.

The steady advance of the cold season will greatly improve the position of the Russians. The Czar's troops are not only inured to cold weather of the worst kind, but actually joy in a temperature that would freeze the marrow of ordinary men. East Prussia, where it seems the next Russian drive will take shape, is a climate of exceptional hardship, and here the Germans will be called upon to face an advancing well provisioned and well satisfied army, in the rigors of an Arctic-like region.

Blacklister Incriminates Bartender

Wm. Quibell, a local blacklister, was the sole occupant of the police stations cells this morning. He was charged with being drunk while on the prohibited list. To the charge he pleaded guilty and was given the minimum fine of $10.

Then, according to the time-honoured custom he was put in the witness box and cross questioned by Chief Thompson as to the source of supply. Quibble swore that he got his liquor Saturday morning at 9 o'clock over a hotel bar. He was served by the bartender and bought two fifty-cent flasks of whiskey. One was of Scotch vintage, the consumption of which sufficed to produce the desired effect, so that when arrested the Canadian brand was still intact. Mr. Quibble said that "he took it for cramps."

In his evidence the witness incriminated the bartender on two counts. If his evidence was correct the bartender not only sold liquor to a blacklister, but sold it in flasks over the bar which is also a breach of the law. According to Quibble there was only one bartender in the bar when he was served.

TROUBLE FOR THOSE WHO REMOVE DIPTHERIA CARDS WITHOUT THE PERMISSION OF THE AUTHORITIES

Several cases have been reported to The Examiner wherein diphtheria cards have been removed from houses without the consent of the authorities and in one or two cases upon the alleged recommendation of attending physicians. A reporter asked Sanitary Inspector Spence if he was aware of this, and the reply came that he had full knowledge of them. Of one family it is stated that after their house had been placarded they went to their own physician and from him secured permission to remove the blue card. Recent outbreaks of the disease prove that it has by no means abated. The Medical Health Officer has been extremely busy attending to the epidemic, but the cooperation of all the citizens is required.

The Sanitary Inspector declares he will press for a prosecution of the next family that removes the card without properly authorized permission. It is understood that this applies to every case, and even while attending doctors have given their sanction to the removal of a card.

CANADA'S FLOUR GIFT BRUISED?

(By Canadian Press.)

LONDON, Oct. 23. — The Standard states that 250,000 bags of flour and 4,000,000 pounds of cheese, a war gift to the Mother Country from Canada has been lying on the London docks for the past two months because of the difficulty in discovering who is responsible for its handling. It has now been ascertained that the local Government board is responsible and its members are busy considering what is to be done with the food. It is possible that some of it will be given to the hungry Belgians in London.

DR. GORDON AND THE BOARD OF TRADE

Editor of The Examiner:

If Dr. Gordon's intention in addressing the Board of Trade on Wednesday is to attempt to galvanize that body into something approaching a living state, his efforts will be appreciated. However to be successful Dr. Gordon will have to bring into action heavier guns than a battery of epigrammatic platitudes. The Board presents possibilities unparalleled to to any sincere reformer.

Yours, etc.,

ELDER JOHNSTON ON THE REFORMATION

Another special theme was considered last evening by Elder F. W. Johnston, in the Woodmen Hall, in which was clearly seen in the relationship existing between the work of the Reformation of the 16th century, to the great religious systems in operation at the present time. The work of the Reformation, so the Elder declared, was truly a work of God. The reformers of that era emerged from the darkness that enshrouded the world for over a thousand years, and with the Bible in hand, depending wholly on God's power, they went forth undaunted to preach to darkened minds a truth that really shattered the ecclesiastical tyranny of the dark ages.

But, like many other movements, so the Elder declared, the work was incomplete, and that while the removed Luther proclaimed a few truths that shook the foundations of Rome; yet he, like all the other reformers ethat arose in various parts, committed the fatal mistake of retaining many errors that ought to have been left in the bosom of Rome. This, Mr. Johnston said, is the answer to a very common question as to why so many errors are extant in the Protestant world as infant baptism, the soul's immortality, a never-ending hell, etc., and all the many holy days that are still observed in Christendom. The work, so he said, that was began with the reformers, stopped short with these men, and instead of following it up with greater reformations as the Lord in heaven intended, the errors were retained and afterwards incorporated in the many creeds of Protestantism, and there they have remained ever since. Yes instead of progression in spiritual truth, we see, on the contrary, a very marked digression and a consequent drought in spirituality. Even the old man and woman are anxiously enquiring for the "old-time religion," and deplore the many things that are resorted to at present. The Church is not the place for suppers and bazaars, and the Lord never intended that a kitchen should be a necessary appendage to a place of worship. What we need is a clearing-up, so the Elder declared, and a general return to the teaching of the Bible. When this is brought about we will get what the world needs to keep them out of sin and this is none other than the power of God. A goodly crowd was present and listened with eager attention.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

THE J. M. GREENE CO., are pleased to announce, that after several years experience, handling the different makes of talking machines and watching the evolution that took place in the production and perfection of these marvelous musical instruments, we have arrived at the conclusion that the New Edison Diamond Disc is by far the greatest triumph yet produced in a sound reproducing instrument, and have decided to handle the Edison goods exclusively, convinced that our patrons will receive more real satisfaction and pleasure from the use of the Edison Diamond Disc or Cylinder Machines than from anything else we could sell them. We thoroughly believe this move is the best not only for our own interests but for those of our patrons. We must believe in the goods we sell before we recommend them to our customers, and to the Edison Diamond Disc Cabinet Machines and Amberolas, we can give our unqualified endorsement in every case. Sound reproduction by the Diamond Disc Machine is undoubtedly far superior to all previous achievements of Mr. Edison. No more needle changing. The reproducting point has a genuine diamond that never wears out and requires no changing. The Edison Diamond Disc Machines are bound to be the choice of discriminating music lovers in the end, thus we are following our principle—to offer the best only.

PUT WITHIN THE REACH OF ALL

WITH the advent of our adoption of the Edison goods exclusively, we want to give every home in Peterboro' and District a special opportunity to instal one of these magnificent instruments, whether they already have an Edison instrument of older style, or a talking machine of any other make already in the home or not. In case you have an instrument, which no doubt you have enjoyed in the past because it was good at the time you bought it, we will gladly take it as part payment on a New Edison Diamond Disc Amberola or Cabinet Machine, and make a liberal allowance for it. The balance we will arrange on the easiest possible terms of payment. Where there is no instrument of the kind in the home at present we will be pleased to place the instrument you may select from our splendid stock, in your home for a two or three days' demonstration, and in case of purchase can make the terms of payment most favourable and easy for anyone to handle. This Free Demonstration will put you under no obligation to buy whatever but is following out of the wish of Mr. Edison the great inventor, to see "an Edison in every home in Canada."

FREE DEMONSTRATION IN OUR TALKING MACHINE PARLOURS AT ANY TIME. LET US SHOW YOU.

MASS MEETINGS WERE LARGELY ATTENDED

Dr. Gordon Addressed Special Meeting For Men in the Afternoon and Conducted a Question Drawer in the Evening.

TO-NIGHT'S SUBJECT

The two special meetings in connection with the Citizenship Campaign, were held on Sunday, in the Grand Opera House. A meeting for men only, in the afternoon at four o'clock, and a general mass meeting at half-past eight o'clock in the evening; both services crowded the edifice to the doors. There were two thousand men present at the men's meeting at four o'clock.

Mr. Albert E. Greenlaw sang selections entitled "Ninety and Nine," "Would You Believe," and "Lord I'm Coming Home."

President Connal of the Young Men's Christian Association, made a brief address. Mr. E. O. Weber, chairman of the general Citizenship Campaign committee, presided. The address was of a confidential character, and had to do with the sacredness of the marriage relationship, and the purity of the home life. It was a great meeting and every available foot of legitimate ground and every seat and all standing room of the proper source, fully occupied. Several hundred young men were unable to gain admission.

At the meeting this evening, Mr. Edward Hesselberg, the eminent Russian Pianist, will render a number of his best selections, and Mr. Greenlaw will sing three songs, "Where the Sweetest Flowers Grow," a selection of his own composition, "A Clean Heart," and "Where is My Wandering Boy Tonight," the latter, by special request.

There has been such a demand for Dr. Gordon's booklet, entitled, "The Day When Everything Goes Wrong," that fifteen hundred additional copies will be distributed free, at the service this evening.

Last evening at half past eight o'clock, Dr. Gordon conducted a question drawer in the Grand Opera House, in the presence of the vast gathering. He answered the following practical and pertinent questions:

1st.—What percentage of wealthy church members are expelled from the church, when it is no secret, either to the ministers or the officials, that they live ungodly lives?

Dr. Gordon's opinion was, that the matter of church discipline in this generation was altogether too lax, and that any individual on the continent of North America, in possession of a million dollars, could command a position in social or ecclesiastical circles, and in some churches, might be able to command official positions.

2nd.—What would you say of an employer who gave a thousand dollars to charity, and cut down his men's wages fifty cents the next week? I should say that this was a mighty mean specimen of personal advertisement.

3rd.—Can a man tell the truth and succeed in business? The realm of business and the realm of baseness is as distinct, one from the other, as a full blooded African is distinct from a white man, in the colour of his skin, without any reflection upon either. When a man passes over from the realm of business to the realms of rascality, he can no longer be classed as a business man, for any man can make money, if he is disposed to ignore his God and fling his conscience overboard.

4th.—Would you accept a position as a bartender if you couldn't get any other kind of employment? It is hard to say what a man will do when his home is cold and his children starving, but so far as I am personally concerned, I would rather see myself in the poor house, family included, than have anything to do with the liquor traffic. The barroom is a national nuisance and an individual curse. You good Christian people will wake up to that fact some day.

5th.—Does not a man have to crucify his intellect in order to be a Christian? No. Christianity is the only religion in the world to-day that makes a personal and direct appeal to the human reason. Any man who knows enough to read and has read enough to know, knows this, if he knows anything at all, that the religion of Jesus Christ, rests upon the solid granite of historical fact. A man does not have to throw his brain overboard when he becomes a Christian.

6th.—Is Christianity the final religion, or will it be superseded by another? No. Nominal Christianity as we find it in the churches and in the community at the present hour will certainly be superseded. Nominal Christianity does not come within ten thousand miles of the ideals enthroned by Jesus Christ, but if you ask me if these ideals will ever be superseded, I answer, No. The world will never find anything better than the Bible, or the Sermon on the Mount.

7th.—Is there not a prejudice against the man in the business world, when his hair is growing grey? No, not if his ideas are progressive and he keeps himself modern and up to the times.

8th.—Has an unemployed man a moral right to take the job of a fellow worker who is on strike? No; not if the strike is justified.

9th.—Did you ever know a church to be run by one man, such as Eldon Parr, described in Winston Churchill's novel, "The Inside of the Cup?" Yes. I have known churches run by one man, sometimes a good man. Sometimes a bad man, but the average church is run by the preacher, and a church is what the preacher makes it.

10th.—Would you advise a man to go to church if he found the church services unbearably uninteresting? I would advise a man to go through all the churches of the community, Protestant and Catholic, and find the church that provides him with spiritual food, and the priest or minister who makes him an inspiration, and I would advise him to attend that church.

11th.—Would capitalists attend church in such large numbers if a genuine gospel was preached? If a genuine gospel was preached for the next fifty years in our churches, there would be neither prince nor pauper, capitalist or working men. The present competitive, economic system must inevitably give way and be supplanted by something better. Christianity must be interpreted in the terms of democracy, brotherhood, fraternity and equality. There is a good reason why the poor should be with us always.

12th.—Should a man obey an unjust law? John Ruskin says, "Obey a poor law until you find a better one." The man who is responsible for the making of a law, is the man who has the vote in his own hands. Many of the men who are complaining about the character of our laws, fail to vote on election day. When they do vote, it is because some interested politician sends a rig and drives them to the ballot box. The man who neglects to vote should have the ballot taken from his hands, and the crown of citizenship stricken from his brow. If things are not right in the community, it is the fault of the average man, and the average man is the poor man.

13th.—Can God answer prayer in a universe which is governed by law? The fact is, that God does answer prayer, and I presume that there are two classes of law in the universe. The lower laws and the higher laws. When God answers prayer, he operates in harmony with the higher law.

14th.—Is there any time in a man's life when it is too late to pray? Yes, it is too late for certain physical benefits, when a man has burned out the fusese of his body, by twenty years of modern drinking. It is small use to ask God to provide him with a new boy. Such prayer is never answered.

15th.—Are you here in Peterborough, speaking in the interest of capitalists? Come and hear me every night this week and come to your own conclusions.

Dr. Gordon will speak this evening in the George Street Methodist church, on "The Fashion Craze," or "The First Steps Downward in the Life of Shame."

A RUSSIAN MOTHER GIVES HER ONLY SON

Countess on Hearing News of His Death Became a Nurse

PETROGRAD, Oct. 22.—With the closing of the cafes and theatres at 11 p.m. Petrograd wears a very deserted look. Countess Shouvaloffe, a most pathetic figure, left Petrograd the other day with the Red Cross. She had an only son. As he was not of age, it was not compulsory for him to serve with the first army, but the mother expressed a wish that he should take the first opportunity of serving his country. He fought in three battles, and was killed before Konigsberg. On hearing of his death the countess volunteered as a nurse, was accepted, and is now at the front. One hears many stories of adventure from Englishmen who, at the outbreak of war, were in business in East Prussia. One, an army reserve officer, arrived here by motor car. Leaving hurriedly, he forgot his passport, and on entering Russian territory he met a party of Cossacks. The officer had no passport, and the Cossack officer at once wrote the following: The bearer is an English officer, returning to fight for his country—our ally. Assist him all you can. The permit enabled him to reach Petrograd safely, and he is on his way to England.

SOWED WHEAT IN TULIP BEDS

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Would you kindly in form, through the medium of the Examiner, the gentleman who has kindly sown some wheat on the freshly planted tulip beds on the Victoria Park, that if he will meet me at 10 a.m. on Tuesday, I will show him the other beds he could sow, as he evidently thinks that wheat and tulips will go well together, and we are unable to get the same grade of wheat anywhere else.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I remain,

Yours, etc.,
W. Godfrey,
Park Keeper.

URGED PEOPLE TO ASSIST THE AUTHORITIES

Urging the members of the Sacred Heart Parish to cooperate to the fullest extent with the City's health authorities in combating diphtheria, Rev. J. J. O'Brien yesterday incidentally referred to the manner in which the Health Department was performing its work. The Pastor of the Sacred Heart Church commented particularly upon the energy shown by Doctor McPherson and declared that the City's officials should be given every assistance. If any symptoms of diphtheria were shown in any family immediate notification should be given to the proper authorities. Above all, Father O'Brien deprecated an attempt to hide the disease because of placarding or other reasons.

Many interested parents and friends watched the events carried on, and all were highly pleased with the outcome of such a competition. ROBERTS AT SALISBURY.

He Pays a Four Hour Visit to the Canadian Contingent Camps.

LONDON, Oct. 26.—Lord Roberts made his round of Salisbury camps in almost uninterrupted rain. His stay extended over four hours, during which the officers of every brigade came under his notice, several battalions also parading for inspection. Before leaving camp the veteran soldier expressed his keen pleasure at everything that he has seen. He extended his congratulations to Divisional Staff Bishop Taylor Smith, chaplain general of the forces. On his visit to the camp, he was attended by Major Stacy, divisional chaplain.

Services were held at Bustard, west, down south, but owing to the wet, there was no parade, services being held in the marquees.

NORTH BAY, Oct. 26.—Mrs. Chipperreau, an Italian woman living in North Bay, murdered her two children in the early hours of Saturday morning by drowning them in the well which supplies water to the Chipperreau home. Must Behave In Antwerp.

LONDON, Oct. 26.—The military commander of Antwerp, Maj.-Gen. Von Dodenhausen, has issued a proclamation which also bears the signature of Burgomaster Deves, instructing all German troops that they must not commandeer whatsoever, the privilege being confined only to officers, and may be used by them only in cases of military expediency. Soldiers are explicitly forbidden to break into shops or in any way abuse the populace. Antwerp, says the proclamation, was only surrendered on the understanding that the troops would not misuse their power.

How Asphalt Is Obtained

Many people who watch the process of making asphalt streets in cities, have very indistinct notions of how this asphalt is obtained. Very few people know that nearly all the asphalt used in this country comes from the island of Trinidad near the coast of Venezuela. On that island there is a lake of asphalt that seems to be practically inexhaustible.

From a recent description of this lake we take the following items:

The "lake" covers 114 acres, and doubtless contains an inexhaustible supply, for as fast as bitumen is extracted, the holes from which it is taken fill up, a perpetual movement or encroachment which is very satisfactory to the asphalt company and to the Trinidad government.

The surface of this so-called lake is quite smooth except for what might be called streams of water from two to twelve feet wide, and from one to five feet deep, that appear in several places. We walked on the surface and found it about as hard as the ordinary asphalt street on a hot summer day. There are some places near the centre of the lake where the asphalt is in a more liquid state, and standing here the shoe slowly sinks in. This pitch, which is really asphaltum, is practically in the pure state.

The asphalt refinery is at the bottom, and at the very edge of the lake itself. This lake has been described by imaginative persons as a possible inferno, a place of insufferable heat and fetid vapours. Probably the narrators never had seen the lake, and so described what they thought a pool of liquid pitch ought to be like. Much of the time a fresh breeze blows and you remember with amusement the reports of stifling heat and oppressive atmosphere. These all return to you, however, if you are unfortunate enough to get into a place sheltered from the breeze and exposed to the sun, for the thermometer stands at 90 degrees or more during several hours of almost every day.

PEKIN, October 26.—Reports reaching the Japanese legation here, declare that an Austrian cruiser which took refuge in the harbour at Kiao-Chau at the outbreak of the war, has been sunk by the Japanese heavy artillery posted on the hills near the harbour mouth..

LONDON, October 26, (Noon, London time.)—From England's southeastern foreland this morning comes the news that the firing of big guns, either on land or sea, can be distinctly heard there this morning. The war office has made no report up to this hour, but all the newspaper correspondents intimate that the allies have the situation well in hand in North France.

PEKIN, China, October 26.—The Chinese foreign minister has demanded the surrender of the Japanese torpedo boat with its crew which entered Chinese waters and substituted the Japanese flag for the Chinese dragon, and attempted to tow away the wrecked torpedo boat 890.

LONDON, October 26.—"Advices from the front this morning," telegraphs the Paris correspondent of the Reuters Telegraph Co., "indicate a general allied advance in the region between Nieuport and Ypres, as well as to the east of Arras."

French Execute Thousands of the Kaiser's Army of Spies

Thirty Thousand of Its Agents Overran France at the Beginning of the War—400 Discovered in Rheims Alone.

PARIS, Oct. 26.—I learn from a well-informed source that there were 30,000 professional German spies in France at the outbreak of the war, and on these the kaiser spent, according to official figures, $3,900,000 a year. Such a system of espionage the world has never seen before.

And they have suffered horribly. By hundreds and by thousands they have been detected and shot. In the last two months no incident has been commoner than to see a bogus commercial traveller, or shepherd, or gentleman, pushed up against a wall with a handkerchief across his eyes and a row of Lebel rifles levelled at him from ten feet away.

Two Captured by Cyclists.

A few days ago I saw two men in chains walking through puddles on the Chalons road with a couple of gendarmes on bicycles behind them. One prisoner was in overalls, which is a common spy disguise, while the other was in the uniform of a French private. He was a blond North German and his face probably had betrayed him. The two were marching to certain death.

I learn that when the Germans retreat they often leave behind man speaking French well, who await the arrival of the French and then try to creep up to the German lines with a report.

In Rheims alone, according to an account, they have discovered 400 spies. The champagne industry of course employed very many, and nearly all the spies who have been taken had lived in the district.

It is believed by the authorities of the Town that while the bombardment of Rheims was going on there were spies in the City with a secret wireless installation who sent directions for fire control to the batteries three miles away. A close search has been made through the town, but the police have not been able to discover where the installation, if it does exist, was mounted.

Organized by Stieber.

It was Stieber, who, when King Frederick William was ready for his march on France, had strewn with 20,000 spies the road from Paris to Berlin. This methodical organization—brilliant in conception—embraced a host of farmers, market gardeners, agricultural labourers, vine growers, commercial travellers, tutors, non-commissioned officers in retirement, nice-looking widows at the desks of cafes and restaurants and several thousand of agreeable waitresses and chambermaids and governesses in beer halls, hotels and private houses. All these were, in fact, the second army of 1870.

They had arrived in France one at a time, two at a time, three at a time, long before battle was joined; and, under Stieber's directions, had furnished thousands of secret reports concerning every district that the German army was to traverse.

M. Paul Nanoir, in a remarkable brochure, "The German Spy System in France, says "It constituted the first example in the history of war of the scientific and methodical organization of an espionage service placed directly and continuously at the service of the combatant army.

MILITARY HYGIENE AND SANITATION

It may appear absurd to speak of the conservation of human life, at a time when almost the entire continent of Europe is engaged in a relentless struggle. Modern military equipment and methods are expressly designed to waste human life and it appears inevitable that so long as nations continue to resort to arms for redress of real or fancied wrongs, so long will periodic outrages of the race recur. Nevertheless, much of the sacrifice to Mars that has blotted the record of the ages has been wholly unnecessary, and might have been avoided had military leaders exercised even the most rudimentary precautionary measures in respect to the care of troops in the field. During most of the great European wars, fever and cholera more than the bullet and the bayonet have thinned the ranks and swept away entire regiments. To check this loss, a pure waste from the point of view of military efficiency as well as from that of humanity, the new science of military sanitation has developed, not yet perfected by any means, but following and paralleling the progress of civil hygiene. Referring to the practice of this science, one may, therefore, speak of conservation of life even in the throes of war and leaders now endeavour to offset the cruel slaughter of the battlefield by minimizing the terrible drain of life due to the fault of cause and commissariat. The sanitary service of an army must reach the acme of efficiency and make all efforts to furnish soldiers with pure food and water, proper and sufficient clothing, and well located and drained encampments, especially when it is necessary to go into winter quarters.

Gen. Sir Horace L. Smith-Dorrien's introduction to the "Handbook of Military Sanitation" furnishes some striking information and data which illustrates just to what extent the toll of life exacted by warfare may be decreased. It is pointed out that, even as late as the history of modern warfare as the South African war, twenty times as many hospital patients were treated for two diseases alone, namely, enteric fever and dysentery, as for wounds, injuries, and accidents combined. During the Russian-Japanese struggle, however, the excellent management of the Japanese army marked a decided improvement in the care of troops in the field, and it is to be hoped that the same satisfactory conditions will characterize all succeeding struggles of nations.

If wars must occur, many human lives must be lost. While that part of the loss which is due to disease can be minimized, too much cannot be expected in view of the restrictions upon canitary methods necessarily imposed by campaign contingencies. Nevertheless, that government which fails to take every possible precaution and preventive measure is guilty of the wilful sacrifice of the nation's best blood.

HOME TEST FOR DIRT IN MILK

The following is a simple home test for dirty milk which it might be well for the housewives of Canada to apply. A perfectly clean funnel is used with a small piece of clean wire netting fitted in the neck opening, and a thin layer of clean cotton batting on the wire netting. The funnel is then stood in a large jar and a quart of the milk filtered through the cotton. The cotton is then removed and placed on clean white card to dry. If there is evidences of dirt upon it the attention of the milkman may be called to this direct evidence of careless handling and if the trouble persists the local health authorities may well be notified.—Conservation.

KAISER DETERMINED THAT CALAIS MUST BE TAKEN NO MATTER WHAT COST MAY BE

The Channel Port, He Declares, is Necessary to Plans—Orders Issued for Advance Upon it Follows Consultation With His Officers in Belgium—Disregard of Men and Materials Required for the Action.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Oct. 27.—The Copenhagen correspondent of the Times wires that reports received there from German sources say that the Kaiser has issued directions that no matter what cost Calais is to be taken. It is reported the Kaiser was in Belgium on Sunday and listened personally to reports of his officers. He is then reported to have stated that the occupancy of Calais and Dunkirk were necessary points in gaining strategy, and that this was especially so in the case of Calais. Therefore, the order was issued that no matter how much war materials were sacrificed, the march to the channel must succeed.

MORE OFFENSIVE ATTEMPTS FAIL

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, Oct. 27.—It was officially announced to-day that several more attempts on the part of the Germans and Austrians to resume the offensive have failed. The Germans, it is stated, are endeavouring to entrench cover on their artillery, but the Russians continue to harrass them inflicting heavy losses.

TURKS DRIVE GREEKS FROM VILLAGES

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—A letter received by John Manoussou, a Greek living in this city, brings to the Greeks here a story such as must have reached the French when the inhabitants were driven from Acadia. This time the Turks are the aggressors and the Greeks have been forced to leave their homes and farms in and around the little village of Renkioi, in Turkey. With only such personal belongings as they could take with them, they were hurried to the coast, where they are being kept awaiting transportation to Greece.

When the soldiers first came to eject the inhabitants, according to the story sent to Mr. Manoussou, the women of the town objected and backed up their objections by throwing stones. Then the guns of the fort were turned on the town and three shells were fired into it. At this the Greeks hastened to obey the commands. The letter, sent to Mr. Manoussou from the Dardanelles by an American friend in this city, says:

"The enclosed letter will tell you what has happened at your beloved village of Renkioi. All the inhabitants were turned out of their homes at a moment's notice and brought down to the Quarantine, where they have been waiting for two days for steamers to take them to Greece. Yesterday I went to the Quarantine to see them and found them sitting on the sand by the sea without any protection from the weather.

"They were allowed to take some things, but their furniture was left behind. The Turkish officials seized all the grain the villagers left in their houses and took away all their animals and sold them, so the poor people are quite ruined. A steamer came and took away 1,200 Renkioits; the rest are still waiting on the seashore."

Mr. Manoussou explained that the above letter was from an American living on the Dardanelles and said that his father had been clerk in the American Consulate there for thirty-five years.

SOLID LINE OF GERMAN DEAD MORE THAN A MILE IN LENGTH

PARIS, Oct. 26.—Fearful slaughter of Germans in the Argonne district is recorded in despatches reaching here to-night. They say:

"A French infantry regiment and a battalion of Chasseurs were strongly intrenched, with orders to hold an important strategic highway. Four German columns, comprising 15,000 men, stormed the trenches with the bayonet.

"We had five quick-firing gun sections. Simultaneously all spurted fire. The German mass rocked beneath the devastating fusillade. It was horrible to see them fall in solid masses. The speed of our mitrailleuses was 600 shot a minute. Under the incessant fire they grew white hot.

"Unchecked by the awful carnage, the Germans came on in solid formation. We had no need to take aim, but just plugged at the mass, certain that every shot told. We were unable, however, to stem the Teutonic flood. They reached our trenches and a hand-to-hand bayonet encounter ensued. This phase of battle lasted five hours, then our artillery got to work. The Germans retreated, only to recharge.

"So frightful was the fire that a solid line of dead a mile long lay 400 yards from our trenches. The corpses were so thick there was not room to place your foot anywhere along the line. Many Germans were killed on the parapet of the trenches. Some of them were found leaning dead on their rifles. Their total losses must have

Germans Retreat 75 Miles

THE OFFICIAL REPORT

London, October 26.—In the eastern scene of operations the Russians continue a successful offensive against the Austro-Germanic armies in Poland and Galicia. The flight of the Germans from before Warsaw and Ivangorod continues and latest despatches indicate that the enemy has now fallen back seventy-five miles from Warsaw, driven with the bayonet from every place where he endeavours to check the Russian advance.

An official despatch from Petrograd, issued this afternoon, says:

"The precipitate flight of the Germans continues. They are seventy-five miles west south-west of Warsaw. They made an unsuccessful attempt to arrest the offensive Russian movement by clinging to positons at Sokhatchoff, from which, however, they were dislodged with heavy losses."

To-night the following Russian official despatch was received:

"The combats upon the routes leading to Piotrkow and Radom have assumed the character of a great battle, of which the front extends over thirty miles, from Rawa to Nowemiasto and Bialobrzegi, as far as the mouth of the River Iljanka.

"The evening of October 24 north of Rawa we attacked the Germans at the point of the bayonet, inflicting upon them considerable losses. In the village of Morchildo alone we buried over seven hundred Germans.

"In a bayonet combat near the village of Mazsmerjeff we captured two batteries of machine guns.

"Our troops command the forest of Nemglovo, southeast of Rawa, where we took over 400 prisoners. In the forest between Radom and Kozenitz tenacious combats continue.

"We have progressed along the routes from Nova to Alexandria, where we captured numerous prisoners and cannon.

"The stubborn resistance of the Austrians in Galicia is weakening and our troops are making vigorous progress in the region south of Sambor and Starmiasto, where we took eleven cannons and many caissons.

"The entire valley of the River Spryne is covered with the bodies of the enemy, estimated to aggregate at least 5,000.

"All attempts by the Germans to resume a partial offensive on the eastern Prussian front have been repelled."

An Austrian report from Vienna claims that north-east of Przemysl and on the lower San the Austrians have had several successes.

THE WEATHER

This morning the thermometer was down to 19 degrees, and this temperature together with a little snow on the ground, made it look as if winter had arrived. We should, however, have some weeks of good weather yet. Last October, the thermometer went below the freezing point on the 14th, 22nd and 31st, and the ground was covered with snow for the first time on November 10th. This will be remembered as the date of a terrific gale on the upper lakes when a number of vessels were wrecked and several hundred seamen lost their lives. Winter, however, did not set in until December 8th; first zero weather was experienced on December 27th.—W.P.

GLOOM IN GERMANY AS NEWS OF REVERSES TRICKLE FROM FRONT

Amsterdam Report Says Losses in the Field Have Been Appalling—Half the Casualties Said to Have Been Fatal—Inactivity of the Fleet Arouses Bitter Disappointment.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 26.—Germany's gloom increases. The boisterous gaiety of the earliest stages of the war is being rapidly replaced by a subdued sobriety intermingled with the lowest depths of depression. Bad news travels quickly and now something of the truth of the position is beginning to dawn upon the Kaiser's subjects. The retreat of the German armies in France is known everywhere besides in the capital, and the comments of the more independent newspapers, cautious as they are, can leave no doubt in the minds of those who read between the lines.

The elaborate organization created by the German government to disseminate distorted news for their own purposes is not efficient enough to conceal all the facts from all the German people. So many tens of thousands have received a notification from the military authorities of the death on some distant battlefield of a son or a husband; so many hundreds of thousands have learned that one of their family has been wounded in action. The wounded soldiers, too, have come home, and they talked in whispers perhaps, but still they have made their meaning clear. There are countless channels through which information has come into the interior of Germany, notwithstanding all efforts to conceal the real situation.

The losses of the German armies have been appalling in their immensity. One of the features of the losses has been the proportion of killed as compared with the number of wounded. When the allied armies have five or six wounded men for every soldier killed, the proportion of those killed among the German casualties is nearly one half the total.

After careful examination of all the available lists of German casualties, and after comparing and weighing up information derived from specially well informed quarters in Germany, it seems easy to estimate that about a quarter of a million of the pick of Germany's men have perished on the battle fields of Belgium and France, of East Prussia and Galicia.

High Percentage of Killed.

The killed and wounded together doubtless exceed half a million, and probably fully six hundred thousand. These may appear startling figures, but the slaughter has been so relentless that the sacrifice of German soldiers so utterly callous that there is little reason to doubt that they are substantially accurate. There were places of retreat from the Marne where the German troops marched over heaps of their own dead; there were fields which were quickly strewn with the German victims of the war; there were trenches filled to the brim and overflowing with the bodies of the Kaiser's finest soldiers. Along one stretch of road north of the Marne the bodies of Germans were so thickly clustered together than their artillery and military waggons dashed right over and through them in the mad haste of retreat. In advancing and in retiring I am told the Germans suffered losses unprecedented in the annals of warfare.

It is a curious fact that the disposal of the bodies has given rise to ominous mutterings of rebellious discontent in many German families. One would imagine that the fact of being killed is in itself sufficient to make the relatives forget the details of the burial. But it is not so. It has become known to many German fathers and mothers and wives that huge bonfires were kindled in which hundreds and thousands of the bodies of Germany's soldiers were cremated wholesale, and the crude yet eminently scientific treatment has excited deep resentment. It has been useless to argue that wholesale cremation was the only possible sanitary method of procedure.

Fleet's Failure Rankles.

But nothing has caused so much surprise in Germany as the inactivity of the great German fleet. For many years the power of the German navy has been extolled by all the orators in the country, from the Kaiser to the pan-Germanic teachers in elementary schools; its great value to Germany has been asserted, its menace to Great Britain extolled. The great masses of the German people fully expected that it would at least hold the British navy in check, and many of them expected sensational maritime victories over the traditional rulers of the waves. Many experts reckoned with certainty that Great Britain would never send a substantial expeditionary force to France so long as the German fleet was in being. The national chagrin at the failure of the grand German fleet to do little more than conceal itself in German fortified harbours is almost pathetic.

If the Kaiser and his General Staff had been successful they would have carried the nation with them. The malcontents and the doubters would have been swept along in the wave of patriotic enthusiasm raised by the aggressive pride of victory. But the Germans are beginning to feel that they have been duped and misled by their rulers, and signs are beginning to manifest themselves that they will voice their resentment vigorously.

It is rumoured that unemployment in Germany increases and distress grows. The murmurs of the people, however, are not yet articulate and hardly audible; they resemble the first low, ominous growl of a savage dog.

FAMINE FACES NEARLY SEVEN MILLIONS OF BELGIAN PEOPLE

BRUSSELS, Oct. 26.—Nearly 7,000,000 people in Belgium face famine unless they receive help from the outside at once. The American Minister to Belgium says that less than two weeks' supply of food remains in the cities, while conditions in the country districts are even worse. Though Germany has seized the food in some cities for her soldiers she still disclaims responsibility for feeding the Belgians.

One hundred soup kitchens are feeding over 100,000 of the needy in Brussels. Families formerly rich are discharging their servants because they are bankrupt. Noblemen may be seen slipping into the soup kitchens. The factories are closed. Many stores remain open but have no business. The street cars are being operated, but the railway train service has been suspended. The supplies of coffee, tea, flour, rye, and salt are practically exhausted.

Reports received by the American Minister from Louvain, Liege and Namur say that the conditions in those cities are even worse than they are in Brussels. Louvain has only a four days' supply of flour, while Liege has no flour at all. The peasants in many districts have been forced to exist on legumes, as the crops of beets and cabbages have been ruined.

MODEL FOR WAR GROUP DIES WHEN HER SON IS SLAIN

Real Tragedy Behind "The Mother of the Dead," to Be Shown

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—One of the most striking gifts to the art exposition for the benefit of the European war sufferers, which will begin on Wednesday afternoon and last until 10th November, in the Pietro Studios, 220 Fifth Avenue, is the donation by C. S. Pietro of a bronze group entitled "The Mother of the Dead." The exposition is to be held under the auspices of a board of sponsors headed by William H. Taft and Mayor Mitchel.

"The Mother of the Dead" shows an aged peasant mother, with her grandchild by her side, seated in an attitude of despair and hopeless loss resultant from the tragic desolation wrought by the war. There is no wild-eyed, revengeful or maddening expression in the figures. The dignity and simplicity of the aged woman express the saddened soul and the broken heart. She seems to speak through her sadness—alone, aged, all her children lost in battle or killed protecting the home, with nothing to live for in this world. There are no tears. It is too awful for tears. And then the little child—helpless like its poor, broken grandmother. The child's expression seems to ask why should such sorrow come.

A pathetic incident in the making of this inspired work by Mr. Pietro was the death of the model. The aged woman grieved so much over the European conflict that it killed her. Two sons on the battlefield and the word that one had been killed broke her heart and spirit.

What is believed to be the largest Armoury in the world, having a floor 300 by 600 feet, is being erected in New York for a National Guard Regiment.

GERMAN SAYS HIS COUNTRY IN THE WRONG

(From the New York Times.)

To the Editor of the New York Times,—I have waited in vain till now for a real German to speak to the world. There have been a great number of missive from so-called representatives of my people who have been befogging the issue with all kinds of bigoted rot. The time has come for the truth to out—and out it will. I am a German by birth, have lived many years in the Fatherland, and know the spirit of the German people. The great majority of them are peace-loving. They despise militarism. The war party does not represent them. It represents only a large number of fat politicians and military supply contractors. The present war was "made in Germany" by the Kaiser, aided by the war party.

We Germans who have thought deeply about the European holocaust know and feel that we are in the wrong. We shudder at the crimes committed in the name of the German people by the war clique. We shudder to think of the odium our people must live down—of the explanations they will have to give shamefacedly to posterity. Why don't German-Americans admit that they are wrong in the war? They know it. America knows it. Germany knows it. The world knows it. As yet no German has had the courage to rise up and tell the world the truth.

"DARKNESS AND DAWN"

By Geo. Allan England

"Cloth! Torn! But—but there—!"

He flung from him the bit of the girl's cloak which, ripped and shredded as though by a powerful hand, cried disaster.

"Beatrice!" he shouted. "Where are you? Beatrice!"

To the doorway in the cliff he ran, shaken and trembling.

The stone had been pushed away; it lay inside thecave. Ominously the blanck entrance seemed staring at him in the dull gleam of the firelight.

On hands and knees he fell, and hastily crawled through. As he went, he flashed his lamp here, there, and everywhere.

"Beatrice! Beatrice!"

No answer.

In the far corner still flickered some remainder of the cooking fire. But there, too, ashes and half burned sticks lay scattered all about.

To the bed he ran. It was empty and cold.

"Beatrice! Oh, my God!"

A glint of something metallic on the floor drew his bewildered, terror-smitten gaze.

He sprang, seized the object, and for a moment stood staring, while all about him the very universe seemed thundering and crashing down.

The object in his hand was the girl's gun. One cartridge, and only one, had been exploded.

The barrel had been twisted almost off, as though by the wrenching clutch of a hand inhuman in its ghastly power.

On the stock, distinctly nicked into the hard rubber as Stern held the flash-light to it, were the unmistakable imprints of teeth.

With a groan, Allan started backward. The revolver fell with a clatter to the cave floor.

His foot slid in something wet, something sticky.

"Blood!" he gasped.

Half-crazed, he reeled toward the door.

The flash-lamp in his hand flung its white brush of radiance along the wall.

With a chattering cry he recoiled.

There, roughly yet unmistakably imprinted on the white limestone surface, he saw the print, in crimson, of a huge, a horrible, a brutally distorted hand.

CHAPTER XIV.
ON THE TRAIL OF THE MONSTER.

Stern's cry of horror as he scrambled from the ravaged desecrated cave, and the ghastly horror of his face, seen by the firelight, brought Zangamon and Bremilu to him, in terror.

"Master! Master! What—"

"My God! The girl—she's gone!" he stammered, leaning against the cliff in mortal anguish.

"Gone, master? Where?"

"Gone! Dead, perhaps! Find her for me! Find her! You can see—in the dark! I—I am as though blind! Quick, on the trail!"

"But tell us—"

"Something has taken her! Some savage thing! Some wild man! Even now he may be killing her! Quick—after them!"

Bremilu stood staring for a moment, unable to grasp this catastrophe on the very moment of arrival. But Zangamon, of swifter wit, had already fallen on his knees, there by the mouth of the cave, and now—seeing clearly by the dim light which more than sufficed for him—was studying the traces of the trouble.

Stern, meanwhile, clutching his head between both hands, dumb-mad with agony, was choking with dry sobs.

"Master! See!"

Zangamon held up a piece of pine scarred by teeth.

Stern snatched it.

"Part of the pole I gave her to brace the rock with," he realized. "Even that was of no avail."

"Master—this way they went!"

Zangamon pointed up along the rock-terrace. Stern's eyes could distinguish no slightest trace on the stone, but the Merucaan spoke with certainty. He added.

"There was fighting, all the way along here, master. And then, here, the girl was dragged."

Stern stumbled blindly after him as he led the way.

"There was fighting here? She struggled?"

"Yes, master."

"Thank God! She was alive here, anyhow! She wasn't killed in the cave. Maybe, in the open, she might—"

"Now there is no more fighting master. The wild thing carried her."

He pointed at the rock. Stern, trembling and very sick, flashed his electric lamp upon it. iWth eyes of dread and horror he looked for blood-stains.

What? A drop! With a dull, shuddering groan, he pressed forward again.

Out he jerked his pistol and fired, straight up, their pre-arranged signal: One shot, then a pause, then two. Some bare possibility existed and that she still might live and hear and know that rescue came—if it could come before it were eternally too late!

"On, on!" cried Allan. "Go on, Zangamon! Quick! Lead me on the trail!"

The Merucaan, now aided by Bremilu, who had recovered his wits, scouted ahead like a bloodhound on the spoor of a fugitive. One gripped his stone axe, the other a javelin.

Bent half double, scrutinizing in the dark the stony path which Allan followed behind them only by the aid of his flash, they proceeded cautiously up toward the brow of the cliff again.

But ere they reached the top they branched off on to another lateral path, still rougher and more tortuous, that led along the breast of the canyon.

"This way, master. It was here, most surely, the thing carried her."

"What kind of marks? Do you see signs of claws?"

"Claws? What are claws?"

"Sharp, long nails, like our nails, only much larger and longer. Do you see any such marks?"

Zangamon paused a second to peer.

"I seem to see marks as of hands, master, but—"

"No matter! On! We must find her! Quick—lead the way!"

Five minutes of agonizing suspense for Allan brought him, still following the guides, without whom all would have been utterly lost, to a kind of thickly wooded dell that descended sharply to the edge of the canyon. Into this the trail led.

Even he himself could now here and there make out, by the aid of his light, a broken twig, trampled ferns, and down-crushed grass. Once he distinguished a bloodstain on a limb—fresh blood, not coagulated. A groan burst from between his chattering teeth.

He turned his light on the grass beneath. All at once a blade moved.

"Oh, thank God!" he whensed. "They passed here only a few minutes ago. They can't be far away now!"

Something drew his attention. He snatched at a sapling.

"Hair!"

Caught in a roughness of the bark, a few short, stiff, wiry-hairs, reddish brown, were twisted.

"One of the Horde!" he stammered.

A lightning flash of memory carried him back to Madison Forest, more than a year ago. He seemed to see again the Obeah, as that monster advanced upon the girl, clutching supremely hideous.

"The hair! The same kind of hair! In the power of the Horde!" he gasped.

A mental picture of extermination flashed before his mind's eye. Whether the girl lived or died, he kenw now that his life work was to include a total slaughter of the Anthripods. The destruction he had already wrought among them was but child's play to what would be.

And in his soul flamed the foreknowledge of a hunt a l'outrance, to the bitter end. So long as one, a single one of that foul breed should live, he would not rest from killing.

"Master! This way! Here, master!"

The voice of Zangamon sent him once more crashing through the jungle, after his questing guides. Again he fired the signal-shot, and now with the full power of his lungs he yelled.

His voice rang, echoing, through the black and tangled growths, startling the night-life of the depths. Something chippered overhead. Near-by a serpent slid away, hissing venomously. Death lurked on every hand.

Stern took no thought of it, but pressed forward, shouting the girl's name, hallooing, beating down the undergrowth with mad fury. And here, there, all about he flung the light-beam.

Perhaps she might yet hear his hails; perhaps she might even catch some distant glimmer of his light, and know that help was coming, that rescuers were fighting onward to her.

Silent, lithe, confident even among these new and terribly strange conditions, the two men of the Folk slid through the jungle.

No hounds ever trailed fugitive more surely and with greater skill than these strange, white barbarians from the underworld. Through all his fear and agony, Stern blessed their courage and their skill.

"Men, by God! They're men!" he muttered, as he thrashed his painful way behind them in the night.

Of a sudden, there somewhere ahead, far ahead in the wilderness—a cry?

Allan stopped short, his heart leaping.

Again he fired, and his voice set all the echoes ringing.

A cry! He knew it now. There could be no mistake—a cry!

"Beatrice!" he shouted in a terrible voice, leaping forward. The guides broke into a crouching run. All three crashed through the thickets, split the fern-masses, struggled through the tall sabre-grass that here and there rose higher than their heads.

Allan cursed himself for a fool. That other cry he had heard while on his way from the Pauillac to Settlement Cliffs—that had been her cry for help—and he had neither known nor heeded.

"Fool that I was! Oh, idiot that I was!" he panted as he ran.

(To be continued.)

IOWA WOMAN TELLS OTHERS

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Carried Her Safely Through Change of Life.

Cedar Rapids, Iowa.—"At the Change of Life the doctor said I would have to give up my work and take my bed for some time as there was no help for me but to lie still. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and kept up my work and now I am over the Change and that is all I took. It was better for me than all the doctor's medicines I tried. Many people have no faith in patent medicines but I know this is good."—Mrs. E. J. RICKETS, 354 8th Avenue, West, Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness, are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when woman's great change may be expected.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system. It has carried many women safely through this crisis.

Found a Friend In Dr. Chase

His Medicines Proven Effective, and Always Kept at Hand in This Home.

Mrs. Chas. Lovell, Agassiz, B. C., writes:—"I feel it my duty to tell you what a great friend Dr. Chase's medicines have been to myself and family. I cannot praise his medicines too highly, and Dr. Chase's name is a household word in our home. Well, quite a number of years ago I sent to you for a sample box of Dr. Chase's Ointment for protruding piles, and, having used the sample and found relief, I sent to a neighbouring town for four boxes, and I am completely cured.

"I have also used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for constipation, and, after using them, I am completely cured of this dreadful disease. I am the mother of ten children, of whom nine are living, and when seven of my children were all very bad with whooping cough, caught in the middle of a severe winter, I used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and they were all cured before the winter was over, and now we are never without Dr. Chase's medicines in our home, and I recommend them to all."

FRANCE BUYING 100,000 HORSES IN AMERICA

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—Representatives of the French Government have started in to buy 100,000 horses and mules in the West, according to reports from St. Louis. Wm. Post & Son, of East Williston, L. I., and S. T. Harbison & Co., of Lexington, Ky., are working with representatives of the French army to execute the order. It is said that they have purchased something like 14,000 horses to date. As the average price paid for army horses is about $125, the purchase of 100,000 head would mean an expenditure of $12,000,000 or more.

With the war in Europe less than three months old the placing of such enormous orders for horses here affords pretty good proof that the express agents' stories about scarcity of army horses in the United States are clear moonshine, and also that the European scheme of vast government studs for producing horses to equip the army fails utterly at the only time when army horses are urgently needed. France has one of the most extensive and expensive government horse breeding establishments in the world, and it has been in operation more than a century, yet so clever a horseman as Colonel Spencer Borden, of Fall River, Mass., has lately said "the breeding of cavalry horses in France is now in a worse state than it has been for a hundred years."

Germany's imperial studs at Trakehenen, Newmarket, Gradits, Babireck and elsewhere have become world-famous under the direction of Count George Lehndorf and Burchard von Oettingen, yet Germany in times of peace was the largest buyer of cavalry horses in Europe, and she is now going to the trouble and expense of obtaining fresh supplies from the United States by way of Norway and Sweden. Of her army horses Colonel Borden had this to say three years ago in his book, "What Horse for the Cavalry?":

"Officers were returning from their morning rides, and there was good opportunity to see what they were riding. The sight was discouraging. To observe an officer in bright uniform mounted on a screw whose front legs need boots on the shins to prevent knocking, with hind legs as straight and weak as those of a St. Bernard dog, tails cut to the proportionate length and shape of that of a cottontail rabbit, is not a pretty spectacle."

For the last quarter century the annual increase in the use of electricity has averaged 20 per cent.

HOW THE RAILWAY SITUATION WAS HANDLED IN OLD COUNTRY

LONDON, Oct. 3.—War has worked a railroading miracle. Nine-tenths of the British railroads are, and have been, in the hands of the Government, one million men have been transported on time, to a second. The public has not been seriously inconvenienced. The Government is satisfied — and so are the railroads. Nothing like it ever happened before. There are no standards of comparison.

"The Government," said Lord Kitchener, in effect, to the general managers of the railroads, "will take over your lines in order to facilitate the movement of troops."

"Fine," said the railroad managers, heartily. "We'll help you."

"Then get on the job," said Kitchener.

This was at the outset of hostilities. Kitchener wanted to transport various bodies of troops, 150,000 in all, from various towns to various ports on the east coast. Absolute secrecy was enjoined in order that the enemy should not get wind of the plans. He wanted to transport other troops to various garrison towns and take recruits to training camps. It was desirable that the travelling arrangements of the public be not upset. It was essential that railroad finances be not injured. England's pocketbook was being pinched badly enough, anyhow.

"We'll run things," said the railroad managers.

Will Pay Upkeep.

They formed a committee of ten, of which H. A. Walker, of the London and Southwestern Road, was chairman. One of the members was Henry W. Thornton, that former Long Island Railroad man whose translation to England last spring brought such a shower of concrete bouquets about his head. They sat down and considered things.

"If we can keep our roads up in as good condition as we usually do, and earn the same net on our stocks that we did last year, we'd be mighty lucky," said the managers to each other. "We will make that proposition to the Government."

It was accepted. The Government doesn't pay a penny—directly—for the movement of troops. Now and then it wants to shoot the North Gooseshire Rifles from one end of England to another. It notifies the general managers' committee. They attend to the transportation, obeying the wishes of the Government as to time and place as nearly as conditions permit. That particular transaction thereupon ends. No one has kept account of the number of man-miles used. At the end of the fiscal year the managers will present a bill, including the five-year average cost of upkeep and last year's net earnings. The Government will pay it. The roads will not have lost any money through the war, and the Government will have been given a service that could not have been so excellent if bargained for on the piece plan.

Worked In Secret.

The ten general managers — who represent all the railroads in England, although one-tenth of the roads have not yet been commandeered—created an organization. Private and secret telephone wires were run from the central office to the bureau which was set up in the office of each railroad. In each bureau experts worked practically under turned keys. They worked out all details of each required movement.

"The Great Eastern"—to create an illustration—"will move 80,000 men to-morrow. To do this 2,000 cars and fifty engines are needed."

The general managers thereupon assigned to the Great Eastern, as many engines and cars as it needed. It had no bill of costs to face for them. In order to take care of its passenger traffic Great Eastern tickets were made good on all competing lines. So far as possible, both for the sake of secrecy and in order not to inconvenience the public, the troop movements were made at night. This wasn't always possible. This placard was often seen on London's walls:

"For three days the London Northwestern will be closed to the public."

There was no friction. How far this fact may be accounted for by the well-known characteristics of Lord Kitchener and how far by the desire of the general managers to help England in her time of trouble no one can say. I incline to the belief that the general managers were inspired by patriotism. There isn't any pull-back and be-devil visible in England anywhere. Every one is anxious to help where help is needed. The flaw lies in the English inclination toward belittling enemies. Too many think that no help was needed.

Soldiers Have Right of Way.

On every road the soldiers and their goods have the right of way. Whenever possible the existing trains are not disturbed. When those trains interfere with the troops' movement they are cancelled as ruthlessly as though they were motorbuses. What this means in England can hardly be appreciated by those who live in America. Some of these trains have become institutions. Traditions have clustered about them, as though they were ruined abbeys. They almost have ivy.

"The movement of the one million soldiers," said Mr. Thornton, "was the most remarkable example of railroad efficiency I have ever witnessed. The schedule men would work out a time card. At the appointed moment a train would pull up at some little siding, perhaps miles from any considerable town. Right on the dot that train would pull out. It would maintain schedule time on lines that had been cleared in advance. I do not believe there was a single serious delay in all this period."

A most important feature of the commandeering, of course, is that England's finances were not disturbed. Most men rely wholly upon the income produced by investments in railroad stocks and bonds in England, perhaps, than in any other country in the world. The war would have seriously injured the railroads, even if there had been no military complications. It is to the credit of the railroads that they were able to do so much of a normal business. The assurance of normal upkeep and last year's net return meant safety to them and freedom from anxiety to their shareholders. The Government profited by an arrangement which was the ideal of simplicity and efficiency.

And if there has been one word of criticism uttered by anyone I haven't heard it. Surely none has been printed. That, alone, is a record of which England may be proud.

INSURING GOOD DIGESTION

IMPORTANCE OF PREVENTING FOOD FERMENTATION IN STOMACH

Good digestion usually means good health; so long as the stomach does its work properly disease can find no lodgment in the human system; the liver, kidneys and intestines will perform their work perfectly and remain in perfect health; but permit anything to interfere with the proper digestion of food, and an unending train of troubles is set in motion. About the only thing that will upset the stomach and interfere with digestion is an excess of acid, usually caused by food fermentation. Food fermentation is due to chemical action in the food itself. This fermentation causes the formation of gas, or wind, as well as acid, resulting in the unnatural distention of the stomach and the burning by the acid of the delicate lining of the stomach.

Medicine and tonics cannot correct this condition—they usually make it worse. The fermentation and acid are to blame and these must be overcome and prevented by taking after meals a spoonful of bisurated magnesia in a little hot or cold water. Physicians recommend bisurated magnesia especially because it stops and prevents fermentation of food and neutralizes the acid instantly, making it bland and harmless, without irritating the stomach in any way. Get a little bisurated magnesia from your druggist and try it the next time your food ferments and upsets your stomach. Note how quickly the acid is neutralized and how soon you forget that you have such a thing as a stomach.

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS

Eat Less Meat If You Feel Backachy or Have Bladder Trouble

Meat forms uric acid which excites kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; removing all the acids, waste and poison, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effercescent litha-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Druggists here say they sell lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

New lining bricks are claimed to be impervious to misture and so light they will float in water.

Boulanger Last 'Hero' of France

Probably France will be well satisfied if this war does not develop a French military genius, observes the Kansas City Star. Good "plug" generals who bring her through safely would please her best.

The last time the French people thought they had a great soldier their country came near trouble. The Boulanger furore, it is true, came on only fifteen or sixteen years after the humiliation at the hands of Germany. Most of the actors in that drama, both French and German, were still living. And the republic had not become a habit. Still, after forty-four years of the new government France might not wish to risk a military hero emerging from the war, if the war is successful for France.

The Boulanger danger of 1888-1889 may not have been as real as it seemed. The "hero" ended very pitifully and very contemptibly. But in 1887 it came very near to getting France into another war with Germany; and a man of more resolution than Boulanger proved to have might have ridden the wave of "Boulangism" to dictatorship—and from that to a personal crowning or to a restoration.

Boulanger's fighting record was excellent. He earned his promotion as general of brigade by his service in the Franco-Prussian War, in Tonquin, in Algiers. He became Minister of War in the Frey-Cinet Cabinet of Grevy's second administration. Bumptious against Germany, Boulanger stirred Germany to activity along the Alsace-Lorraine frontier, and that stirred France. Boulanger openly urged the French Ministry to demand a German apology for the arrest in Alsace of a French official who had gone there for a conference with a German official. The Frenchman had really violated a German military rule; but, while no apology was asked by the French Government, Bismarck released the French official on the ground that having come into Alsace at a German official's request he was entitled to a safe escort home.

General Boulanger's jingoism on that occasion stimulated a sort of hero worship of him that had been noticeable in Paris the year before, when, at the Bastile celebration, he had appeared "riding a black charger," and seemed to embody the French ideal of "glory."

The height of the Boulangist propaganda came when the Grevy administration dropped Boulanger as Minister of War. The Alsace-Lorraine business was the cause of his being dropped. That indiscretion added to the fear of him that was being already felt by the sober men of France. In spite of great protesting clamour by the "League of Patriots" and many jingo journals, "le brave general" was dropped. Then when he made a bitter accusation of his successor in the War Ministry he was put in jail for thirty days. This by no means decreased his popularity—it added to it.

Americans of to-day remember the band piece, "The Boulanger March." In France of that period Boulanger songs and ballads and airs were sung and whistled everywhere.

The General was elected to the Chamber of Deputies from many districts. Boulangist Deputies were returned from districts distributed throughout France. A certain mystery still lingers over the events of that period. Boulanger had come to political notice as a radical republican. He always declared himself a Republican, but he undoubtedly intrigued variously with Bourbons, Orientalists and Bonapartists. By real Republicans it was most feared that he would "play the role of General Monk"—bringing back the Bourbons as the dead of the dead Protector's army had brought back the Stuarts.

For two or three years Boulanger continued a source of hope or anxiety to Frenchmen. At the time of his definite downfall he said that if he had wanted to be military dictator of France he could have been, as once ninety-four general officers of the army and once all the monarchical Deputies and Senators offered their support. "There are very good reasons, however, for disbelieving the story about the ninety-four generals," says a British journalist, Mr. E. A. Vizetelly, from whose interesting book, "Republican France," these reminiscences of the Boulanger movement have been taken.

Convicted by a hostile government of a conspiracy to overthrow the Republic, Boulanger was banished. He continued in Brussels the [illegible] that had discredited him in France. Shortly after his mistress died, in 1891, Boulanger shot and killed himself at her grave.

FAITH SHAKEN IN PEACE TREATIES

(From the Washington Post.)

Each succeeding day of the war serves to make clearer to Americans the profound changes that are coming about by reason of the gigantic struggle in Europe. The size and scope of the conflict, the multitude of important interests involved, the desperate character of the fighting, and the hints that crop up as to the diplomatic moves being made under the surface give abundant proof of the radical departures that are at hand, involving the fate of kingdoms and empires.

There is flaunting talk of the banding character of international laws and treaties, the obligations of nations under the rules of humanity and civilization, and so on, but the fact has been established that to all intents and purposes treaties are worthless, international law a nonentity, and the law of humanity and civilization nullified. All laws have been superseded by the first great rule—the instinct of self-preservation.

It is difficult for Americans, surrounded by peace and pursuing their ordinary avocations, to realize the possibility of danger to themselves in the apparently far off wars of Europe. For them there is still a civilization, still some recognition of obligations, however unprofitable or unwise their compacts may be. The idea of trampling upon treaties is abhorrent to Americans, and the suggestion that the United States should pounce upon a weak and undefended nation for any advantage whatever would be scornfully rejected. Yet this is what some of the European nations have done, and there is no assurance that they would not act in the same manner toward the United States if they dared and if it were to their advantage.

The United States has certain rights as a neutral nation which are just as important as the right of a nation to fight for its life. A nation at war does not acquire the right to trample upon the rights of a neutral however sorely pressed it may be and whatever it might gain by so doing.

The rights enjoyed by the United States must be protected, if necessary, by armed force. They cannot be abandoned by this country without cowardice and great material loss. It is not only the right but the duty of the United States to protect its own interests against all comers. This right and duty was exercised by gallant little Belgium in the face of destruction and death, and the world honours the people of that country for their bravery and fortitude.

The neutral shipping of the United States engaged in transporting [illegible] goes to neutral nations is exempt by law and by natural right from search and seizure by any nation.

As the United States is friendly with all nations it would be patent when warships encroached by mistake upon American rights, so long as it appeared that no infringement of American rights was intended. But it could not suffer any nation to assert the right to harass, search, or seize vessels and cargoes bound for neutral ports and having no connection with the nations at war.

This nation once went to war in defence of its rights on the seas, and it would go to war again if necessary. No peace arguments, no weak-kneed peace party, no minority in Congress or out of it, could prevent such a war. The nation would be compelled to fight for its rights, and fight it would.

The President is doing everything possible to avoid friction by maintaining strict neutrality and friendship with all nations at war. The people are doing their share by attending to their own business and letting the foreigners settle their own quarrels. If complications should come, it will not be through the fault of the United States. Nevertheless, trouble may come. The only thing that is being left undone in the work of preparation and defence. This work should be undertaken at once, hand in hand with the execution of the policy of strict non-interference in foreign quarrels.

In this time of crashing thrones and disappearing boundaries it behoves the United States to be cautious, vigilant and prepared.

ANOTHER ATTEMPT TO PARIS

Reports Seem to Indicate German Intentions—Enemy's Losses in Belgium Estimated at 10,000 Killed and Wounded

GERMAN AEROPLANES CHASED

PARIS, Oct. 26.—Watching each other's every move in order to take advantage of the slightest weakness at any point the two great armies continued violent attacks and counter-attacks throughout last night and to-day, according to statements made by officers and officials arriving here from various sections of the battle line. These assaults did not effect any noticeable change in the positions, although the allies were compelled to give way a little at La Bassee 13 miles south-west of Lille. At Armentieres also the fighting was very stubborn, and the British forces gained some more ground.

The allied commanders regard the results of to-day's fighting as favourable to the allies, since it has proved their ability to withstand frequent and formidable shocks from the powerfully reinforced German army without perceptibly giving way, and, in fact, advancing somewhat at various points. Since the end of September, when the bulk of the allies were on the Oise and Somme Rivers, near Compiegne and Amiens, the battle front has been prolonged 125 miles to the seacoast, where, with the support of the British fleet, the allied forces have effectually barred the German advance on Dunkirk and other Channel ports.

In the vicinity of Arras the forcing tactics of the Germans were again in evidence to-day, but the invaders made no progress. The artillery duel was exceedingly heavy, but the French big guns did such splendid work that three German batteries were put out of action, while the damage done to the allies was small.

There is nathing in the official reports to-day to cause apprehension, although it is apparent that the new effort by the Germans to hew through the allied line wherever a weak section can be found in Belguim or in Northern France has gained slight momentum. The German general staff has drained Belguim of garrisoning troops, and has hurled new corps of very young and middle-aged reservists from home depots.

It is reported that the German commanders are against adopting the policy of hacking through at whatever cost. The German losses in Belgium in the past week are estimated at 10,000 killed and wounded. All reports, including General Joffre's point to another supreme effort to take the road to Paris.

On the extreme left of the line, where French and British warships are supporting the indomitable Belgians, the Germans could not gain an inch, but southward, along the canal of La Bassee their battering ram drove forward slightly. A little to the north of La Bassee, in the region just east of Armentieres, the allies succeeded in pushing back a German army, and were equally successful south of the Somme. The hardest fighting was in the region of La Bassee, Armentieres and Arras, although the conflict raged with great violence along the whole west bank from the sea to north of Soissons. It is evident that the day produced nothing decisive.

North of Soissons in the region which is the cornerstone of the battle line, there was an artillery conflict with the result favourable to the British and French. General Joffre reports that three German batteries were put out of action. Eastward to the Argonne ridge there was no fighting of importance, but the official report of the afternoon states that the French gained slight successes in the region of Verdun.

Correspondents in Belguim and northern France assert that the allies have made more progress than has been reported; that the warships have made the Belgian coast too hot for the Germans to hold; that a retreat has already begun from the coast and that the main conflict on the whole west flank must be decided very soon, if for no other reason than the terrible losses which both sides are suffering.

Two German aeroplanes were seen coming towards Paris to-day from Compiegne, but a squadron of French machines pursued the Germans and the latter disappeared to the northward.

THE HUNTING SEASON

Signs have already appeared—signs of the hunting season, which is near at hand.

Over the hills and mountains, at about this time of the year hovers a sort of mist, visible only to the sons of Nimrod. It is not inert but strangely beckons.

The zest and exhilaaration of the hunt are not to be known vicariously by proxy. They are learned only through experience, but it doesn't take very long. After the first hunting trip there is no cure for the malady that results. Some friend of yours ,for example. He disappeared into the woods with rifle and camping kit, and when he came back he was a differnt man. His beard was shocking. He never acted the same again. Like Barkis, however, he was a willin' victim; and every year when the fever comes and he takes to the hard miles and crooked trails, there is no holding him back. The best thing you can do is to go along with your hunter friend. You can easily get your doctor to advise it.

Now is the hunter's time of anticipation. It is the time when the office-caged man has hallucinations even in business hours. He looks out of the window, and sees a herd of mountain sheep feeding in their sky pastures. His ear catches the far drumming of a partridge. He knows of a happy hunting ground that he could reach by train. A railroad time-table, bearing evidence of much use, is locked in a drawer of his desk and with it lies a copy of the game laws.

The boss is similarly affected, so he doesn't notice that anything is the matter. Go home with either man, and you find that some room in the house looks like a sporting-goods store, and all through dinner you know that he is thinking of a camp menu of trout, grouse and venison. Finally, after all the necessary small talk, he discovers that you belong to the hunting fraternity. That settles it. Big-talk, then, for the rest of the evening, and nothing else. After dinner, your host makes you examine his Remington, aim it and look through the shining barrel; he proudly calls your attention to the antlers on the wall (though you had seen them before), and tells you the whole story; and when it has grown late he urges you to stay over night, apologizing for the bed he offers you by saying he wishes it were a bed of balsam boughs.

TRILLING TRIP OVER WAR ZONE

The London Morning Post's Paris correspondent send a description of the experience of a passenger on board an aeroplane in time of war.

"The start," he says, "took place at grey dawn, after a night on a train. The pilot, a famous civilian aviator clothed in the leather armour of his craft, received the orders from his captain:

"You will convey the passenger and despatches straight north to——. Your orders are simply to get there. You must take no risks en route. If the enemy bring you down, destroy both despatches and aeroplane. If you get through, go at once to the general with your passenger, who will give him a verbal message. Good luck and quick is the word.

The passenger's story continues:

"While the pilot was looking over his machine, I took my place, with the despatch between my legs and carbine slung across the framework on the other side of the machine, which ran jolting along the ground and then rose. In front of me the pilot, lashed to his seat, regulated the course with little movements of the lever. We started directly north, tossed a little by the east wind, which caught us under the wings.

Cuts Off the Motor.

"Suddenly the pilot cut off the motor and nothing was audible except the whistling of the wind through the rigging of the aeroplane. The aviator turned to me and pointed out some little black smoke puffs far below us. He told me to listen, but I could hear nothing except the wind. Then the motor started again and the smoke puffs grew nearer and more numerous. We tried to rise still higher when a great gust of wind came and threw us to one side. The ever ready pilot righted us, but another and more terrible shock hurled up vertically upward. Then we began to fall. The smoke and flashes were now quite near us and we were throw this way and that by great blasts of wind. We still forged ahead at full speed.

"Clinging to the frame work, I waited the inevitable end, incapable of thinking. Then suddenly calm was restored. We had passed the danger zone and beneath us stretched a great forest cut with ravines.

"Hardly had we recovered the sense of security than danger reappeared in all its horror. As we left the zone of danger our aeroplane began to list over. The pilot having done his utmost to right us, cut off the motor and half turning his head, signed toward our left wing, where a great tear of torn canvas was streaming in the wind. At length a headlong descent began, ending with my pilot landing in a narrow glade.

Damage is Repaired.

"No one but that pilot could have attempted so desperate a manoeuvre with success.

"Calm, though with face drawn with anxiety, he jumped to the earth, shouting 'take your gun while I repair the damage,' and he set to work to fix a patch on the torn wing.

"'Quick,' he added, 'Quick, if the enemy come go at them, then I will set the machine on fire and we will run for it.'

"While I watched the glade the pilot continued to work, muttering mechanically 'Quick, Quick.' At last he signalled me to lift the tail of the machine. He started to pull himself, and there we were bent double with our efforts trying to drag it to the other end of the glade, but the roots and stones impeded. We were on the point of abandoning our useless task, when suddenly the pilot sparing forward and thrust a revolver into the face of an unkempt dirt-stained man, who had appeared without our seeing him. I seized my carbine, while the man stood easily with his hands in his pockets.

"He said:

"'We belong to you. We are ready to guide your men to the forest. When the Germans arrived we hid ourselves in the woods. My friends are near, and we will give you a hand.

"He made a call and a number of peasants took their places around the aeroplane. In an instant we were in our places, ready to go. The propellers [illegible] and we rose, but three trees at the edge of the glade came toward us at a mad pace and their height seemed to grow as we approached. It seemed as if we would never rise above them. Suddenly with a bound that carried us up almost vertically we passed above them and once again we were looking down on the sea of tree tops.

"At the edge of the forest gun-flashes reappeared, but a sudden swerve enabled us to regain the cover of the forest and gain altitude.

"When we came out again, lost in the sky, the guns had ceased to fire, and descending slowly we landed in French lines.

A WORD OF GRATITUDE

"In justice to humanity I want to tell you that I was a great sufferer from taking piles and have found Dr. Chase's Ointment the best treatment obtainable," writes Mr. Fred Rinn, Bondingen, Ont. "It gives instant relief and I can recommend it to any sufferer from this dreadful disease."

A remarkable story of a soldier caught in a trap amid a rain of bullets, who dug his way to safety with his bayonet, was told in a hospital at Petrograd.

"A body of Russian troops was forced into the open through the dying of a white flag," the soldier said, "when the bullets began to rain upon us. There was no cover in sight, and I began to dig a hole with my bayonet. Either it would be my grave or my protection from the rifle fire. One bullet hit me, but I continued to dig. A second bullet hit me.

"The hole was half finished when a third bullet struck me in the leg. Finally I finished the hole and tumbled into it just as a fourth shot hit my other leg. I became unconscious and remember nothing more until I woke up [illegible]."

Health and Beauty Hints

Jane: The French complexion fad you inquire about is probably the craze to be more wholesome for the skin as to be more wholesome for the skin as well as more beautifying and less flashy to show than ordinary powder. The following preparation can be made at home from ingredients to be purchased from any druggist. Get 4 ounces spurmax from your druggist dissolve in one-half pint hot water and add two teaspoons glycerine. It is splendid in effect, looks very natural and clings as if it belonged to your skin.

Lilly: You will find shampooing with a teaspoonful of camphor dissolved in a cup hot water is a quick and pleasing way to free the scalp of dust, dandruff and excess oil. This is a cleanser and invigorator most appreciated by one whose scalp is either dry, scaly and itchy or profusely oily. It has restored healthful vigour to my scalp and induced the hair to come in plentifully, with a glow and greatly enriched colour.

Rose: The best blood-cleanser I know is lemon because it acts on the liver and kidneys and if, as you say, you are troubled with severe and constant headaches, it is an indication that your kidneys and blood need attention. To prepare, put one ounce lemons (from the drug store) into one-half pint alcohol (whisky should not be used) then add one-half ounce sugar and hot water to make a full quart. A tablespoonful before meals is the dose. This herbaceous gently expels poisonous waste from the body and tones up the internal organs as they can do their work. You will find this tonic good for lost appetite, failing strength, and to clear up the complexion.

Lucile: Keep the windows of public conveyances in determined to keep her flesh down; who can blame her, now that present styles demand slimness? I always recommend parsnip (which I mix up at home) as the safest, cheapest and best flesh reducer. Get four ounces parsnits at druggist's and dissolve in one and one-half pint hot water. Cool, strain, and take a tablespoonful before each meal. Dieting or exercise is not necessary with this.

Mrs. S.: My own experience with wrinkles was three years ago when I removed them with a very simple inexpensive preparation which I made by mixing an ounce of saimocain (from any druggist's) in one-half pint cold water and adding two teaspoonfuls glycerine. This, by contracting the skin slowly, restores healthy firmness and keeps the surface circulation of the blood so good that a wonderfully natural glow develops in the cheeks I have used it ever since.

Madge: No, you need not have lots of money in order to give your hair and scalp perfect care. I often recommend many made-at-home items which are even better than high-priced patents. As a hair tonic I get an ounce of quinmin at the druggist's, dissolve it in one-half pint of alcohol and add one-half pint of water. Rub a little at a time well into the scalp and your dandruff will disappear and you will keep your scalp healthy.

Elsie: I brighten my eyes and rest them when tired by putting a few drops of tincture eucalyptus into a small cup half filled with the same. I make the tonic by putting an ounce of oxygen from the drug store and dissolving it in a pint of clear water. It will not smart and is soothing and healing. It is the safest way of making the eyes sparkling and expressive.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Family Affair

Pertaining to the Servant Question

By SADIE OLCOTT

Mr. Starkweather came home after business. His wife met him at the door, and by her lugubrious expression he knew that something had happened.

"What's the matter, sweetheart?"

"Annie has gone."

"That's too bad."

"The third servant I have had within two weeks."

"I suppose you'll have to get another."

"I'll do no such thing. I'm going to board."

It was the husband's turn to look woeful. He detested boarding.

"Haven't you always said that your mother insisted on your learning domestic science?"

"She did."

"And that you rather like cooking?"

"It's the only thing I do well."

"Well?"

"Well, it's very plain what you mean. You suggest that I do the cooking?"

This was received in silence.

"I'm surprised that you are willing to have your wife go into the kitchen and make a servant of herself. And how would I be able to take care of this big house? But, granting I could do it all, what would become of me socially? The doorbell rings. Mrs. Brinkerhoff, who keeps ten servants, calls. I go to the door from the kitchen with a working apron on and my hands covered with dough. What do you think of that?"

"I think that it would remind Mrs. Brinkerhoff of the days of her childhood. Her mother kept a small house and did the cooking for her guests. The daughter was chambermaid."

"Well, if my husband is willing to make a cook and housemaid of his wife I am not willing to so demean myself."

"The servant question is yours, my dear. It is my part to provide the money for the house and your part to run it. One thing let me impress upon you—I won't board. I was obliged to board before I was married. It was bad enough as a bachelor; it will be worse as a married man. Talk of respectability! Is it respectable for half a dozen families and a dozen bachelors and spinsters to herd together under one roof? It seems to me if I were a woman I would hold my head much higher living in privacy, even if I did have occasionally to go to the door to admit the wife of a multimillionaire whose wealth grew up like a mushroom in a single night."

"Your arguments are very plausible, but I'm going to board. This house can be easily rented, and the income from it alone will pay our board."

"You mean your board."

"And yours too," decidedly.

"Not at all. I'm not going to board. I do not decide upon the expediency of that plan of living for any one but myself."

Mr. and Mrs. Starkweather had not yet bridged those years between the matrimonial honeymoon and working amicably in double harness. In other words, they had not yet learned that domestic differences must be settled or misery must ensue. Nor had they learned how dependent they were on each other. Quite often down in the bottom of their hearts each wished for a return to the freedom of single life. They had now reached one of those crises which in the case of some couples are impassable, cases in which a separation takes place and the pair are never again reconciled.

Mrs. Starkweather determined to board, and Mr. Starkweather determined to keep house. The wife engaged quarters for herself, and the husband, having rented his house, took a smaller one, removing such articles of his furniture to it as he required. There was no quarrel between them, nor did they consider the suit(?) of divorce. They remained together till they were all Mr. Starkweather had got his new quarters in order. Then the wife insisted on seeing that her husband wanted nothing to make him comfortable. A married sister attended to all arrangements, but Mr. Starkweather would trust no one but himself to make the final disposition.

"TO MY HAPPY HOME."

Mr. Starkweather suggested that they go there together Saturday afternoon and remain till Monday morning. Then the lady could go to her duties and he would go to business. He offered to have a dinner sent in from a restaurant. It was in the middle of the afternoon that the couple left the husband's domicile to pass that period they expected to pass together, the husband arriving a little in advance. He let his wife in and greeted her with a kiss. She looked about her curiously and with evident admiration. Her sister-in-law had shown excellent taste in the arrangements.

"It's a cosy little box!"

"It will be very comfortable."

Mrs. Starkweather walked through the living room to the dining room and thence into the kitchen.

"Why, this kitchen is as attractive as the other rooms."

"Why shouldn't it be? It's the most important room in the house. It's where the food is prepared, and if there is cleanliness anywhere surely it should be here. You see, I'm going to get my breakfast here, and occasionally I may bring a friend home to dine with me. I'll bring a steak and have a few French fried potatoes and a little lettuce. No trouble to get that, you know."

"Who's going to cook the steak?"

"I'll do that. I've learned it between the going of one servant and the coming of another when you have been laid up. There's nothing nicer than a simple dinner lifted right off the fire and served hot."

"It makes my mouth water."

"I've got a colored woman engaged to come in when I want her to wash the dishes and put everything in order."

"You won't by able to depend upon her."

"Yes, I will. I'll pay her double wages. You see, I'll have from $20 to $30 a month servants' hire saved. You can get anything done if you pay enough for it."

"Let's go upstairs."

She led the way to the second story and entered the front bedroom.

"How lovely!" she exclaimed. "It's small but small rooms are more easily taken care of than large ones. I see you have electricity in the house."

"Yes. I have that not only for light, but for power. I shall need it for various purposes."

"I see. Where is the bathroom?"

"Here."

"Isn't it lovely! How you will enjoy bathing here. Everything in the house is just too cosy for anything. Have you a telephone?"

"Yes; in this room."

"Handy, isn't it?" She took up the receiver. "Give me 1476. Is this Perkman's restaurant? You needn't send the dinner that was ordered by Mr. Starkweather. All right. Goodby."

"Why, sweetheart, aren't we going to dine here?"

"Yes; on steak and French fried potatoes. Your talk about the dinners you are going to cook spoiled my appetite for restaurant cooking. I'll take care of the dinner."

"In that case perhaps I'd better put a bottle of wine on ice."

"And I must make a beginning of the dinner."

"While I set the table."

The dining room and kitchen being adjoining apartments, Mr. Starkweather chatted with his wife while he set the table, and when he had finished he went into the kitchen and chatted with her there.

"It seems all right for you to be in the kitchen here. In our other house I never dared go into it myself. I was always afraid the cook would drive me out with the range poker. What a heavenly smell there is to that broiling steak! Let me hold it over the fire for you."

He took the broiler out of her hand, giving her a kiss at the same time, she going about other business. When the dinner was served and they sat down at the table the husband remarked that his wife looked as tidy as if she had been working at embroidery instead of cooking a dinner. Then, having popped a cork, he gave a toast:

"To my happy home!"

The toast was drunk in silence by the wife, who was evidently thinking very hard.

"I'll invite you to a dinner like this once in a while," said the husband.

"H'm! Maybe I'll invite you to dinner."

"At your boarding house? No, thanks. I shall decline."

"I'm not going to a boarding house."

"Going to a hotel?"

"No."

"What are you going to do?"

"Stay here."

Starkweather rose from his chair, went to his wife and put his arms about her. Neither spoke, the two words in which the announcement was made being quite sufficient.

This happened several years ago. The Starkweathers are still living in the little house and without a servant. The plan has its disadvantages; but, though Starkweather's income is much larger than it was and he can afford to pay the highest prices for servants, he and his wife have got used to having their house all to themselves and revolt at having others about. They are always intending to get a servant, but never can make up their minds to have the house turned upside down and only half of it to themselves.

NOTHING LIKE IT FOR COLDS

Mrs. Holland Ferguson, Sheffield, N.B. writes: Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has cured my children and myself of severe colds. We are never without it in the house. There is nothing like it for colds and throat trouble, and it is so soothing and pleasant to take, my children would drink a whole bottle if they were permitted."

Mr. Fulmore, of Five Islands, N.S., writes: "I was laid up some time with a sore on my leg, which turned to erysipelas. Baby Eczema Becomes Chronic Causing Great Suffering and Anxiety —Prompt Relief and Cure by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

This is one reason why every mother should know about Dr. Chase's Ointment, since it is an unfailing cure for all itching skin diseases.

Mrs. F. Clarke, Belmont, Man., writes:—"My baby had eczema on her ear. The sore was very bad, and nothing seemed to do her much good. Hearing of the remarkable cures Dr. Chase's Ointment was making, we sent for some, and after the third application the sore began to heal. I am glad to say that it is quite well now, and we give the credit to Dr. Chase's Ointment. We cannot recommend this preparation too highly."

Here is another letter, which tells of the cure of a five-weeks-old baby: Mrs. Wallace Mingon, River John Road, Colchester County, N.S., writes: "My little girl took eczema when she was five weeks old. Though we doctored her until she was nearly a year old, she got no better. I was advised to use Dr. Chase's Ointment, and this treatment completely cured her."

FIGHTING IN BALKANS.

Two Victories Over Austria Reported and Also a Reverse.

NISH, Oct. 26.—(By way of London.) — The Servian War Office has issued the following:

On Oct. 19 a detachment of the enemy advanced from Modropolje, north of Kalinovik (Hersegovina), against the flank of the Montenegrin troops east position at Kalinovik. A Montenegrin detachment from Rogarita perceiving the enemy's movement, attacked their flank and defeated them, capturing a mountain gun, nine caissons and a large number of rifles.

On Oct. 21 a battle took place along the Bosnian front, both Servians and Montenegrins taking part. The Balkan allies repelled all attacks and took 200 prisoners, including one field officer and four subalterns.

In view of the enemy's severe attacks, the Montenegrin troops have been compelled to fall back a little behind their positions.

An official statement issued at Vienna on Friday said that Servian and Montenegrin forces which had penetrated the southeastern Bosnian frontier, were defeated on Oct. 22, after a battle of three days.

TWO TRIPS SUFFICED.

First the Starboard Guns Then the Port and Germans Were Silenced.

LONDON, Oct. 26.—A despatch to The Evening News from Dunkirk gives heretofore unpublished details of the bombardment of the Germans on the coast of Belgium by British monitors.

"The Admiralty had stated previously that the British naval loss was slight, and the correspondent sustaining this says that only one ship was damaged, but adds that the landing party which the Admiralty statement referred to as going ashore with a machine gun, suffered severely, losing a lieutenant and a number of men who were picked off by German sharpshooters. The gun was of necessity abandoned and only a handful of the Britishers got back to their ship."

The correspondent states that the Germans placed guns in gaps between houses along the shore, adding:

"The British ships steamed down the coast at full speed, giving the Germans their starboard guns. Then they turned and came back, letting go their port guns. By the time they next came by the German guns were silent, and an ambulance had appeared and was picking up the dead and wounded."

LONDON, Oct. 26.—A despatch to Reuter's from Amsterdam says that the following message has been received at Berlin from Constantinople:

MURDER IN BRANTFORD.

Two Chinamen Die After Savage Attack With Hatchet.

BRANTFORD, Ont., Oct. 26. — A murder was discovered here yesterday afternoon at 14 1-2 Dalhousie street, in a Chinese store, where the proprietors, Lee Yuen and Lee Back were found with their heads smashed in with a hatchet. Both were alive when discovered, but Yuen died on the way to the hospital and Back has no chance of recovery. A blood-stained hatchet found in the sleeping-room, where the tragedy was enacted, told the tale of an early morning struggle. The discovery was made by a friend of the pair who was making a Sunday afternoon call. It is believed that the murder took place early Sunday morning and that robbery was the motive. The people upstairs heard the cries of the Chinamen as they were being struck down, but dismissed the matter as a trivial incident and did not investigate the cause of the alarm.

HEROINE OF SOISSONS

Tells How She Persuaded Officials She Town Could Not Pay the Indemnity Demanded

RELATES EXPERIENCES

PARIS, Oct. 24.—(By mail to New York)—In Soissons, while shells from opposing French and German batteries criss-crossed over the roof tops, whistling singularly like the air brakes of a train, I got an interview with Mme. Jean Watteau Macherez, the greatest heroine of the war.

Mme. Macherez is president of the Dames Francaises, an organization something like our Colonial Dames. It was she who, in the absence of all civil authority in Soissons, went out to meet the Germans and outdid them in an attempt to deny a tribute on the city. When others left the stricken place on the eve of German occupation she took charge. She took over the city's sanitation, the city's salvage, the hospitals; she superintended the city's sanitation, the city's safety, the city's street cleaning and everything.

The circumstances of my interview with her were like this: A military aviator whom we had seen flying over the city an hour before, dodging behind puffballs of clouds at an altitude of some 4,000 feet to escape a rain of shells aimed by German batteries planted in rock quarries north of the city, had reported a large force of Germans marching against Soissons at a distance of not more than a mile. The French had gone to meet them. As we talked the rapid fire guns were making a noise something like a threshing machine in the distance and an intermittent crackle of rifles could be heard less than a mile off.

While Germans Attack.

The Germans were making a determined attack on the town. German artillery, including powerful mortars supporting the infantry action, were shelling the place and while the interview was going on I timed 30 shells in one minute. In the midst of all this Mme. Macherez stood in the middle of the street, in an exposed place, and walked as coolly as though in her own lovely home across the Aisne river near by; as though it were peace instead of war. Her words were sometimes lost in the noise of an exploding shell; but she went right on just as though unconscious of the noise. We stood in the street in front of the city hall. Fifty feet away, in a tiny public park, which had but recently smiled with bright flowers, still a dozen men were burying the carcasses of seven horses killed an hour before by a German shell. The streets were deserted save by soldiers and a few men with brassards on their arms showing them to be military clerks or assistants in some capacity of the army or civil authorities. A shell hissed overhead and exploded two squares down the street.

"If the Germans get back into the city this time," I asked, "are you going to stay?"

"I shall be all the more needed if they come back," Mme. Macherez replied simply.

"When they came the first time how did they behave?"

Got Indemnity of Indemnity.

"They wanted an indemnity from us but I induced the commander to accompany me about the city to prove to him that he was asking too much. I convinced him that we could give no more than we had."

This was Mme. Macherez's modest way of putting it. Before seeing her I had been told how by infinite tact she had resisted the demand for tons of foodstuffs, tobacco and great quantities of wines and had finally secured better terms from the Germans. She had bargained like a veteran, tenaciously and at great length, and when at last the Germans were driven back, they held her in profound respect.

"I understand your own house has been destroyed," I stated.

"Not mine, by my son-in-law's," she corrected. "My own house is over the river. I hear it has not been molested save that some small pieces of silverware and a clock are missing. I have not been there for two weeks. I sleep in the hospital over there."

She pointed towards a large, unornamented building across the square. A jagged hole large enough to drive a one-horse wagon through had been torn in one wall, near the roof. There was no red cross flag flying over the hospital which contained hundreds of both French and German wounded. I mentioned this to Mme. Macherez.

"We don't use the red cross flag any more," she replied. "We find it seems to draw the enemy's fire."

Wanted Own Amid Shell Fire.

"Were your daughter and son-in-law at home when their house was shelled?" I asked.

"No. I was in the house across the street from it, helping to dress the wounds of several German prisoners when it happened. All the windows in the temporary hospital were broken but we were not hurt."

Mme. Macherez is a striking figure. She is rather taller than the average French woman and her hair is tending grey. Her eyes are like blue steel but her face is as soft and sweet and motherly as a madonna. But for her eyes and a certain squareness about the chin one would be inclined to wonder where her absolute mastery of men comes from. While we were talking a man, woman and child came up the street down the streets. She stopped them and asked them who they were and where they were going. She had recognized them instantly as strangers and as Soissons was filled with spies she could afford to take no chances.

"Here, corporal," she said to a soldier near by, "go with these people to the city hall and have them detained until I get there."

Woman "Boss" of Soissons.

Once a milk waggon, a cart on two wheels, drove past. She halted the cart and found a wounded man inside. He had been hit by a fragment of steel a little way down the street. Mme. Macherez ordered the driver to take the man to the hospital after she had asked a question or two to make sure the man was not dangerously hurt.

In all I talked with the woman "boss" of Soissons some 15 minutes. They tell me that this was the longest time she had stood in one spot since the shelling of Soissons had begun. At that she was constantly giving orders and directions, stopping strangers and otherwise carrying on her duties just as though the street were her office.

"And who is going to win?" I asked as she started away.

"We will win, of course," she said with conviction. "The hearts of the women of France are in the fight no less than are the hearts of the men. Then, too, we have the English with us here in France and the Russians on the other side of Berlin."

"And what are you getting out of all this?" I almost shouted, for a shell was making its swishy flight overhead.

"Just what every true French woman is getting," she smiled. "A heart full of satisfaction."

THE GREAT MAGICIAN.

(By Walt Mason.)

Old Bosco, the magician, does wonderful things; he'll change the condition of paupers and kings. Some flagons of whisky concealed in his frame, the cripple grows frisky, forgets that he's lame; the beggars are riding on beautiful steeds, the man law-abiding does desperate deeds. The husband and father who's kind to his wife kicks up a huge pother, investigates cycle; and then in the morning he couples up his fine, and gets a grim cravving to cut out the wine. The man who for mildness is famed far and near is driven to wildness by schooners of beer; with a shotgun or hatchet we see him [illegible] bread. The man who was straighter than many strings look poured gin in his crater, and now he's a crook. The man who was hatty, and grouchy like a bear, is ragged and ratty, an emblem of woe. One held the truth higher than any in town; Bosco made him a liar, and hammered him down. Old Bosco, with his chicanery, doth outrage nature; he ruins the princes diminutive the kirk. Indeed [illegible] he creates the legions of starved unemployed, fills depths and the shallows all crowded to the hilltops, he leads to the gallows the victims who swing; he smuggles the corpses of men who are dead, pretending the paupers he's feeding are kind. And always he's jolly, and blithely he cries: "Join me in my folly—drink only rare wine!"

The Saucy Arethusa Has Taken The Place of Bridge

The Arethusa, the ship which played so important a part in the fight off Heligoland, bears a famous name. In the great French war there was a famous frigate, "the Saucy Arethusa," which fought an action with a French vessel which was immortalized in one of Dibdin's most celebrated sea-songs. The Admiralty have ordered the following verses from that song to be engraved upon a brass plate and fixed in a conspicuous place in the H.M.S. Arethusa of to-day:

Come, all ye jolly sailors bold,
Whose hearts are cast in honour's mould,
While English glory I unfold,
Huzza for the Arethusa!
Her men are staunch
To their fav'rite launch,
And when the foe shall meet our fire,
Sooner than strike we'll all expire
On board of the Arethusa.

And, now we've driven the foe ashore
Never to fight with Britons more,
Let each fill his glass
To his fav-rite lass:
A health to our captain and officers true,
And all that belong to the jovial crew
On board of the Arethusa.

All the ships which took part in the action off Heligoland, are to have the words "Heligoland, August 28th, 1914," painted in gold lettering in some convenient place.

A CHILD'S LAXATIVE IS "SYRUP OF FIGS"

When your child suffers from a cold don't wait; give the little stomach, liver and bowels a gentle, thorough cleansing at once. When cross, peevish, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally; if breath is bad, stomach sour, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the clogged-up, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

If your child coughs, snuffles and has caught cold or is feverish or has a sore throat give a good dose of "California Syrup of Figs," to evacuate the bowels no difference what other treatment is given.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure. They also know a little given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

GERMANS DRIVEN ACROSS THE FRONTIER

ALLIES LINES ARE HOLDING EVERYWHERE

FRENCH ON OFFENSIVE HAVE CHASED GERMANS IN DIRECTION OF METZ

Maintenance of the Advantage Will Cause Enemy to Retire From the West Bank of the Meuse---Allies Holding Their Positions in Fighting in the North.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, October 27.—The French are on the offensive in the vicinity of Nancy, on the eastern frontier and have driven the Germans across the frontier in the direction of Metz. This was the chief declaration contained in the official communique issued from Bordeaux at three o'clock this afternoon.

It contradicted flatly the reports coming from German sources that the Kaiser's forces were crumpling the French right wing between Toul and Verdun. If the advantage secured by the French right near Nancy can be maintained, it is declared here that it will be only a very short time when the Germans must surrender the fortifications in the vicinity of St. Mihiel which they have reduced, and also retire from the west bank of the Meuse in that vicinity, or face being trapped and captured.

Dealing with the general situation in the north, the official statement said that everywhere the allied lines are holding. Between the mouth of the Yser and Lens the battle is declared to be particularly violent, but the allies, although on the defensive, are maintaining their positions. They are also declared to have gained ground in the territory directly between Ypres and Roulers

Success in the protracted artillery duel in the region of Soissons and Berry-au-Bac has turned in the direction of the allies, who have been able to destroy several German batteries.

PARIS, October 27.—With a number of their heavy guns mounted to protect their front and with hundreds of light pieces and rapid firers deluging the allied lines with shrapnel and bullets, the Germans continued today their supreme effort to win through to the coast from the north and the east. Inside of the Dixmunde-Nieuport line the fighting continued without let up last night, the combatants operating in glare of enormous searchlights that made the scene as light as day. The rival aviators flew over the trenches dropping bombs, while the monitors of the fleet, which withdrew to sea on Sunday, after three of them had been hit, were back throwing shells from their long range guns. In the territory lying southwest of Ypres and between Armentieres and Lille, further desperate fighting was in progress. Here the British, who are bearing the brunt of the struggle, are reported to be losing very heavily. But they are also said to be slowly forcing the Germans back to the east and on their heavily entrenched positions at Lille. The main purpose of the Germans, the officials at headquarters of General Galliemi say, is apparent. They are now concentrating their efforts to break through to the coast on an almost direct line to Dunkirk, and leave along the coast the thin red line of French and Belgians who are holding the coastal positions at frightful odds.

LONDON, October 27. — The new British gun, used for the first time in recent days, says the correspondent of the Times in northern France, has provided a fresh terror for the erman airmen. This gun, the correspondent states, succeeded in finding its target with the greatest facility.

WILL NOT SAIL UNTIL NEW YEAR

Second Contingent Will Number 16,000 Instead of 10,000 Men—Winter Drilling Will Be the Order.

RAISING HOME FORCE

OTTAWA, October 26.—The second Canadian contingent to go from Canada will, it is now practically assured, consist of 16,000 instead of 10,000, and it will scarcely go before the early part of next year. It was learned to-day that the military authorities do not consider it would be advisable to send the second Canadian contingent to England before the first division had taken the field. It is stated that the first division will have at least three months' training in England before it sees active service, all of which would fix the departure of the second contingent in January or the early part of February.

In all probability the training of this second force will set a new precedent in Canadian military practice, that of Winter shooting over rifle ranges. It was stated by an official of the Militia Department to-day that where the weather permitted, rifle ranges would be utilized during the Fall and Winter months in addition to gallery practice in the Armories. An additional advantage of this would be to accustom the troops to the hardships of a Winter campaign, which they will in all probability have to face. It is affirmed by the headquarters officials that the second contingent will in the point of training be rather superior, if anything, to the first one. It will be thoroughly trained in squad and company drill at local mobilization points, in bayonet practice and exercised into good physical condition. It can receive its training in larger formations and movements in England.

The necessity of heading all energies on the enlistment of expeditionary forces will, it is understood, result in the cancelation of the usual Summer training of the militia next year. The mobilization of the city militia regiments, however, is a probability, as the necessity of keeping a large force in Canada itself is realized, and preparations will shortly be commenced to raise in Canada the force of 30,000, which is to be kept almost continually under arms, and from which drafts will be sent from time to time to the front. The militia authorities are still awaiting word from the War Office as to the nature of the force wanted before undertaking this.

TROOPS IN TRAINING

There has been evidence of a gratifying desire on the part of Canadian volunteers to engage in voluntary training. It was stated at the Militia Department to-day that the men of two Toronto regiments have been practically under canvas since the selection of the first contingent, and have been undertaking training to fit themselves for service. The same is true of some places in the West. It was also stated that the roll of the new French-Canadian regiment which is being raised, is now complete with 1,100 names, that there were 3,600 in all on the list of volunteers, and that the officers have been chosen.

As regards the matter of equipment for the second contingent the Militia Department states that such good progress has been made that the greater part of the equipment for the second contingent is already on hand.

Examiner Will Publish Letters From Soldiers

The Examiner will be glad to receive and will publish letters of special interest which are received by local people from friends or relatives with the Canadian contingent or with the allied armies at the front. The public interest in the soldiers of our own and the English armies is very great and the publication of the personal happenings will without doubt be eagerly read.

The letters received indicate the splendid spirit in which the men are taking the whole thing. One with the Canadian contingent wrote to a friend from the ship on which he was crossing the ocean: "No doubt you will have heard by this time that I intend to spend the winter in Europe. I may also say that I am going to study music in Germany for a while, while there."

OTONABEE WILL DO ITS SHARE

Patriotic Association Formed to Raise Funds and Doing Work for the Soldiers and Others in Need of Help

ENTHUSIASM SHOWN

A very successful patriotic meeting was held at the Foresters' Hall at Greystock, in the Township of Otonabee, last evening, for the purpose of organizing a local Patriotic Association for the purpose of raising funds and doing work for the soldiers and others in need of assistance, caused by the great war. A representative attendance of residents were present, including a large number of ladies, and in addition, a number of Peterborough citizens were present to assist in the organization.

Mr. Joshua Smithson occupied the chair, and Reeve Anderson acted as Secretary. Miss Peck, Mrs. Travers, and Mrs. Arthur Stevenson of Peterborough gave interesting explanations of the nature of the work, and Dr. Cameron, Reeve Anderson, the Chairman, and Mr. F. D. Kerr also addressed the meeting.

At the conclusion of the addresses active organization was at once commenced, and the following officers were elected:

President—Mrs. W. A. Anderson.
Vice-Pres.—Mrs. Greystock.
Secretary—Mrs. J. Collins.
Treasurer—Miss Rutherford.
Committee — Miss Dixon, Miss Crowley, Miss J. Thompson, Mrs. R. Nurse, Mrs. Pickel, Miss Hamilton, Mrs. Smithson, Mrs. C. Greystock, Mr. F. Foote, Mr. S. Rutherford and Mr. E. Dixon.

From the enthusiasm displayed it is evident that the Township of Otonabee will do substantial work in patriotically meeting the demands caused by the gigantic struggle in which Great Britain and her Colonies are engaged.

The Township and Trustees are holding a special meeting of the ratepayers on Friday evening at the Village of Keene and it is expected that all the local centres in the Township will organize on similar lines.

CONTINGENT WILL START TO DRILL DAILY

Orders are Issued to the Local Recruits That They Must Parade Each Day at 2 o'clock at Armouries.

RECRUITING TO-NIGHT

Peterborough's second quota for the overseas contingent is not yet completed and recruiting will continue each night until the required number has been secured. Orders were issued last night to commence regular drill to-day and henceforth the squad will drill every afternoon at 2 o'clock with Sergt. Instructor Dunkerley in charge.

So far no orders have been received by the 34th Battery to begin recruiting, but Col. Young already has the names of some twenty-five men who are anxious to go.

The following for the 57th contingent has been issued:

Volunteers for Second Contingent.

Volunteers who have already been enlisted in the second contingent will parade for drill at the armouries hereafter at 2 p.m. daily.

More men are required and all those who have not yet enlisted and who desire to do so should be at the armouries to-night at 8 p.m. for medical examination. The list cannot be kept open much longer.

1100 DEAD GERMANS FOUND IN TRENCH AFTER ATTACK BY THE BRITISH

Official Bureau Reviews Operations Up to Oct. 20th---British Have Been Reinforced and Have Assisted in the Extension of the Allies' Lines.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Eng., October 27.—The official bureau makes public to-day the story of an eye-witness, and brings the general course of operations in France up to October 20th. The arrival of reinforcements, it says, enabled the British troops to assist in the extension of the allies lines, where the enemy advanced from the northeast and east, holding a front extending from Mont des Cats, about ten miles northeast of Hazebrouck, through Meteren, five miles south of that point, and then to Estaires, thirteen miles west of Lille, on the River Lys.

Describing an incident of the fighting on the night of October 16th, the narrative says that the important crossing of Lys at Warneton was strongly held by the Germans, with a barricade loop-holed at the bottom to enable the men to fire lying down. "Our cavalry with artillery, blew the barricade to pieces, and scattered the defenders." The narrative continues: "Advancing three quarters of mile our troops reached a square, when one of the buildings appeared to leap skywards. A sheet of flames and showers of star shells at the same time made the place as light as day, and enabled the enemy esconced in the surrounding houses to pour a devasting fire from rifles and machine guns. Our cavalry extracted themselves with the losses of one officer wounded and nine men killed and wounded, but a party of volunteers went back and carried off their wounded comrades from the inferno." "On Tuesday, October 20th, a determined but unsuccessful attack was made against virtually the whole of our lines. At one point, where one of our brigades made a counter attack, eleven hundred German dead were found in a trench and forty prisoners were taken."

LONDON, October 27.—The correspondent of the Daily Mail in northern France, telegraphing under date of Sunday night, regarding the fighting on the River Yyzer, says there were 2,500 German bodies in the Yser canal this morning after the fighting in the night; many of them were drowned and others were bayoneted. The very water itself was bloody, while Dixmunde's streets were strewn thickly with the dead. "These ghoulish facts alone give some idea of the savageness of the fighting, the desperation of the German attacks, and the stubbornness of the allies' resistance." "The night was hell from dark to dawn. At almost every point of the line man opposed man, sometimes a few hundred yards distance, but more often in close grip. Face to face the men even wrestled, and died by drowning each other in the canal's waters. The Germans had orders to get through that night cost what it might." "It is believed that some 5,000 Germans crossed the River Yyzer but hardly one of them got back. Those to the north and the north-east of Dixmunde, probably 2,000, were met by a fine rally of the Belgian cavalry and infantry. When Sunday morning broke the dead and wounded were everywhere. Dixmunde was a cemetery, but in the woods not far away the Germans still lingered. They held the positon under a desperate fire and eventually were reinforced; the allies could not oust them, and the Germans are still across the river Yser at some points."

THE LEOPARD'S SPOTS.

Great Britain has in her time done a deal of variegated as well as vigorous fighting. She has had most of the principal nations of Europe as enemies at one time and allies at another. Time was when she had Prussia for an ally—notably in the Seven-Years' war—1756-63. That was a time when Britain had her hands rather full — fighting the French and the revolting colonies in America. Even with this handicap she was with the under dog as she is to-day in the case of Belgium. Austria, Russia and Saxony at that time had eyes on Silesia, and wanted to partition Prussia among them. Britain joined hands with Prussia. During the contest Great Britain had to finance Prussia in order to help keep her armies in the field; and it will be no surprise in the light of recent developments to learn that Prussia never repaid the subsidies Britain had advanced. We see that the bad faith, the national dishonesty, the disregard of treaties shown by Prussia in these latter days, are the fruits of inherited dishonesty, and main fides. Like the leopard's spots, the stain of crookedness, in the militant German class will not out.

PATRIOTISM BEGINS AT HOME.

The Examiner has frequently contended that few or none of the natural products of Canada should be exported except in the state of ultimate manufacture. It so happens as a matter of history that while the Canadian soldiers were mustering at Valcartier, the first "contingent' for the aid of the Empire landed in London. Much as the offer of Canada to send thousands of men, horses and guns to the front thrilled the seat of Empire, this quiet arrival of the first contingent struck the first practical note in the business of Imperial co-operation. It landed as silently as Kitchener landed his expeditionary force at Boulogne. And it got to work even more quickly.

The news of the first victory of the contingent appeared in the British press in the form of a statement that since the arrival of the first cargo of the million bags of flour given by Canada to Great Britain, the price of flour had stopped going up.

If an army marches on its stomach, surely a nation at home in time of war depends on its supply of food. The million bags of flour donated by the government of Canada to England as a gift of war meant more to England than the gift of three million bushels of wheat that it takes to make the flour.

Why? Because a million bags of flour represents the labour of 1,000 Canadians for 50 days at $2 a day. It keeps a milling industry that cost $5,000,000 busy for 50 days. It keeps 1,000 Canadian homes from facing the problem of unemployment. It represents the most highly skilled labour and the best organized enterprise in that particular industry, working on the best material of that kind produced in Canada, and when that million bags of flour contingent arrives at the docks of London, it means as much for the cause of England as the gift of fighting men.

A gift of three million bushels of wheat would have been just as simple and quite as easy. It would have been much less patriotic. Now and then we naturally get weary of the man who is always preaching patriotism without putting it into practice, but there has been brains enough in our patriotism in this case, to make a gift to the cause of the Empire that at the same time puts honest labour and well-earned wages into the hands of its people. We have discovered that patriotism like charity begins at home.

The man that can help himself while he helps somebody else is doing more for the cause of civilization than the man who takes money from Peter to pay it to Paul.

A NEWSPAPER AT SEA.

A newspaper at sea may not be anything new in the metaphorical sense. Any contemporary opposition newspaper will tell a journalistic confrere very often, especially at election times, that it is at sea in the matter of facts and policy. But a real live newspaper at sea, edited by a Peterborough boy in collaboration with a Toronto boy, is more of a rarity. The Examiner received this morning from Lieut. H. A. Pearson, "the Y. M. C. A. man," formerly of Peterborough, a copy of a souvenir Number of the "Daily Arcadian," bearing date "Somewhere at Sea, Oct. 14th, 1914." This paper was printed on board His Majesty's Transport Steamer "Arcadian," which carried to England the 19th Alberta Dragoons Divisional Cavalry, the Canadian Engineers' Detachment, the Field Ambulance Detachment, and the Tenth Infantry Battalion. It is in magazine form and contains a great deal of interest to land lubbers, and things specially appealing to the members of the contingent afloat. Under the department, "Bulls Eyes" are a few interrogation points, samples of which are—"Wouldn't a check be the best way to pay Germany's war taxes on Belgium?" and "Aren't any recruit's teeth good enough to show the enemy?" The editors of the Daily Arcadian are Lieut. H. A. Pearson and Lieut. D. D. Eppa, of the Toronto World. Among the contributions to this most interesting souvenir number is a poem by D. Douglas Eppa, entitled " "To the D. C. L. I. Recruit." As a sample of breezy literary work, such as one would expect on the open sea, it is considered worth reproducing and it will be found in another place on this page. The souvenir number of the Daily Arcadian will be dearly cherished and will be worthy of a place in the archives of Canada, to be consulted, when the historian shall tell of the work wrought by the members of the Canadian contingent, and its place in this great war. Alas that many of the members of the Canadian contingent on the Arcadian, may not return to tell the tale themselves.

INFORMATION WANTED.

A correspondent, "Ratepayer," whose enquiry appears in our news pages, asks, in view of the lesser cost of concrete pavement in comparison with asphalt, why more of it is not laid down; and he asks the Council to give the public some explanation.

This seems to be a reasonable request, and a response on the part of the City Council would also seem to come within their responsibility as custodians and administrators of the funds contributed, in the form of taxes, to he city treasury.

It seems to be highly probable that the City Council has thoroughly investigated the merits of the forms of pavement that would be the best in the city's interest. If the asphalt we are applying to our street is considered the best, the ratepayers should have some information of the reasons why the Council has adopted it, especially as the cost, if the correspondent, "Katepayer," is right, is much greater than concrete. If this is the fact, is it, also, an established fact that the durability of asphalt is in direct ratio to its greater cost as compared with concrete?

A layman cannot, of course, presume to form an opinion on this subject, and it would be interesting to the long-suffering and highly-taxed ratepayer to have the thing clearly explained. If he can be shown that while asphalt pavement, costs from two to three times per square yard more than concrete, it will last three times as long and be as cheap in the end, the ratepayer if a reasonable man, will be inclined to bear the cost with greater philosophic calm. The impression is abroad that concrete is from a half to one-third cheaper than asphalt and ratepayers have noted and spoke of the wearing character of the Chambers street concrete, which was laid, it is understood, as an experiment. How is the experiment working out? It is apparent that the Chambers street concrete is standing traffic with less wear than some parts of the asphalt pavement, though it has been in use a year longer.

We should be informed since we pay the shot, if concrete pavement is cheaper, what is the objections to its employment. If an architect recommends to a client, certain material as better though more costly than others, the architect would not consider that he was being unreasonably urged if he were asked to explain wherein superiority exists and how his client would get value for the additional expenditure. For instance, it is said that a certain kind of shingle now manufactured costs twice as much as the best cedar shingles, but that it will last a lifetime. If the people can be assured that the asphalt form of pavement, which costs, say two and a half times more than concrete will last two and a half times longer, they will pay the additional cost with greater cheerfulness, if there is anything that can impart cheer to the depressing act of paying taxes. The public have never been informed on this subject.

One objection, besides the low cost —from an average alderman's view point—popularly mentioned, is that the concrete is more noisy under traffic than asphalt. This may be true, but it would require a very delicate phonometer to detect the difference in the sound made by a horse passing from Chambers street to Hunter street. A man would have a very sharp ear who, with eyes shut, could tell by the difference in the click of a horse's feet the moment when he passed from the concrete to the asphalt, and vice versa.

This is, however, a comparatively minor matter! It is evident, that unless the City Council can show some ratepayers that asphalt is much more lasting, he will not be satisfied; and, though concrete may make more noise under traffic, asphalt will make a good deal more noise when the tax bills come in.

TO THE D.C.L.I. RECRUIT

Recruity, when you're standing on parade, on parade,
And you hear Trelawney's march being played, being played;
Think of those who fought and fell in grim Lucknow's fireswept hell
Learn like them to do your duty undismayed.

Recruity, when the colours are uncased, are uncased,
And they tell the honoured paths your sires have traced, sires have traced;
Make a resolution then, to play the game like men,
And uphold the Regiments' honour where'er placed.

Recruity, when in town you're drinking beer, drinking beer,
And your legs begin to feel a trifle queer, trifle queer;
Don't start and play the goat, and disgrace your scarlet coat,
Hold the honour of the Reg'ment ever dear.

Recruity, when war's game you called to play, called to play,
And half rations is the order of the day, of the day,
Don't start and curse your luck, grousing's never sign of pluck,
Grin and bear it in the rightful soldier way.

Recruity, when you are making your last stand, your last stand,
And your bayonet's fixed to meet them hand to hand,
Tho' next cartridge be your last, live up to your regiment's past,
Count it honour that you die for Motherland.

CHORUS:
So here's to the D. C. L. I.
Ever ready to do or die,
Ne'er yet did they blench, in the field or the trench,
Brave hearts of the D. C. L. I.

—D. Douglas Eppa, in the Daily Arcadian, at Sea, Oct. 14, 1914.

KING'S DAUGHTERS DOING GOOD WORK

The annual meeting of the King's Daughters was held on Tuesday last, at which the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—Mrs. A. E. Coulthard.
Sec.-Treas.—Miss M. A. English.
Hospital Committee—Mrs. Travers and Miss Pearse.
Home Committee—Mrs. Harvey and Miss Munro.

The secretary presented the following report:

"During the past year the King's Daughters have held ten regular meetings, which through the courtesy of the Library Board we were permitted to hold in the Board Room of the Public Library. The work has been carried on quietly and systematically. The Hospital and Protestant Home have been visited regularly by our energetic committees; the annual distribution of Christmas cheer was carried out when over 100 baskets were sent out; over 150 visits were paid by the different members to families in need of sympathy and material help. Besides this, which is along the usual order of our work, our Circle has been instrumental in securing an artificial limb for a young girl at an expense of over $90.00, part of which was collected from friends outside our Society.

The annual charity ball was held on New Year's night, which netted the Society the sum of $269.33, and for the success of which much credit is due Mr. Gerald Rackham, who again acted as Hon. Secretary of the Ball committee.

Respectfully submitted,
M. A. ENGLISH.

Philosophy of Working Together

"It is perhaps no exaggeration to say that in no other period of history has the prevention of disease occupied so large a place in the thoughts of every intelligent community as obtains at this present day. Organizations of intelligent men and women exist in all of the large centres of population whose sole aim and purpose is the conservation of the public health. Their time and means are freely given to the end that their fellows of every class and condition, may not only be nursed back to health when they fall ill, but that their well-being may also be preeserved by a healthful environment, and pure and wholesome food, in order to limit diseases they may contract, avoid unnecessary ailments, and prolong their lives to their families and society.

No man is or can be "a law unto himself," but is, in a large sense, his brother's keeper. Individualism must be submerged in order that every human unit in every place have a community of interest with every other."—Conservation.

"BANNER OF ST. GEORGE"

Elgar's Composition Will be the Next Offering of the Peterboro' Choral Society.

The Peterborough Choral Society meet to-night in the Collegiate Hall at 8 p.m. The new work to be rehearsed is Sir Edward Elgar's "Banner of St. George," which has achieved a world-wide popularity. Elgar's compositions are as well, if not better known than any other modern writer of choral music, and in view of the present awful war, the story of the destruction of the dragon presented in solo and chorus will be of particular interest. Every member is asked to be present, and bring along cash and tickets relating to the recent production of "Judas Maccabaeus" in aid of the Patriotic Fund.

FALL SESSION OF COUNTY COUNCIL

The Peterborough County Council will meet on Tuesday, November 3rd. While this is the regular fall session of the Council, it is being held nearly one month earlier than in previous years. Questions respecting the Patriotic Fund and other pressing matters of equal importance, are directly responsible for the early session. This will hardly appeal to the majority of the municipal representatives, as it will tend to interfere with their fall work. The session will probably last throughout the week terminating on Friday evening or Saturday morning.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

THE WAR HAS PLAYED HAVOC WITH ATHLETICS

LONDON, Oct. 14.—As we consider and feel the effect of the war upon the ordinary activities of our lives, the position of sport attracts our attention. This is probably more interesting and unusual here than in Canada. There the proportion of men drawn into the vortex up to the present at least, is too small to cause great disturbance. The scene of conflict is too far away to enable anxiety or even complete realization to change the current of the average life. In European countries it is different. There is a tendency, on the Continent, to allow the war to monopolize all thought and activity. Indispensable affairs are carried on, but it seems that many are dispensed with needlessly.

Apart from the inevitable dislocation of business, the more people continue in their daily habits and amusements the better it is for them and for the country, provided always that in so doing they are not subtracting from their patriotic usefulness. This is realized in France. A proclamation has just been issued urging the youth and uncalled men to keep up and initiate games and exercises. Whether this will take effect cannot yet be said. France is inclined to relapse into a state of passivity and indifference to humdrum life. Ordinary interests pale beside the light of the firing line. Excitement is aroused only by French successes or German atrocities. About the sporting activities of the Germans we are not well informed. We rest in the hope that they will keep in condition by running from the allied armies. But the continent as a whole we usually associate with indoor and less rugged sports. Our chief curiosity is regarding England.

Can't Frighten British.

"I have just left an American journalist who was with the British soldiers in the trenches at Antwerp. I asked him if they were nervous. "The English don't know how to be frightened," he said. "They haven't enough imagination." This expresses the attitude of the country. The lack of imagination may retard a levee en masse, but it is as efficient a check to hasty terror and confusion. All the men that are required are coming forward. The rest are helping by continuing to work the machinery of society.

We are not surprised to find that a large proportion of the men enlisting are addicted to various kinds of athletic exercise. The outdoor and athletic man is usually more fitted, by physical training and mental bias, for a soldier's life than the sedentory or student type. In consequence of this, recruiting has played havoc with sporting engagements. Absolute lack of men has compelled many clubs to disband. Rugby teams seem to suffer especially, the suggestion being made that the men trained in the game will make the best soldiers, as most accustomed to brutality and bloodshed. There will be no Rugby Union games until the war is over. The Harlequins and Blackheath, two of the leading clubs, have all their men in the service. In fact, it is hard to find a prominent player who has not joined. A regiment of rugby players was suggested, but found to be impracticable. However, several companies of one hundred and twenty men have been formed.

1,500 Leagues Abandon Schedules.

Regarding association fotoball, there are 250,000 amateur players registered, so that naturally they have contributed their quota. From London alone it is estimated that 35,000 players have enlisted. Fifteen hundred leagues have abandoned schedules owing to lack of men. The professionals are finishing their league games. There was a certain amount of criticism of this, but an arrangement was made with the War Office by which recruiting was forbidden at the matches and the use of grounds was given to the military. The players themselves, the association, and the ground-owners are all contributing liberally to the multitudinous relief funds.

All this disruption of athletics has been rendered necessary by the desertion to duty of the competitors. Yet it is remedied in another form and place. A widespread movement has been started to give recruits play as well as work. Leagues are being arranged between regiments to compete in various sports, mostly football. Even golf is open to "Kitchener's Boys." The change should eventually add to the skill and sportsmanship of the nation, for now the spectator is eliminated, and everyone takes a part.

Those sports whose devotees are older or unfitted for the field retain a great part of their usual popularity. Horse racing flourishes under the added interest of a French and Belgian invasion. Golf suffers to some extent, chiefly, I hear, on account of lack of money. There is a relief fund born every minute. But unnecessary expenses are being cut down in favour of patriotic charity. In tennis the leading players have enlisted. A. F. Wilding has a commission in France; the older men have joined reserve forces.

University Students to Front.

Perhaps the greatest change which will come over any community in England will be that affecting the universities. They are hotbeds, not of unsuspected, but of buried patriotism. In peace the word "King" was only heard when there were two of three (or even four). When war broke out every man rushed to the nearest place where he could join. This will affect the appearance and still more the occupation of Oxford and Cambridge—sport. On the average two-thirds of the men have gone. From Magdalen College 100 out of 150 undergraduates are serving; from Oriel 120 from 150. These are fair examples. The men remaining nearly all only have one leg or are under 19. Even they are drilling feverishly to the exclusion of study and amusement. by the decision of the Vice-Chancellor khaki is regarded as academic dress. Militarism has found a fertile soil. Naturally those prominent in athletics will not be back to study. Of the rowing blues, I believe that all from both universities are serving. Rugby and other sports tell the same tale. There are many undergraduates from those few countries of the world which remain neutral, United States chiefly. These and the younger men will carry on a little of rowing and other games. But there is to be no racing on the river nor competition on the field. The boat race will lapse next spring. Even if an extraordinary speedy end to the war should intervene, the shock and memory of so many friends and memory of so many friends and friendly rivals having lost their lives would prohibit it. The spirit of Oxford is in France. History is more interesting to make than to read about. And, when, if ever, the thousand stories of the war are known, there will be found brave tales of youthful undergraduates. Many are already at the front, and many have already died there. They are mostly despatch riders on motorcycles. I have heard some of their hair-breadth escapes and heart-rending accidents. The hunt is laughed at in England, but he has proved himself hard to crack.

Olympic Talk Dead.

In a letter from a prominent English rowing man which I received recently there was voiced an opinion which I believe is common to many people here. He says: "One good thing, there'll be no Olympic games; so the Kaiser has done some good after all." I have seen one or two remarks in Canadian papers regarding the next Olympic games, and suggesting the United States as possible hosts. There is a decided faction here against the spirit and the form of the competition. Personally I am in favour of them, but after the present situation clears there will be an additional inertia and antipathy to overcome in resuscitating international athletics. In the meantime it is of no use to talk about them in this country.

FOOTBALL LEAGUE CHAMPIONS.

Southern League Team Defeated for Fourth Year in Succession.

LONDON, Oct. 26.—For the fourth year in succession a team representative of the Football League has triumphed over a Southern League eleven, to-day's score being—The League 2, Southern League 1.—Only once in six year have the Southerners proved successful in this annual event, winning at Tottenham in 1911 by three goals to two.

INDIANS IN ACTION

Britain's Allies Have First Clash With Enemy and Charge Them With Bayonet.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—A despatch to The Daily Telegraph dated "Northern France," relates the first instance of the British Indian troops coming into action.

"It was at La Bassee last week," says the despatch, "when by a great effort the Germans carried the British trenches, and the position looked dangerous. An avalanche of the enemy poured through, evidently supposing that the way was open to the canal. They had a rude awakening!

"The supports of the British line here were the Indian troops, who had been thirsting to prove their quality. It was a bayonet affair and the German advance was beaten and broken.

"The Indians ran through them, using the steel in their workmanlike fashion and thereafter, too busy to receive the right and left fire of the British infantry who awaited their coming.

"Not only did the Indians regain the lost trenches, but they pursued the enemy down the hill until their commanders recalled them."

At Ypres an unsuccessful German attack resulted in casualties of 3,000. At La Bassee they are apparently doing somewhat better. Their massing of infantry with heavy artillery seems at present to be slowly advancing in this section. Their progress is by no means alarming and can be firmly held should it become dangerous.

The heavy punishment inflicted on the German troops in the last few days has raised the hopes of everyone to a high pitch. An officer who flew over the enemy's lines yesterday morning says that the Germans were advance to the attack shoulder to shoulder. The terrific fire unquestionably by this body demonstrative shell until they came within 300 yards' range, and then gave them 15 rounds and it is all over. But the German artillery fire is still very good.

Many Aliens Naturalized.

OTTAWA, Oct. 27. — When the High Court opened yesterday, the names of 143 aliens who are desirous of becoming British subjects were called, and there being no objections, they were declared eligible for naturalization. The list was longer than has ever been presented to an Ottawa court. A large proportion of the applicants were Germans.

KEY TO SAILING FORMATION OF GREAT CANADIAN ARMADA

Here is an excellent key to the sailing form of Canada's great fleet of ships which transported the expeditionary force to England. The fleet sailed in three lines, and was surrounded by fighting ships. The fleet is shown here as sailing down the page, the cruisers Eclipse, Diana and Charybdis leading the way. The cruiser Lancaster and battleships Princess Royal, King Edward and Glory sailed on the two flanks of the fleet. The fighting ships which took the lead and followed behind are shown in the key. In all there were 40 ships:

Col.-Sergt. Howarth of 57th Writes of Contingents' Trip

Colour-Sergt. Fred Howarth, Albert street, writing home to his wife, includes reference to incidents of the overseas contingent of general interest. He writes in part: "It is a grand sight to see so many vessels together, twenty-nine of them all sailing in three long lines. There is a fast cruiser just in the rear and a first-class battleship on each flank all travelling at the same rate of speed. We have plenty of fun in our cabin and the voyage has been a long laugh since the day of sailing. The boys are all in good condition and are fat for the want of exercise. But we will get plenty of that when we land. We had programmes of sports, boxing, wrestling and cock fighting. The entry list has been a long one, as we have 1,100 men on board. We had to have company competition and send up the champion of each company. George Brinton represents us in boxing and a young chap named Hobey Rogers in wrestling. Fred Stevens came in for the final in cock fighting and Rogers for heavy wrestling. The rough weather put an end to our sports.

I am first president of our sergeants' mess; quite an honour you know. We had a fine night yesterday. The super dreadnought "Princess Royal" that had been on our right flank came in and steamed slowly past us about fifty yards. All the crew were on the deck cheering us. She was stripped for action and is a perfect fighting machine.

When we got into Plymouth Sound the sight was a grand one. There were destroyers, submarines, cruisers and battleships, all on the alert. We are glad to get to land and want to get down to business. Taking it all around it has been a very nice voyage. There has been an absence of the little quarrels that sometimes happen when a crowd of men are together in one place for an extended time.

Sergeant Howarth wrote from the T. S. S. Cassandra and mailed his letter upon landing. He mentioned that Major Bennett had been ill several days.

City Solicitor Takes Action

In the Matter of an Indigent Patient Who Was Treated in Nichols Hospital

Mr. G. N. Gordon, City Solicitor, has notified the Brantford authorities of his intention to test the question of the city's liability in the matter respecting the maintenance of Edward Haywood as an indigent patient in Nichols Hospital. Should the City of Brantford decline to settle the account, which amounts to about sixty dollars, action will probably be taken, to recover the amount.

According to Relief Officer Miller, who investigated the case, Heywood arrived in the city early one morning and was removed to the hospital the same day. Prior to his arrival here, Heywood claims to have worked in Brantford where he was employed with the Buck Stove Company for upwards of twelve years. Brantford claims that Heywood became a permanent resident of Peterborough prior to the indisposition which necessitated medical treatment. Heywood has since secured employment out of town.

SCHOOL TEAMS TIED IN GAME

A fast game of football was played yesterday afternoon at the Queen Mary School grounds when the King Edward and Queen Mary school elevens clashed. The game was well played, but both teams were so well up in the defensive tactics that after the score reached 1-1 neither could break the tie. The final score was 1-1. The goalkeepers did some good work. Mr. Clarke, principal of the King Edward School refereed satisfactorily.

"What should be the relationship of a business man in his own city?" It is this subject that Dr. Gordon will discuss before the hundred business men who will be present at the banquet to-morrow noon in tnhe Oriental Hotel. Dr. Gordon seems well qualified to deal with this theme, and a large number of business men have expressed and demonstrated their eagerness to meet and hear him at the banquet.

The luncheon, which is under the auspices of the Board of Trade, will be held at one o'clock in the Oriental Hotel. Mr. Edward Hesselberg, the famous pianist and Mr. Albert E. Greenlaw, the noted coloured singer, will be present and will render musical selections. The indications are that the luncheon will be a very pleasant and largely attended affair.

VON MOLTKE DYING.

Gen. von Falkenhayn Becomes Chief of German Staff.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—The Rome correspondent of the Reuters Agency says that according to dispatches received in Rome from Berlin, Major-General Erich Von Falkenhayn, the German Minister of War, has been appointed chief of the General Staff, succeeding Gen. Helmuth von Moltke, who is ill.

Advices from Amsterdam state that Gen. Helmuth von Moltke, chief of the German General Staff, is in a dying condition, and has been started for his home in Berlin on a litter.

Whether or not this is the reason for the change in staff is open to doubt, but circumstantial stories have been current for some time to the effect that Von Moltke has been suffering from a grave affection of the liver ever since war broke out, and that campaign conditions have brought about complications which make his life a matter of months.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

EMPRESS HOTEL SCENE OF BANQUET TO CITY OFFICIALS

Mr. and Mrs. G. N. Graham Host and Hostess to City Fathers, Heads of Departments and the Press.

A COMPLETE HOTEL

After the Council meeting last night the City Fathers were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. George Graham at the new Empress hotel for a couple of very pleasant hours. The Councillors were received by the proprietor of the splendid new hostelry and were shown all through the building. They manifested considerable interest and surprise at the quality and moderness of the fittings and decoration of the hotel throughout, and later at a dinner in the grill room they were given an opportunity of expressing their impressions of the hotel.

The heads of the departments as well as the City Fathers were present, the gathering consisting of Messrs. H. Evans, W. A. Howard, W. Green, T. A. S. Hay, G. L. Howse, P. Thompson, A. Weir, Dr. McPherson, Mayor Buller, Alds. Duncan, Green, Johnston, Stratton, Duffus, and Dobbin, and Ex-Ald. Anderson, representatives of the Review and Examiner were also in attendance.

The spread was a sumptuous one, in keeping in every way with the splendour of the hotel. Their visit to the various departments, also thoroughly equipped, had given the guests an idea of what to expect in the grill room, but the dinner served exceeded their expectations. There were not only a number of courses, but a splendid variety in the menu, and each dish was exceedingly palatable and unusually well served. The attack on the viands occupied a considerable length of time, but after the last course had been given ample time to disappear the Mayor called the assemblage to order and opened the programme with a short speech.

Mayor Buller said that those present were grateful to Mr. and Mrs. Graham for their kind hospitality. The hotel was a credit to Peterborough, the decorations beautiful, the equipment adequate and modern, and the house up to date in every way. He was satisfied that within its gates the public would be well taken care of.

Ald. Stratton, in a neat speech, complimented the management on the splendid manner in which every detail of the splendid hotel had been attended to. It was a gigantic undertaking and had been well carried out. The Empress was an hotel second to none in any city in the Dominion the size of Peterborough. The lighting, fixture, etc., had all been looked to, the accommodation was good, and he wished Mr. Graham success in his enterprise.

Dr. McPherson spoke briefly, thanking the proprietor for his kindness in arranging for such a gathering and such a banquet. He suggested to the City Fathers that in regard for the magnificent new edifice that some effort be made to keep the market square in a presentable condition. He thanked Mr. Graham and his wife and staff for their kindness.

Chief Howard expressed the hope that it would not be the last gathering of those around the festive board in the Empress hotel, and brought his speech to a close with a spicy story.

On the motion of Alds. Duncan and Johnston a hearty vote of thanks was moved to Mr. and Mrs. Graham. Their health was heartily toasted, and the efforts sang in appreciation of their kindness, "for they are jolly good fellows." Ald. Johnston in seconding the motion, said that he hoped Mr. Graham would receive the patronage and appreciation of the public in regard to his efforts to serve them.

CITY'S INTERESTS WELL SAFEGUARDED

Every Preparation Being Made to Have City's Case in Good Condition for Arbitration Proceedings.

City Solicitor Gordon was in Toronto yesterday consulting with Mr. Cowan and the Ontario Hydro Commission in regard to preparing for the arbitration proceeding in connection with tthe property of the Peterborough Ligth and Power Company. The City's side of the case, it is reported, is being most thoroughly prepared and everything will be done to insure the protectionof the City's interests in the matter. The arbitration is to fix the price that the City will have to pay for the P. L. and P. Co.'s plant.

The City have already paid $100,000 into court, which is drawing interest at 3 p.c. and costing interest at 5 p.c. It is thought that there can be some arrangement made to transfer this money to the company at once, thus saving the City the 2 p.c. interest on the money. Mr. Ross of Montreal has been engaged as the City's arbitrator, while it is thought that Mr. Wallace Nesbitt, K. C., Toronto, will be the company's arbitrator. The third has yet to be agreed upon.

FINANCE COMMITTEE'S REPORT ADOPTED

To the Council of the City of Peterborough.

Gentlemen—Your Finance Committee beg leave to report and recommend as follows:

1. That a grant of $50 be made to the Peterborough branch of the Industrial Association of Ontario to enable the branch to try the plan for an Employment Bureau and similar work.

2. That an account from H. J. McCannon for $210 be paid.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Ald. W. J. Johnston,
Chairman.

REV. MR. TURNBULL TO SPEAK HERE

The Women's Council has arranged to have Rev. Mr. Turnbull speak here on the lecture room of the Public Library on Friday evening next at 8 o'clock, in the interests of charity. Mr. Turnbull was for many years president of the Associated Charities of the City of Toronto, and his remarks along these lines will be followed by great interest. All citizens are invited to be present.

A MUSICAL ALLIANCE

George Street Methodist and St. Paul's Presbyterian Choirs to Render "Holy City"

It is a pleasing thing in these sad days, when such awful and bloody warfare is waging between the powers of Europe, to hear of an alliance or entente being entered into, which involves no nation or people, but has for its sole and only purpose the affording to the citizens of Peterborough pleasure of a high and artistic character.

The amalgamation of George Street Methodist and St. Paul's Presbyterian choirs for the rendering of that very beautiful work of Gaul's, "The Holy City," which was written specially for him by the Birmingham festival of 1892, is a step in the right direction, and will tend to a friendly and healthy rivalry between these two well-known choirs which can only result in good.

The "Holy City" abounds in beautiful solos, duets, trios, quartettes, which will be divided between the soloists of both choirs, also of soul-stirring choruses, some of which are double ones resuiring two full and complete choirs. This combination will endeavour, through the great art of music, which even in a time of stress such as we now are living in must not be crushed aside and left out of our lives, to hush for a time in our hearts and minds the road of cannon and the thought of our brave and heroic soldiers as they struggle for our freedom and liberty, and try to turn our thoughts to the King of Kings and to that Holy City where there is no more warfare.

The amalgamation has been unanimously approved of by the members of both choirs, and also by their leaders, Mr. John Allan and Mr. J. H. Renwick.

The splendid capabilities of both choirs and of their leaders is well known and the public may confidently look forward to hearing one of the finest choral combinations ever heard in this city.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

The spirit of Hallowe'en will be rampant at the Y.W.C.A. on Friday evening, when the annual Hallowe'en masquerade will be held. There will be no formal programme and no one knows the fun the entertainment committee have been planning behind closed doors, but we are certain several witches have been imported for the occasion, and visits to the market would lead us to believe there will be pumpkin Jack o' lanterns.

Letters from the old country seem to say that at present almost every girl and woman is taking up the St. John Ambulance course in Glasgow. A letter received from a talented pianiste, said: "We take our lectures every day."

Dr. Sutton is now giving the first course of lectures in First Aid at the local Association. Every girl and woman in Peterborough should attend these lectures.

PROFESSOR THINKS WAR WILL BE LONG

OTTAWA, Oct. 26.—Professor Masao Kambe of the Imperial University of Kyoto, Japan, who is here on his way back to Japan after a trip around the world, was in Paris when the war broke out. Having visited Holland, Sweden and Denmark afterwards, and seen how Germany was getting munitions of war and other supplies from them, he says that he is convinced the war will be a prolonged one.

He stated also that Russia for some time had been buying large numbers of rifles, field artillery and siege guns from Japan.

MAGISTRATE DISCOURAGES WEEKLY "DONNYBROOK"

Another "Disgraceful" Affair Staged in Lindsay on Saturday Night—Members of the Police Force Were Attacked

LINDSAY, Oct. 26.—Another one of those disgraceful street fights which seem to be a week end feature in Lindsay, took place on Saturday night near the corner of Kent and Cambridge Streets. It appears that it has become a practice for certain young men to gather on Saturday, fill up with whiskey and then proceed to pummel each other. Saturday evening a young man from South Ops was the ring-leader in the fracas. He took off his coat and paraded up and down, looking for fight, and declaring he could thrash any person from Emily. His challenge was punctuated by blasphemous language, and it was not long before a fistic battle was on. The fight attracted a large crowd and also Chief of Police Short and Constable Wood. The Chief nabbed the Emily man, but Constable Woods met with stiff opposition in attempting to arrest the Ops fighter. He threatened to wipe the police force out, and followed this up by attempting to seize the officer by the throat. Both officer and assailant carried the battle out on to the highway, but after the constable had given the youth a love-tap, he was satisfied to go to the cells.

Fined $29.50.

At Monday morning's session of the court the South Ops young man faced three charges, only one of which was pressed—that of creating an affray in a public place. He was fined $29.50, and the magistrate pointed out to the accused that according to the statutes he was liable to imprisonment for a year at hard labour. The other charge, "challenging to fight," which is also punishable by a three-years term, was not pressed. Neither was the serious charge of resisting an officer.

The accused told the magistrate that he was twenty-two years of age, and did not indulge in liquor because he liked it. The magistrate said he had the power to place him on the Indian list, and if he appeared before him again for being drunk, he would exercise that authority, and no coaxing or pleading on the part of his parents would have his name removed. He was a young man just starting out in life, but he was fast shaping for the "down and out" class. These weekly Donnybrooks in Lindsay must cease, and if the accused did not want a prison term, he must mend his ways. A term in prison was staring him in the face, but one more chance would be given him.

Pleaded Guilty.

The Emily young man who stepped into the breach in behalf of his township, pleaded guilty to a charge of being drunk and disorderly, and was assessed $6.30.

At the fight on Saturday night there were some seventy-five young men who were virtually aiders or abettors in the affray. Chief Short warned a number of them, who were in court that they were guilty of a serious offence, and could be severely punished. The police of the town must be protected from assault and ill treatment and he intended prosecuting every one who interfered with them in the discharge of their duty.

SERVIANS WHO CAUSED WAR TO DIE WEDNESDAY

Twenty-four Declared Guilty and Servian Army is Within Gun Shot of Them

SARAJEVO, Oct. 26. — To the accompaniment of the thunder and booming of the cannon of the combined Servian-Montenegrin army desperately trying to take the city in time to save them, the 24 persons accused of conspiracy in connection with the Archduke Ferdinand and consort were found guilty of high treason to-day. Sentence will be passed on Wednesday, when it is said all will be ordered immediately to be put to death.

The three leaders, Gavluo Princip, Trifko Grabez, and Nedeldko Gabrinovic, had made the conviction of themselves and their twenty-one accomplices easy by admitting the plot which resulted in the tragedy which brought about the European war. They have been buoyed up by the hope that they would be saved by the Montenegrin and Servian armies which have invaded Bosnia and are trying to take the capital in time to prevent the execution of these men, who are acclaimed as heroes in both Servia and Montenegro.

They will probably not benefit by this, however, inasmuch as the besieging army, after having approached to the outer defences of the City from the south, was driven back eight miles after a week of fierce fighting.

All of the accused were bitterly denounced by the Court which pronounced judgment on them. The fact that they had boldly and defiantly admitted the crime was referred to and there was no doubt, when they were remanded, that the penalty will be death.

The assassination took place in this City on June 28. According to the evidence, the six bombs and four Browning pistols taken from the conspirators after the royal couple were slain, had been furnished to them in Belgrade by Milan Ciganovic and Commander Voija Tankesic of the Servian army. The latter two remained in Servia and one of the demands made by Austria which precipitated the declaration of war was that the two army officers be turned over to her for trial and also that all of the Servian officers implicated in the plot should be punished.

Official Bulletins Say Germans Are Held All Along the Line

PARIS, Oct. 27.—The following official information was given out by the French War Office last night: "In Belgium, Nieuport has been violently bombarded, and the effort of the Germans has continued on the front between Nieuport and Dixmude, without, according to the latest advices, any result whatever having been reached.

"All the front comprised between La Bassee and the Somme has been equally the object of violent attacks at night, all of which have been repulsed.

"On the remainder of the front there is nothing to report."

The official communique of the French War Office, issued yesterday afternoon, says: "During the day of yesterday (Sunday) our front along the general line between Nieuport and Dixmude was maintained. The German force which crossed the Yser between these two towns has not been able to progress.

"Our front has held also in the region between Ypres and Roulers, between Armentieres and Lille, to the west of La Bassee and Lens, and to the east of Arras. This line is continued to the south by the line which already has been indicated in these official communications. During the fighting of recent days the enemy seems to have sustained considerable losses.

"In Russia, to the west of the Vistula and to the north of the Pilica river, the Germans have been captured at the point of the bayonet by the Russians.

"To the south of the Pilica, in the direction of Radom, there has been a lively engagement between the Russians and the Austro-Germans, who lost prisoners and cannon.

"To the south of Boleo, the Russian troops crossed the Vistula by main force, driving the Austrians back. On the River San, and to the south of Przemysl, there have occurred stubborn combats resulting favorably to the Russians. An Austrian column debouching from the Carpathians on Dolina (in Galicia, 22 miles to the south of Stry) was routed."

Hambourg's Libel Suit

Famous Russian Pianist Resents Daily Mail Calling Him a German

LONDON, Oct. 27. — [illegible] bourg, a famous Russian pianist, whom The London Daily Mail chiles a German, has sued the proprietor of that newspaper for libel. The case will be heard next Wednesday.

During a discussion before Justice Darling yesterday the defendant's counsel urged delay on the ground that "there is no reason why the plaintiff should be awarded damages on a rising market."

The judge refused to adopt the view that the Germans would be more popular in London at any time than they will be next Wednesday, and fixed the hearing for that date.

New Councillor Is Welcomed By Fellow Alderman

City Council Met Last Night—Assistant Treasurer Appointed and Claim Dealt With

The Council met last night at eight o'clock, there being present Mayor Buller, Aldermen Duncan, Stratton, Dobbin, Duffus, Green, Johnston, Langford, Weir and McIntyre.

Alderman Weir, the newly-elected representative from East City, was present for the first time and was welcomed to the Council.

Mayor Buller—I wish to say, Alderman Weir, that we are glad to have you with us. We hope that you will be spared to give long service in municipal life and we are sure that your coming across the river will result in benefit to the East City and the whole town.

"Mr. Mayor and Aldermen," replied Alderman Weir. "I wish to thank you for your kind words and good wishes."

An Assistant Treasurer.

Mr. F. Adams, City Treasurer, who has been suffering with eye trouble, wrote the Council asking for a few weeks' leave of absence to undergo an operation which may result in the complete restoration of his eyesight. He also suggested that Miss Jessie Swinton be made assistant treasurer and authorized to sign the city's cheques in his absence. A motion to that effect was made by Aldermen Duffus and McIntyre and carried.

Claims $40.

Dr. Cameron wrote notifying the city that in an accident caused by a bad manhole on Brock street, his auto had been damaged to the extent of $40. He intended to claim that amount. Referred to Legal Committee and chairman of the Board of Works.

Church Tax High.

Messrs. Dumble and Johnston wrote saying that the garbage tax on the George Street Church was illegal and exorbitant, and asked that the amount of taxes already paid be refunded to the treasurer. Referred to Legal Committee.

Sidewalk to School.

The Rev. Father McColl wrote reporting that the 40 feet of sidewalk had been built to the St. Mary's School in the East Ward. He left it with the Council whether the sum of $30 paid for the sidewalk should be refunded or not. It was the unanimous opinion of the Council that the city should pay for the sidewalk, but as no report was to hand it was referred temporarily to the Board of Works.

Can't Build Track.

A letter was read from the Electric Power Company saying that it would be impossible to do the construction work of extending the Street Railway out Charlotte street this year.

To Stop the Wars.

A letter was received from Mr. Joseph Bell asking that a public meeting be held to discuss means of making future wars impossible. The letter was received and the Council were unanimously of the opinion that something should be done in the matter.

Re Standpipes.

Mr. King, who resides in the south of the city reported that while the other standpipes which the Council had decreed must be moved had received attention, the pipe in front of his house, (which had also been ordered to be moved), had not. He was assured it would be attended to immediately.

GERMAN DRIVE TOWARDS THE CHANNEL PORTS AT STANDSTILL

After Crossing the Yser They Found the Belgians Reinforced by British and French and They Lost Heavily.

ALLIES GAIN AT LILLE

LONDON, Oct. 27.—The allies still hold their positions along the line between Dixmude and Nieuport, and are effectually resisting the German offensive north of Ypres.

The crossing of the Yser has apparently marked the end of the German advance there, although a battle is now going on in that region, and both sides have rushed reinforcements there.

Reports from Holland indicate that the Germans are preparing to evacuate Ostend, and are making extensive preparations in Antwerp, as though anticipating a siege there.

The allies have been successful in fierce fighting in the vicinity of Lille.

That the German advance along the Channel coast is well over the Yser river at a point between Dixmude and Nieuport, but has been unable to make any further progress, is the result of the great German drive in Flanders. Reports from other parts of the 300-mile front are entirely favorable to the allies, and it is said now that the French have succeeded in throwing large masses of troops into the Argonne forest, penetrating as far as the Village of Metricourt, effectually splitting the armies of the German crown prince on the east of the Argonne and the forces of the Duke of Wuertemberg on the west.

In spite of the Homeric efforts of the Kaiser's armies, the drive southward from Flanders to Dunkirk and Calais seems destined to perish midway, after a terrible loss of life, and with nothing to show for the enterprise, not even a moral advantage. First the Belgians and latterly the Belgians supported by British and French have frustrated each new attempt to strike a decisive blow. The Flanders coast line from Ostend to the French border, for a distance of three miles inland, is free of the Germans, driven away from the ocean's fringe by the tremendous fire of the allied warships. But the invaders have planted artillery that commands every available approach for a flanking force from the naval contingent, and for the present a landing will not be attempted.

After ten days of the most stubborn fighting the Germans forced a passage of the Yser in the district lying from six to ten miles inland, and they are believed to hold the allied side of the stream for a stretch of about five miles. This, of course, was sufficient to permit bringing troops across in force. The final and successful assault of the Germans on the Belgian lines, when great masses of infantry and hundreds of heavy guns co-operated, is understood to have occurred early on Sunday morning.

With the Belgians falling back in good order and contesting every foot of the way, British reinforcements reached their lines by noon Sunday, when the defence immediately stiffened and halted. A few hours' later French infantry arrived in large numbers, and a re-offensive movement was started that has completely checked the German drive, and which has hemmed them in on two sides, with the River Yser behind and a solid defensive before them. A part of their forces are said to have been cut off by flying columns of French infantry, with a tremendous loss of life and many prisoners to the Germans. In fact, the number of killed and wounded in the great Flanders contest is far greater than either at the battle of the Aisne or the Marne. Sunday's conflicts were characterized by many bayonet charges, in which the French and British more than sustained their reputation, never failing to gain ground after their heart-breaking rushes in the face of a destroying fire from rifles and machine guns.

From Ypres to Roulers an action only less violent than that between Dixmude and Nieuport is under way. It is significant that all four of the towns named and all cardinal points, are held by the allies.

Lille is another vortex in the kaleidoscopic battle front. Here the Germans have fought with desperate resolution to hold the French advance but without reward. British and French troops hold many points of vantage around the city and every attempt to upset their progress has so far failed.

Armentieres also remains securely in the hands of the Franco-British and the Kaiser's commanders are fuming fruitlessly in an attempt to dislodge them. The town commands communication lines vital to the Germans and its occupation by the allies has stopped troop movements of vast importance.

STOPPED AT YSER

Germans Crossed River But Met With Severe Check From Solid Line of Troops

MADE NO PROGRESS

PARIS, Oct. 27. — The smashing tactics of the Germans along the North Sea coastline continued incessantly, when the big guns were turned on Nieuport, and the allies had to withstand constant attacks of masses of troops. Very little progress however, was made by the Germans yesterday, who were faced with the strongest resistance.

Sunday's crossing of the Yser apparently had only a moral effect as the Germans were confronted by solid lines of allied troops, and were prevented from advancing without overwhelming efforts further toward the Channel ports. The character of the country prohibits a rapid movement as the land is cut up by canals, and two strong series of defensive works separates them from Dunkirk.

The German infantry executed a number of night attacks, not only on the extreme wing but also in the vicinity of Lille, where they encountered a most obstinate resistance. The allies are displaying wonderful energy in this region. The commanders are sparing their men many hardships and are able to give constant reliefs to the troops on the firing line.

When they come from the frontier for a rest the troops are accommodated in the numerous villages scattered in the rear, where they seem to throw off all feeling engendered by the critical situation and play cards, dominoes and other games in the cafes until the bugles call them together for a further spell of fighting. Then they go forward cheerily to the inferno, where they must face the shrapnel and machine guns, bidding "so long" to their comrades, whose places they are taking.

Greenland's largest settlement has a population of 706.

Brindilla Is Allowed To Sail

LONDON, Oct. 27. — The British Government, satisfied after an examination of the innocence of the destination of her cargo, has ordered the release of the American oil tank steamer Brindilla, which will be permitted to proceed from Halifax to Alexandria. The question of the transfer of the vessel from the German flag to the flag of the United States will not be raised by the Government.

The Brindilla, which was carrying a cargo of illuminating oil, was seized by the British cruiser Carona on Oct 19.

PROVINCE OVERRIDDEN.

Dominion Charter Sufficient for License Says Privy Council.

TORONTO, Oct. 27.—What is regarded in Great Britain as well as in Canada, as one of the most important constitutional decisions handed down by the Privy Council since Confederation was received in Toronto yesterday. It involved the validity of provincial company licensing and incorporation laws. The two appeal cases, Deere v. Wharton, and Deere v. Duck, on which yesterday's decision was made, were fought out in July before the Privy Council. They had to do with an application for a license in British Columbia by the John Deere Plow Co., which has been operating in different parts of Canada under a Dominion charter. The license was refused by the Province of British Columbia, and the question arose whether or not the province could exclude a Dominion company from carrying on business within its boundaries. The Privy Council in its decision gave the company the right to operate in the province without having a provincial charter. The decision will have a marked effect on provincial revenue.

GEORGE STREET CHURCH WAS CROWDED TO HEAR DR. GORDON IN SPITE OF NASTY WEATHER

List of Very Interesting Questions Will Be Answered To-night—A Recital by Edouard Hesselberg at Half Past Seven.

LAST NIGHT'S ADDRESS

Mr. E. A. Weber, the chairman of the General Committee on Christian Citizenship Campaigns, has just returned from Ottawa, where he went on invitation of the Presbyterian Ministerial Association. He reports, that a special Citizenship Campaign, such as is being conducted in Peterborough at the present time, will be inaugurated in Ottawa, the Capital of the Dominion, beginning on Sunday evening, the 8th of November. The Presbyterian Churches of Ottawa are thoroughly interested in these campaigns, and are planning for great things. The meetings will be held in the Chalmer's Presbyterian Church, which is one of the largest churches in the City of Ottawa, and centrally located.

The meeting last evening, was held in the George Street Methodist Church, and in spite of the inclement weather, the edifice was crowded to the doors.

The programme for the evening, began with a musical recital by Mr. Edward Hesselberg. These selections by Mr. Hesselberg are highly appreciated by the music-loving people of Peterborough, and in compliances with numerous requests, Mr. Hesselberg, the Master Pianist, has consented to render nightly, short preliminary recitals, consisting of the best known works, by the most famous, Classic, Romantic and Modern composers of the pianaforte literature.

These recitals will commence at seven-thirty sharp, and last until seven-forty-five, at which time the regular programme of the Gordon Campaign will invariably begin. All musicians, music students and music-lovers are cordially invited, but are requested to be punctually on time.

The solos of to-night will include, Chopin, Vieuxtemps and Rubinstein.

Last evening, Mr. Albert E. Greenlaw, the coloured singer, rendered three selections, one of his own compositions entitled "Where the Sweetest Flowers Grow," and also two other selections entitled "A Clean Heart," and "Where Is My Wandering Boy To-night." The congregationed feelingly in the chorus of the last selection. To-night, Mr. Greenlaw will sing "The Heavenly Song," by Hamilton Gray, "There Is a Shout in the Camp," and a plantation melody entitled "Steal Away to Jesus."

Dr. Gordon answered the following questions last evening:

(1) What is the difference between Christianity and Religion?

(2) How can a woman have a happy home whose husband though a professed Christian, is wrapped up in himself?

(3) Why is it that Preachers have such a warm regard for the wealthy?

(4) What do you think of people sitting in Church for years, and never passing the time of day?

(5) Is it right for a business man to keep his store open so late on Saturday night, that the delivery man cannot get through before Sunday morning?

(6) Why did not God prevent this great calamity of war?

Dr. Gordon's subject last evening was "The Fashion Craze," or "The First Steps Downward in the Life of Shame."

(1) You are taking a step downward when you sacrifice the dignity of your womanhood, for the unquestionable glance of the passing crowd. Speaking with reference to the abnormal fashions in vogue during the past seven or ten years, Dr. Gordon said, "The world has seldom seen, in the matter of dress, such a manifestation of feminine immodesty, as we have witnessed during the past ten years. Our daughters have been dressed like the representatives of the underworld; our best girls in Canada and the United States, many of them, dressed in garments worn by the representatives of the underworld in the city of Paris. This should not be. The common sense of parents ought to be so strong as to prevent a repetition of that which we have seen and witnessed."

(2) You are taking a step downward when you dream of a life of ease. A lady of wealth and position, converted in one of Dwight L. Moodie's meetings, exclaimed: "I have only been a magnificent doll." The age in which we live is material. We are magnifying and worshipping the outer shell. We have forgotten the main thing, "Love, Truth, Light and Righteousness."

(3) You are taking a step downward when you associate with those who are morally inferior. John Wesley said in his early days, "I will associate with no one who will not help me on my way to Heaven." That spirit should dominate us to-day. If religion is anything it is everything. Either there is a God or there is not a God. The Bible is true or it is not true, and if we are convinced of a future life, we should live in the light of it.

(4) You are taking a step downward when you exercise in yourself, that which you condemn in others, and that, by the way, is the easiest thing to do. It is a dangerous thing to play with your conscience and to fool yourself by an unwise use of words. We sometimes speak of innocent flirtation, but there is no innocency in flirtation. Why not be brave enough to look ourselves right in the face and to know the truth of things?

(5) You are taking a step downward when you grow careless about you good name. The young woman who says, "I don't care what people say of me," is on exceedingly dangerous ground. Theodore Tildon, in the days of his decline and degeneration, remarked, "I never knew I had a reputation until I had lost it."

(6) Women are the greatest gamblers in the world. They gamble with fate, destiny, reputation, character and eternity.

(7) You take a step downward when ever you ignore the voice of your conscience. During a great revival in New York City, a business man, in a law suit, said to his lawyer, "Withdraw my case, I am in the wrong." Follow your conscience and believe, that the man who ignores his conscience or the woman either, will find in the end, that conscience is a rebuking monitor, and the worst enemy of the soul.

Dr. Gordon will speak this evening, on the subjects of "Mistakes in the Life of a Married Man." Before the address this evening, Dr. Gordon will answer the following questions.

(1) Is it right to go motoring on Sunday, if it does not interfere with church attendance?

(2) What is your opinion of card playing and dancing?

3) Is a woman justified, when it is not convenient to receive a social caller, to ask the servant to say, "I am not at home?"

(4) Do you believe in baptism by immersion.

(5) Should a man whose conduct is known to be grossly inconsistent, judging by church ideals, be selected to occupy five minutes introducing Dr. Gordon to the Christian Citizenship campaign meeting?

(6) Do you think that ratepayers should be expected to tolerate a teacher of either Public school or Collegiate, who is known as an ungodly man?

(7) Apart from all flippancy in religious belief, is not honest doubt and an earnest seeker after the truth, more worthy of the name of true godliness, than the professed creeds, to many who make no sincere effort to live a Christ-like life."

NOW IS YOUR CHANCE.

Arrangements Complete For Competition

The Stage Has Been Set for the Peterboro' County Ploughing Match

THE PRIZES

The stage has been set and all that is required now to ensure the success of the ploughing match to be held to-morrow on the farm of Mr. Sandy Matchett, Con. 16, Lot 19, Otonabee, near Stewart's Hall, is fine weather. The match has created wide interest throughout the County. Word having been received by the officers that a considerable number from a distance are expected to come to the City by train, and that they did not know how they would get out to the farm, the Executive have arranged with Blewett and Middleton to run a 'bus from their stables at half-past eight in the morning and at two in the afternoon. This will give business men in the City who would like to see the competition of the match without spending all day on the field, a chance to do so.

The Prizes.

It was at first announced that the Cup given by Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., was worth $50, but Mr. Burnham later made other arrangements whereby the Cup is really worth $80, and which he has already turned over to the County Council. Mr. J. A. Sexsmith, M.P., has contributed a $12 prize, which completes the prize list. All those who have contributed prizes have been invited to attend the match to-morrow and present their prizes in person to the successful competitors after the match is over. The contestants, judges and officers are to be entertained to dinner by Mr. Matchett. Permission has been granted by the directors to a caterer to erect a tent and attend to the wants of the public.

First Match in Years.

As this is the first match that has been held in Peterborough County for over twenty years, the art of fine ploughing has died down to such an extent that this year it is possible that there will not be as many competitors as there will be in future matches. Quite a number of farmers and their sons have signified their intention of attending to-morrow's match with the idea of learning some of the fine points of the game in order that they may compete next year. The entries already received ensure good competition in the men's class in sod and fair competition in the boys' class, in stubble.

Competition in the Men's Class in stubble and in the young men's class in sod is not likely to be very keen unless some entries are received by mail or are accepted by the judges, to-morrow. Any young men who have not yet entered and would like to, are advised to take their ploughs to-morrow as it is is quite possible the directors will accept their entries. The ground is in excellent condition for the match.

J. M. DRUMMOND, Clerk.

INFORMATION WANTED

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I understand that the concrete pavement on Chambers street costs between a half and a third less than asphalt pavement. I should like to ask our City Fathers to explain why more of it is not put down? I think that the ratepayers would be pleased to have it explained. I should like to know if there is any way of having our high taxes made smaller.

Yours truly,

RATEPAYER.

LONDON, October 27. — Armoured motor cars, equiped with machine guns, are now playing a part in the war, and have been most successful in dealing with small parties of German mounted troops.

LONDON, October 27. — Telegraphing about the fighting in Belgium, the correspondant of the Times in northern France, says:

"The enemy's most furious and most vigorous attack along the line of the Yser was at Ypres, where a quarter of a million Germans for five critical days were held back by the British forces. The artillery fire against the British in the trenches was terrible, churning up the earth and burying men by the dozens. Repeatedly the enemy's infantry advanced to within a few hundred yards but every time our men leaped from the trenches and went at them with the bayonet. The Germans have no relish for bayonet charges, and they fled, firing their rifles over their shoulders as they ran. Many hundreds were captured and thousands were killed and wounded. Still their shrapnel rained into the British trenches and fresh infantry took the places of the Germans who had been decimated. The situation grew more and more critical, and it seemed that the British were likely to be borne down by the sheer weight of numbers. Still they held on. Friday came at last, and with it the needed reinforcements. The position was saved, and the Germans fell back fifteen miles.

WASHINGTON, October 27. — Ambassador Chinda of Japan, has delivered a note from his government to the State Department, it was learned to-day, requesting that the German cruiser Geier be expelled from the port of Honolulu, where she recently put in for repairs. Steps to comply with the Japanese request were taken by the Government officials to-day. The Honolulu port authorities have been ordered to report whether the Geier is now seaworthy. If so, an order will be made, the officials state, that she depart immediately.

LONDON, October 27.—The general situation in France and Belgium is declared to be constantly improving, while the Germans are being held in the north the French have assumed the offensive all along their eastern frontier, and are striking hard blows against the Germans in Alsace-Lorraine; they are pressing forward against Metz. This is the first real offensive by the French on the east since the early days of the war, and it is declared at the military headquarters here to be of the highest significance. Meanwhile the fighting in the north continues uninterrupted, but with the allies' lines everywhere holding.

HOW "OAK HALL" PRACTISES ECONOMY

It's the Way They Have of Reducing Cost of Manufacturing

Six loaves of bread can be baked with the same heat that bakes one loaf.

The same principle applies to manufacturing. Take "Oak Hall" clothing, for example. The reason the Sanford Co. can turn out the first-class garments they do at the low prices they do, is because their output is so large, the cost of making goes down with the improved systems of making, which they introduce. As sales increase, the selling cost also goes down.

Naturally, we want to buy where we can get the best prices. Therefore watch the "Oak Hall" profit-sharing advertisements and economize.

IN MEMORIAM

JOHN WHITNALL.

On the 16th September, John Whitnall was killed in action in defence of his country.

The deceased solder was a private in the Royal Scots Fusiliers, 20 years of age. He leaves to mourn his loss his father, seven brothers and one sister, of whom Archie and William, and Ada (Mrs. Nichols), are resident in Peterborough. Frank and Herbert, two other brothers live in Toronto, Phillip at Niagara Falls, the remaining two—Stanley and Daniel—reside in the Old Country. The father also resides in England. The deceased soldier had done five years' duty in India, as well as two in South Africa. The sympathy of the readers of The Examiner will, we feel sure, be extended to those left to mourn his loss.

ENEMY IS DRIVEN BACK TO GERMAN SOIL

OLD ENEMIES NOW HELP EACH OTHER

After Centuries of Quarrelling, French and British Unite, Says Times

LONDON, Oct. 27. — The Times' Paris correspondent, says the imminent arrival of the Canadian troops in France, soon after the arrival of the Indians, furnishes the Temps with text for a comparison between the treaties concluded between France and Great Britain and France and Germany. The annexation of Alsace Lorraine could not be forgiven by France, but the loss of India and Canada has not inflicted a lasting blow to French dignity and equilibrium. To-day, thanks to British fair play, the two nations live equally in Canada, and in France, English and Canadians are fighting for the allied mother countries.

"There is no more beautiful lesson" says the Temps, "perhaps no more beautiful chapter in the annals of civilized nations than this definitive reconciliation after centuries of quarrelling. It was prepared by equal, parallel development of two liberal civilization, whereas Germany, enslaved by federal Prussia militarising her universities, and worshipping force, has retrograded towards barbarism."

A LUMBERMAN'S OPINION

"I was troubled with palpitation of the heart and sleeplessness," writes Mr. Wm. Pritchard, Lumber Inspector, Lumsden Mills, Ont., "and used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with very great benefit, as my whole system was strengthened and built up." Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new, rich blood and restores the feeble wasted nerve cells.

MUST LOSE ITS MAGIC.

The London Times said recently: "The Germans have spent their first advantage, but still are living on it. That is why they remain in France and Belgium and why the citizens of Berlin still believe in victory. But even for them the German army soon must lose its magic, as already it has lost it for us."

Allies Win New Ground Near Nancy

For the First Time Since the War the Enemy Has Been Forced Back of His Border—Joffre's Plan Well Executed

ADVANCE IN NORTH

PARIS, Oct. 27.—In a laconic announcement of less than twenty words the French War Office to-night made known a gain by the allies which is weighty with significance. After declaring that "there is nothing to announce," the communique makes the exception of "some progress on our part in the region to the south of Dixmuude."

Taken in connection with unofficial details of the fighting in the inferno which has come to be known as the battle of Flanders, publication of which was not permissible until the official announcement of the completion of the manoeuvre was made, this bare declaration gains vast importance.

Pressure on North Removed.

To-day, by a supreme rally, the Belgians, British and French, under orders from General Joffre to concentrate the forces of their attack on the left flank position of the enemy, succeeded in driving through and establishing themselves in a position to direct a deadly crossfire from the flank, which is calculated to relieve the pressure against the allied positions to the north.

At the extreme eastern end of the battle front the allies to-day reported another significant victory.

Driven Back to German Soil.

Here, in the region beyond Nancy, the German line, which for six weeks has been stretched without appreciably materially clear across France, has broken at last. The French official statement issued in the afternoon says the invaders were driven back across the border on to German soil.

The victory for which the French have been striving for weeks was gained between the forests of Besange and Parroy, and the Germans are now reported to be falling back upon Metz.

The German army which has forced its way to St. Mihiel, now held by the enemy, is greatly endangered by this movement. Further progress by the French in this direction will cause the Germans to retreat to escape being enveloped. Also, it would effectively relieve Verdun, as the forces bombarding this fortress would be left before it without support.

Terrific Battle Continues.

But whatever the gains in this eastern field, the main issue of the war in France and Belgium will be fought out where the greatest numbers of troops are massed. And this is on the field in northwest Belgium.

Here the terrific battle rages with undiminished vigour. About Ypres the fighting has been fully as furious as that from Nieuport to Dixmude, and west of Roulers the destruction of life and property has been frightful.

Each Side Feels its Way.

A statement issued by the Official Press Bureau to-day indicates how slowly each side must feel its way among the hundreds of little Belgian villages. To go forward without careful reconnoitring would be extremely perilous, as it never is known whether a village is merely occupied with harmless citizens or is held by armed forces ready to attack.

The Germans are continuing to send large masses of troops to the westward and the southwestward, according to a despatch from Terneusen, Holland, published in the Amsterdam Courant to-day. A message to this effect has been sent to London by the Amsterdam correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Company.

The Terneusen message says further that the allies who approached Thielt Saturday were repulsed by fresh German troops. Sunday 10,000 Austrians arrived in Ghent where only a few Germans remain.

CHASE GERMAN AVIATORS.

PARIS, Oct. 27.—Three German aeroplanes yesterday reconnoitered the region of Senlis, department of Oise, and then crossed the allies' lines toward Paris. They were prevented from reaching the region of the capital, however, through the vigilance of the aerial guard.

NEW TERROR FOR AIRMEN.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—The new British gun used for the first time in recent days, says the correspondent of the Times in northern France, has provided a fresh terror for German airmen. The gun succeeds in finding its target with great facility.

PARIS, Oct. 27.—In a message from Lisbon, sent by way of Madrid, the correspondent of the Havas Agency says:

"Despatches received here say that German troops have forcibly invaded the Portuguese province of Angola, West Africa.

"Preparations are being made to immediately despatch warships and troops from Portugal to Angola."

VICTORY IS APPARENTLY REMOTE YET

London Expert Says Germans Have Failed to Pierce Allies' Centre But the German Right is Intact

HILLAIRE BELLOC'S VIEWS

Hillaire Belloc, of London, reported to be the foremost military writer in Europe, says—

The German army has repeatedly tried to pierce the French centre, but the French army has never even attempted to pierce the German centre, for the very good reason that the German centre now occupies a position, prepared long in advance, selected with great sagacity and foresight and almost impregnable against attack.

The hope of victory by the allies depends upon the result of the effort to turn the right or the left flank of the enemy. The German left flank is difficult to attack, because of the forest of the Argonne. The strategy and effort of the allies has therefore been directed against the western end of the line the right wing commanded by General Von Kluk.

Whenever the reader hears of slight advances or retreats here and there, he should repeat to himself this fundamental military rule:—Of two opponents in arms, one has not defeated the other until he has forced that other to a decisive engagement. A decisive engagement is not achieved until the army of one of the two opponents is either pierced or enveloped.

Best of Positions.

The Germans have studied and fallen back upon one of the best defensive positions in western Europe and are there conducting the battle of the Aisne.

The position which the German centre (with the exception of that of the Crown Prince, isolated beyond Argonne upon the extreme left), took up is parallel to the River Aisne, and it follows the first ridge to the north of that river. This line of heights is nowhere more than five miles from the river, and nowhere less than three miles. It is a good deal cut up along its front by ravines, for the northern brooks tributary to the Aisne run in deep little trenches with deep sides, which greatly aid its defence by their steepness as also by their wooded slopes.

The eastern end of this German army centre crosses the River Aisne near Neuchatel and runs along a low, flat ridge admirably formed for artillery and parallel to the course of the River Suippe. This second or eastern section of the German defensive line, if it is properly linked up with the Crown Prince's army on the east, is not less than forty miles long.

No Decision Yet.

You have, then, the German armies taking up this defensive line, certainly sixty—more probably over seventy—miles in length, and awaiting the assault of the allies. They were unable to press their own attack against the allies' centre (according to the original German programme), because a part of their forces had to be diverted to relieve severe pressure against General Von Kluk's right wing.

So at the moment, after the longest battle in the world's history, both sides have failed in forcing the enemy to a decision. The Germans have failed in their supreme object of piercing the allies' centre, and the allies have failed in their supreme object of turning the German right wing.

Retreat Not Defeat.

If the allies should succeed in doing this—and they are still trying; while German attacks on the allies centre have ceased—it will not mean German defeat, necessarily; it will only mean that the entire German line must again fall back, including its centre from its present impregnable position, to or near the French frontier.

In the meantime it must be remembered that the German armies are intact, that they have lost little in prisoners or guns —nothing comparable to what the allies lost in their retreat from the Belgian frontier—and that they are still in numbers nearly equal to their opponents.

Fine Type of Bungalow an Addition to Peterboro' Homes

One of the finest types of American bungalows erected in Peterborough is a new house built for Mr. and Mrs. R. V. Copping at the corner of Aberdeen Avenue and Aylmer Street. It is a short distance north-west of the Normal school and stands out prominently in that district of good homes. On the front of the house facing the west side, the roof comes down over the usually wide verandah which swings around to the south side. The floors throughout are of hardwood and the whole house except the bedrooms are finished in quartered oak, wax polished.

The stairway, banisters and posts are of the same material. The bedrooms are finished in white enamelled wood and the large living room is in birch mahogany. The latter opens out on a conservatory on the west side of the house. Upstairs a large sun room has been built in over the verandah on the west side. It is a splendid room, with a flood of light coming through the ample windows. On the opposite wall, glass doors open into the hall at the top of the stairs. In every respect the house is built upon substantial lines. The outside brick is of special character and heavier than the ordinary house bricks. In the clothes rooms the hooks are of solid brass, not the more generally used brass plated material. The dining room is finished and equipped with rich effect. The laundry, furnace and other rooms in the basement involve the latest ideas in house building. This bungalow was erected by Mr. Chas. Huffman who, during the past seven years has constructed about sixty houses in Peterborough, all of them of the better class.

NEW REVOLT IN S. AFRICA BY DE WET

Some Disaffection in the Orange Free State and Western Transvaal —Stern Measures Promised

COMMANDOES IN FIELD

LONDON, Oct. 27.—Another rebellion has broken out in South Africa. General Christian de Wet and General Christian Frederick Beyers have taken the lead of the rebels in the Orange River Colony and Western Transvaal. Having put down the rebellion in the northern province of Cape Colony led by Lieut.-Col. Maritz, the Government of the Union of South Africa is now faced by the more serious risings under Generals de Wet and Beyers, the latter of whom resigned the command of the Union forces when Premier Botha decided to take up arms against Germany.

According to an official report received to-day, armed rebellious commandoes are already in existence; the town of Heilbron in the northern part of the Orange River Colony, has been seized and the Government officials have been taken prisoners, while a train has been stopped and armed citizens of the defence force have been taken from it and disarmed.

The Union Government has issued a proclamation to the people, announcing these events and explaining that, although it was aware of the rebellious preparations, it had been taking steps to preserve peace without bloodshed.

Will Use Firm Hand.

"Now," continues the proclamation, "the duty of the Government is clear. It is determined to deal with the matter with a firm hand, and is taking all necessary steps to this end. The very great majority of citizens in every province of the Union are thoroughly loyal and detest the very idea of rebellion. When they are aware of the situation they will undoubtedly give the Government every assistance in restoring order, and will carefully abstain from giving the rebellious movement any encouragement or support."

The citizens are called upon to be on the alert and give the Government information and assistance, and those who have been guilty of disobedience under the Defence Act are advised that no action will be taken against them if the remain quietly at home.

General de Wet is the cavalry leader who gave the British so much trouble in the South African War. It was announced that he had offered his services to Britain. Early in October he tried to speak at a meeting held in protest of the Government's action in regard to the present war, but was prevented from doing so by a demonstration of sympathizers of Premier Louis Botha. Brig.-Gen. Beyers was also a noted figure in the South African War.

Heavy Losses Along Vistula

Russians and Germans Engage in Frequent Encounters With Bayonets Carnage is Appalling

PETROGRAD, Oct. 27.—The Russians are now engaged in a constant succession of hand-to-hand battles, with the columns falling back from the Vistula. The main strength of these now extends over an irregular line from the Radom woods westward in the direction of Piotrkow and upwards into the woods south of Rawa.

The bulk of the heavy casualities comes from bayonet fighting in the deserted villages where the Germans are seeking to establish themselves. From the nature of the operations now in progress it is forseen that there would be several days of appalling casualities.

The Russians greatly outnumbered the retreating columns, whose wings are constantly threatened by the approach of the Russians.

German Officers Discard Sword as Useless in War

AIX-LA-CHAPELLE, Oct. 27—German officers are throwing away their swords. The high percentage of fallen officers on the German side is being attributed to the carrying of the weapon, which marks them as officers and makes them targets for concentrated fire.

It is all very nice and grand to lead your company in a storm upon the enemy with sword in hand, but it marks you for death," said a major to me. "We have paid heavy toll to the sword so far as the infantry is concerned. When the charge is sounded, the officers of a company spring forward with flashing blade in hand to lead their men. The gleam of the sword marks them as officers and the enemy immediately concentrates his fire upon them.

Formerly only Uhlans carried lances, but practically the entire German cavalry has now been equipped with them. That explains why one never reads or hears of any other cavalry patrols in Belgium except Uhlans. It is said that even the cavalry officers, recognizing the psychological effect of the lance and the fact that it is a better weapon than the sword, have added the lance to their equipment, consisting of a sword and pistol.

"DARKNESS AND DAWN"

By Geo. Allan England

From moment to moment he fired. He paused a few seconds to jack a fresh cartridge-clip into the automatic.

"Thank God I've got a belt full of ammunition!" thought he, and again smashed along with the two Merucaans.

All at once a formidable roar gave them pause.

Hollow, booming, deep, yet rising to a wold shriek of rage and horrid pratallay, the beast-cry itself flung through the jungle.

And, following it, they heard again that muffled drumming, as though gigantic fists were playing a tremendous tambour in the darkness.

"Master!" whispered Zangamon, recoiling a step. "O, Kromno, what is that?"

"Never have we heard such in our place, added Bremilu, gripping his axe tighter. "If that a man-cry or the cry of a beast—one of the beasts you told us of, that we have never seen?"

"Both! A man-beast! Kill! Kill!"

Now, Allan, sure of his direction, took the lead. No longer he flashed the light, and only once more he called: "Beatrice! O Beatrice! We're coming!"

Again he heard her cry, but suddenly it died as though swiftly choked in her very throat. Allan spat a blasphemy and surged on.

The two barbarians followed, peering with those strange, pinkish eyes of theirs, courageous still, yet utterly at a loss to know what manner of thing they were now drawing near.

They burst through a thicket, waded a marshy swale and went splashing, staggering, and slipping among tufts of coarse and knife-edged grasses the haunt of unknown venomous reptiles.

Up a slope they ran; and now, all at once the roar burst forth again close at hand, a rending tumult, wild, earth-shaking, inexpressibly terrible.

All three stopped.

"Beatrice! Are you there? Answer!" shouted Stern.

Silence, save for a peculiar mumbling shuffle among the deeper shadows of a fern-tree thicket.

"Beatrice!"

No answer. With a groan Allan shot his light toward the thicket. He seemed to distinguish something moving. To his ears now came a sound of twigs and brushwood snapping.

Absolutely void of fear he pressed forwarr, and the two colonists with him, their weapons ready. Stern held his revolver poised for instant action. His heart was hammering, and his breath surged pantingly; but within him his consciousness and soul lay calm.

For he knew one of two things were now to happen. Either that beast ahead there in the gloom, or he, must die.

CHAPTER XV.
IN THE GRIP OF TERROR.

As the three pursuers steadily advanced, the thing roared once again, and again they heard the hammering, drumming boom. Zangamon whispered some unintelligible phrase.

Allan proected the light forward again, and at sight of a moving mass, vague and intangible, among the gigantic fronds, levelled his automatic.

But on the instant Bremilu seized his arm.

"O master! Do not throw the fire of death!" he warned. "You cannot see, but we can! Do not throw the fire!"

"Why not? What is that thing?"

"It seems a man, yet it is different, master. It is all hair, and very thick and strong, and hideous! Do not shoot, O Kromno!"

"Why not?"

"Behold! That strange man-thing holds thewoman Beatrice in his left arm. Of a truth, you may kill her, and not the enemy."

Allan steadied himself against a palm. His brain seemd whirling, and for a moment all grew vague and like a dream.

She was there—Beatrice was there, and they could see her. There, in the clutches of some monster, horrible, and foul! Living yet? Dead? "Tell me! Does shelive?"

"We cannot say, O Kromno. But do not shoot. We will creep close—we, ourselves, will slay, and never touch the woman."

"No, No! If you do he'll strangle her—provided she still lives! Don't go! Wait! Let me think a second."

With a tremendous effort Allan mastered himself. The situation far surpassed in horror, any he had ever known.

There not a hundred yards distant in the dense blackness was Beatrice, in the grip of some unknown and hideous creature. Advance, Allan dared not, lest the creature rend her to tatters. Shoot, he dared not.

Yet something must be done, and quickly, for every second, every fraction of a second, was golden. The merest acident might now mean live or death—life, if the girl still lived!

"Zangamon!"

"Yea, master?"

"Be very bold! Do my bidding!"

"Speak only the word, Kromno, and I obey!"

"Go, then, very quickly, very quietly, to the other side of these great growing things—these trees, we call them. Then call, so that this thing shall turn towards you. Thus, I may shoot, and perhaps not kill the woman. It is the only way!"

"I hear, master. I go!"

Allan and Bremilu waited, while from the thicket came, at intervals, the savage snuffing, with now and then a grumbling mutter.

All at once a call sounded from far ahead.

"Come!" commanded Allan. Together he and Bremilu crept through the jungle toward the thicket.

Wide-eyed, yet seeing almost nothing, Allan crawled noiselessly, automatic in hand. The Merucaan slid along, silent as an Apache.

"Tell me if you see the thing again—if you see it turn!" whispered Stern. "Tell me, for you can see."

Now the distance was cut in half; now only a third of it remained. Before Stern it seemed a fathomless pit of black was opening. Under the close-woven arches of the giant fern-trees, the night was impenetrable.

And as yet he dared not dart the light beam into that pit of darkness, for fear of precipitating an unthinkable tragedy—if indeed the horror had not already been consummated.

But now Bremilu gripped his arm. Afar on the other side of the thicket they heard a singular commotion, cries, shouts, and the vigorous beating of the fern trees.

"The thing has turned, master!" the Merucaan exclaimed, at Allan's side. "Now throw the fire-death! Etvur! Quickly, throw!"

Stern swept the thicket with his beam.

"Ah! There—there!"

The light caught a moving, hairy mass of brown—a huge, squat, terrible creature, its back now toward them. At one side Stern saw a vague blackness—the long, unbound hair of Beatrice!

He glimpsed a white arm dangling limply, and in his breast the heart flamed at white-heat of rage and passion.

But his hand was steel. Never in his life had he drawn so fine a bead.

"Hold the light for me!" he whispered, pasing it to his companion. "I want both hands for this!"

Bremilu held the beam true, blinking strangely with his pink eyes. Stern, resting his pistol hand in the hollow of his left elbow, sighted true.

"Oh, God—if there be any God—speed the shot true!" he prayed, and fired.

A hideous yell, ripping the night to spreds, burst in a raw and rising discord through the forest—a scream as of a damned soul flung upon the brimstone.

Then, as he glimpsed the white arm falling and knew the thing had loosed its grip, the light died. Bremilu, starting at the sudden discharge close to his ear, ahd pressed the ivory button.

Stern snatched for the flash-lamp, fumbled it, and dropped it there among the lush growths underfoot.

Before he could more than stop to feel for it a heavy crash through the wood told that the thing was charging.

With bubbling yells it came, trampling the undergrowth, drumming on its huge breast, gibbering with demoniac rage and pain—came swiftly, like the terrific things that people nightmares.

Behind it, shouts echoed. Stern heard the voice of Zangamon as, spear in hand, the Merucaan pursued.

He raised his revolver once more, but dared not fire.

Yet only an instant he hesitated, in the fear of killing Zanzamon.

For, quick-looming through the darknes, a huge bulk, panting, snarling, chattering, sprang—an avalanche of muscle, bone, fur, mad with murder-rage.

Crack! spoke the automatic, point-blank at this rushing horror, this blacker shadow in the blackness.

The fire-stab revealed a grinning white-fanged face close to his own, and clutching hands, and terrible, thick, hairy arms.

Then something hurled itself on Stern:-something bore him backward—something beside which his strength was as a baby's—something vast, irresistible, hideous beyond all telling.

Stern felt the flesh of his left arm ripped up. Crushed, douzled, impotent, he fell.

And at his throat long fingers clutched. A fetid, stinking breath gushed hot upon his face. He heard the raving chatter of ivories, snapping to rend him.

Up sprang another shadow. High it swung a weapon. The blow thudded hollow, smashing, annihilating.

Hot liquid gushed over Allan's hand as he sought to beat the monster back.

Then, fair upon him, fell a crushing weight.

Swooning, he knew no more.

Copeland's Cure For Consumption
WINS CONFIDENCE BY ITS WONDERFUL CURATIVE POWERS.
MR. W. R. COPELAND,
Dear Sir—Now that I am well and strong again, I write to state that the fact I am alive today witnesses to the merit of your medicine.
My doctor, a specialist, said that I had the worst kind of consumption and that it was impossible for me to live. He gave me only eight to ten days before the disease would terminate fatally. He also said that it was no use in treating me, as I was too far gone.
I was left to die, but a friend or mine told me about your medicine and procured me a bottle. Without much hope, I tried it. It did wonders. First the weakening perspiration stopped and the food I took stayed in the stomach. After a second bottle, I commenced to regain my appetite and was up in a few days of the time that the doctor said I should die. Five weeks later I was at work and have been working ever since.
I wish everyone could know the worth of your medicine, especially those afflicted with consumption as I was, for I undoubtedly owe my life to its use. I will at all times cheerfully answer any correspondence, and you are at liberty to publish this letter if you think it will help to recommend your medicine to others. I remain, Gratefully yours,
DAVID WARNOCK, Street Car Conductor, 202 Withrow Ave., Toronto.
The remarkable power of this medicine marks it as one of the greatest discoveries of this century. Its work is only just started, but it is safe to say that its reputation will grow world-wide.
It is a blessing, as all who have used it testify. To the real "down-and-out" consumptive, the chronic sufferers from bronchial and lung troubles—it is something more than a blessing. To them it means the difference between happiness and misery, and sometimes life instead of a grave.
It is a medicine that is honest. No false claims are made for it. It is good, most beneficially good for the ailments specified above. These, even consumption, it will tackle, fight and OVERCOME. If you have a bad cough or cold—take this medicine. If you are a consumptive—take this medicine, for a greater medicine for consumption has NEVER BEEN KNOWN. If you are troubled with bronchitis and can't sleep at night for coughing—take this medicine. Your trouble will become a memory. If your throat or lungs are in any way weak or sensitive—take this medicine—and they will become strong and normal.
Cavities heal under its benign influence. Congestion is freed by its action to remove phlegm until the lungs are clear and work naturally without pain or distress. Emaciation, night sweats, poor appetite, inability to retain food in the stomach—all these effects of disease are mastered and the system built up under its curative and nourishing powers.
Ask your druggist, or send direct to us. Price, $1.00 per bottle. Testimonials of many others can be had on request. 2-14

Want Hydro Promises.

The Council met on Monday night, last. All the members were present, except Councillor Boylan.

A petition from forty-four ratepayers requested the Council to take immediate action to have the Hydro-Electric Commission fulfil its pledges along the lines of the enabling by-law, passed last January, and after the above had explained that the Commission had been requested by the Council and our local member to do so many times without result.

Comns. Scott and Curtis moved that the Clerk write Hon. Adam Beck requesting him as head of the Commission to see that a valuator be sent to Havelock to make a report on the value of the local distribution plant, and to work out the proposition authorized by the enabling by-law.

Question of Opportunity.

Dr. Holderoft, Manager of the Electric Light Co., who was present, advised the Council that on account of the uncertain future of the Village, that the Company did not consider it good business to expend money in the developing of an auxiliary plant (as intended) to give the patrons a better service. At present the Company was giving as good a service as possible, considering the extremely low water. Some members of the Council thought that the street lights should be cut out, as citizens were advising such a course, but nothing was done in the matter.
